RADICALS MOVE TO PASS WEALTH SHARING TAXES

Want Congress Kept in Session.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 21.—[Special.]—Radicals in the senate today started a drive to keep congress in session until President Roosevelt's radical new "share-the-wealth" taxes are enacted.

Led by Senator Robert M. La Follette [Rad., Wis.], a small group of insurgents started circulating in the senate a petition asking that congress not adjourn until the new inheritance taxes and the increased income levies suggested by President Roosevelt are written in the statute books.

If a majority of the 96 senators sign the petition and back up their signatures with votes the insurgents will have demonstrated that they have the power to prevent adjournment of congress until their wishes are carried out.

May Win Agreement.

Should the radicals be able to rally to their support any group approaching a majority they may seek by obstructing administration measures in the senate to wring from the reluctant conservative Democrats an agreement that the drastic taxes are to be brought up at this session. The petition has no legal status under senate rules, but merely is an expression of opinion.

La Follette has the backing of Senators George W. Norris, Gerald P. Nye, Burton K. Wheeler, and Huey P. Long. All of them are radicals, and Long is loudly claiming that the President's plan is a steal from the Kingfish's "share-the-wealth" program.

Administration Seeks Delay.

Circulation of the petition began late this afternoon, and there was no definite indication of how many recruits the radical bloc may be able to enlist. Administration leaders in congress do not favor action on any taxes to redistribute wealth until next session, and, if they can hold their lines, probably will defeat the La Follette move.

President Roosevelt's position on the immediate enactment of his inheritance and income tax plans still remains ambiguous. Mr. Roosevelt has made no statement. White House aids have hinted that he is willing to let the tax scheme wait until 1936, even though it is a presidential year. Leaders in congress, although admittedly befogged, think the President will not push the taxes at once.

Desires Bonds to Be Taxed.

On one part of his program a constitutional amendment permitting taxation of tax exempt federal, state, and city bonds hereafter issued, President Roosevelt may desire initial action at this session.

Representative Hatton W. Sumners [Dem., Tex.], chairman of the house judiciary committee, said today that he understood Mr. Roosevelt wanted the amendment started through congress this session, since its ratification by the states may require some time.

Mr. Roosevelt has, however, told Senator Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.], chairman of the senate finance committee, that he does not want "share the wealth" taxes injected into the pending resolution to continue 500 million dollars' worth of nuisance taxes which otherwise would expire June 30.

Rider Plan is Dropped.

Announcement by Harrison of this desire of the President today forced Senator La Follette to start circulation of his petition against early adjournment. La Follette had originally planned to offer "share-the-wealth" taxes as a rider to the nuisance tax bill, but disclosure of Mr. Roosevelt's attitude foredoomed this strategy to failure.

An amusing by-play on the entire tax tangle took place today when the administration started trying to deflate Huey Long's claim that he was the original "share-the-wealth" man in the nation. The White House evidently inspired persons close to Mr. Roosevelt to announce anonymously that he had conceived his inheritance and income tax schemes in January, 1929, and outlined them in private conversations when governor of New York.

The entire Roosevelt tax scheme for redistributing wealth lay dormant, meanwhile, in the treasury department. Experts there have worked it out and could present it to congress on a moment's notice if President Roosevelt should decide that he wants action this session. Details of the plans, however, have been successfully hidden for months.

Dinner Guests of President Get a Ducking

BY WALTER TROHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New London, Conn., June 21.—[Special.]—Misfortune preceded dinner aboard the presidential yacht Sequoia tonight when two Harvard classmates of the President's youngest son, John, were hurled into the Thames river when a speed boat from the yacht capsized.

The youths were Eldredge Jackson and Thomas Husband, who were racing to the Sequoia to join the Roosevelt family at dinner. As they approached the Sequoia, where the President and Mrs. Roosevelt were awaiting them, waves churned up by a passing yacht overturned the tiny speed boat.

Rescued from Boat.

Before they had taken a dozen strokes a companion speed boat from the White House craft picked them up. After a change of clothes, given them by Mrs. Roosevelt from the wardrobe of her sons, the youths joined the presidential family at dinner as coast guard men began raising the sunken craft.

Today was the third time the President has failed to bring luck to his son, Franklin Jr., and the Harvard junior varsity crew. The Crimson shell in which Franklin pulled No. 4 oar was nosed out by four feet in a two mile race on the Thames by eight Yale oarsmen.

Seated on the referee's launch the President saw his son's crew off to a good start. For three-quarters of the distance the Crimson boat held the lead, but when the beat was speeded up on the stretch run the Yale crew was just four feet too good.

Defeated Three Times.

The President shared his son's chagrin when the blue flag of Yale was hoisted on the referee's launch. It was the second time this flag has been hoisted with the President as an observer, as Franklin rowed with the freshman crew last year when it was defeated by Yale. The present crew also lost recently to the Navy.

A varsity race for the championship of the Thames was called off late in the day when officials decided the Thames was too rough for the shells.

The President arrived here at daybreak after an overnight run from Washington. He left the train at 7:30 to board the Sequoia, which had been sent from Washington earlier in the week.

When the varsity race was postponed the President returned to the Sequoia for dinner with his family and a few friends. Late tonight he will return to the special train for a run to Hyde Park, N. Y., where he will pass the week-end.

CAPTAIN FIGHTING $50,000 FLAMES SEVERELY HURT

Fire Captain Edward Erickson, acting chief of the 18th battalion, was severely injured early this morning while fighting a $50,000 blaze which swept a two story brick factory building at 4246-48 Roosevelt road.

Capt. Erickson, one of those who answered a 4-11 alarm, was directing his men from the roof of the building when a skylight gave way under him. Fellow fire fighters rescued him, and he was taken to St. Anthony's hospital.

Physicians said he had suffered severe loss of blood due to severing of an artery in his left leg.

The fire was discovered by Detective Edward McGurn of the detective bureau, who was passing the building on his way home. It started, apparently, in the portion occupied by the Modern Equipment Co., makers of plumbing supplies, on the second floor. The first floor is occupied by the Ribaysen Products company, steel stamp supply manufacturers.

Despite the early hour, hundreds of spectators gathered to watch the fight against the blaze, and trafic was halted along Roosevelt road.

Burglar Clubs Girl in Home of N.U. Dean

Miss Helen Ellis, 25 years old, maid in the home of Ralph Heilman, dean of the Northwestern university school of commerce, 731 Clinton place, Evanston, was beaten with a hammer and severely injured yesterday by a colored burglar who invaded the home. He escaped, but Evanston police said they believed they knew his name and expected to arrest him.

Miss Ellis, who was graduated in May from Berea college, Berea, Ky., suffered several deep cuts on her head. When she was examined at the Evanston hospital it was said she had suffered a concussion but not a fracture of the skull.

Mrs. Heilman at Home.

Mrs. Heilman, wife of the dean, was upstairs at the time of the attack. Suddenly she heard a scream from the lower floor.

She ran to the stairway and saw a colored man standing over Miss Ellis and striking her with a hammer. Hearing Mrs. Heilman, the intruder fled, taking Mrs. Heilman's purse.

An hour later the purse was thrown back into the home through an open door. Only $10 had been taken from it and $16 left in another compartment.

Three Suspects Seized.

Three colored men, brothers, were arrested by Evanston police last night and are to viewed today by Mrs. Heilman and by Miss Ellis if she is sufficiently recovered.

Another clew involved the search for a Ford V-8 sedan which was stolen by a colored man at Eastwood avenue and Central street, in Evanston. The owner, Mrs. E. J. Driscoll, 2129 Central Park avenue, Evanston, told police she caught only a glimpse of the thief as he drove away.

ADMITS RAPING AND SLAYING PEORIA GIRL, 19

Peoria, Ill., June 22 [Saturday].—(AP)—Acting Chief of Police Fred Nussbaum announced early today that Gerald Thompson, 25 years old, of suburban Peoria Heights confessed to the slaying of Miss Mildred Hallmark, 19, Peoria, last Sunday night. Miss Hallmark was criminally attacked before she died. Nussbaum said Thompson confessed.

The reported confession quoted Thompson as saying he forced the girl into his automobile as she was changing street cars, striking her with his fist to silence her.

He drove to the Springdale cemetery at the northeast city limit, the confession alleged, and there struck her again when she revived, attacked her and left her body in a ditch.

Thompson is employed by the Caterpillar Tractor company here.

SWEITZER GETS ONE MONTH TO PLAN DEFENSE

Ex-Treasurer Posts $10,000 Bond.

Preliminary motions in the trial of Robert M. Sweitzer, ousted county treasurer, on a charge of withholding public funds, must be filed and ready for argument by July 22. Defense and prosecution reached this agreement yesterday after the case had been assigned to Judge E. I. Frankhauser by Chief Justice Denis E. Sullivan in the Criminal court.

Sweitzer appeared at the Criminal Court building yesterday morning on the indictment returned against him by the grand jury on Thursday. He entered a plea of not guilty to the charge that he failed to turn over more than $414,129 to his successor, Michael J. Flynn, when he retired as county clerk last December after 24 years in that position. He was then released on $10,000 surety bond provided by the Maryland Casualty company.

Attorney Waits at Door.

Attorney I. Harvey Levinson, Sweitzer's attorney, was waiting at the front door of the court building with Thomas J. Bowler, clerk of the Criminal court, when his client arrived. A taxi drew to the curb and Sweitzer, a technical fugitive from justice since the indictment was returned late Thursday afternoon, stepped to the sidewalk.

He accepted the effusive greetings of Clerk Bowler and then went into the building to face a barrage of photographers' flashlights. Attired in a new straw hat and natty blue suit, Sweitzer nevertheless did not appear cheerful.

He turned a haggard face to the cameras and forced a smile as the flashlights flared. There was a slight delay until bailifs found Deputy Sherif Peter Agriostathes, who had the capias issued for Sweitzer's arrest on Thursday.

Holds An Informal Reception.

A second informal reception was held as Sweitzer's friends slapped him on the back and shook hands when he entered the courtroom of Chief Justice Sullivan. He sat uneasily on a courtroom bench as Judge Sullivan carried on a conference in chambers.

"No, boys, I haven't a thing to say," Sweitzer told reporters, "not a thing. I'm leaving the matter of trial and all plans up to my lawyer. I'll do what he tells me."

When the case was called Sweitzer stepped to the bench as spectators and lawyers crowded around him.

Attorney Levinson asked for a postponement in the arraignment in order that he might decide what preliminary motions to make. Judge Sullivan explained that the usual procedure was to have a formal arraignment and then withdraw the plea when motions are made. Legally no plea may be on the record when preliminary motions are made.

Declares He's Not Guilty.

"Robert M. Sweitzer," the clerk droned. "The June grand jury of 1935 has indicted you for withholding public funds. Are you guilty or not guilty?"

Sweitzer threw back his shoulders and his face flushed as he drew the full dramatic value from his plea.

"Not guilty," he said.

Judge Sullivan then assigned the case to Judge Frankhauser. Levinson, Assistant State's Attorneys Marshall V. Kearney and Leslie Salter, the defendant and attending spectators trooped into Judge Frankhauser's court.

Sweitzer dropped into a bench at the rear of the room. His attorney stepped forward and notified Judge Frankhauser that he had been assigned to the case.

"I'd like to have 30 days in which to study the indictment," Attorney Levinson told the court.

Agrees to "Reasonable Time."

"I think he is entitled to a reasonable time," Prosecutor Salter said, "but I believe a month is a little longer than needed."

After a conference the prosecution agreed with Levinson that he should be given a deadline of July 22, but that he should file and argue preliminary motions before that time if possible. Judge Frankhauser assured the attorneys that he would not take a vacation before the end of July in order to dispose of the preliminary hearings.

"What are you going to do now?" Sweitzer was asked at the conclusion of the hearing.

"I'm going downtown and take care of my work," he replied as he left the building.

The capias for Sweitzer's arrest was issued Thursday, but he remained in seclusion Thursday night and evaded the deputy sherif sent to serve the arrest order.

Jury Convicts Dave Barry of Bank Loot Plot

Dave [Long Count] Barry, who refereed the second Dempsey-Tunney fight in Chicago, and Abraham Karatz, former St. Paul attorney, were found guilty of conspiracy to embezzle yesterday by a jury in Judge Michael Feinberg's Criminal court. They were charged with taking $54,473 from the Amalgamated Trust and Savings bank, 111 West Jackson boulevard.

The jury fixed Karatz's punishment at one to five years in the penitentiary and recommended that he be fined $2,000, the maximum penalty for the crime. In Barry's case the jurors exercised their prerogative in such cases and left determination of the exact punishment to the judge.

Will Rule on Case Friday.

The maximum punishment under such a verdict, recognized as a recommendation of leniency, is one year in the Bridewell or county jail and a fine of $2,000. Judge Feinberg announced that he would rule on Barry's case next Friday.

Assistant State's Attorney Thomas Dodd Healy charged during the trial that the looting of the bank was only the first step in the conspiracy of the defendants. They planned, the prosecutor said, to use the bank money to acquire the Abraham Lincoln Life Insurance company of Springfield, Ill., and then to load this company with stolen securities.

The alleged ringleader of the plot, Joseph Baiata, former banker and ex-convict, pleaded guilty to the embezzlement charge in February and was sentenced to serve one to ten years in the penitentiary.

Bond Raised to $20,000.

After denying motions for a new trial for both defendants yesterday, Judge Feinberg raised Karatz's bond to $20,000, ordered him taken into custody, and allowed him until July 22 to perfect an appeal to the state Supreme court.

Barry, who had characterized himself as "a boob" during his testimony, raised shaking hands as the judge called him to the bench. He asked, in a trembling voice, if he might say something.

Granted the privilege, Barry said that his attorney, who was not present, had not defended him as he should have been defended.

"Gullible as Child of 10."

"You have pictured yourself as gullible as a child of ten," the judge told him. "Whether you are mentally that kind of individual is a matter to be decided. It is strange how a man of your background, education, and knowledge of worldly affairs could be involved in such a matter. Frankly, I do not know what your punishment should be at this time. I defer sentence for one week."

The plot in which Barry engaged was one of the most sensational ever uncovered here. Baiata conceived the idea, with Karatz, of purchasing the controling stock of the Abraham Lincoln Life Insurance company. With an investment of $400,000 they could gain control of assets of $13,000,000.

Clerk in Bank Is Tool.

They found a young clerk in the Amalgamated bank and persuaded and threatened him alternately to pass their worthless checks through. This clerk, Otto Van Derck, went along with the plot for months. The first payment of $25,000 for the insurance stock was made with money thus stolen.

Later, however, when an attempt was made by the promoters to draw $25,000 of the insurance company's funds to pay a second instalment on the purchase price, the plot came to an abrupt end. State Insurance Director Ernest Palmer had placed an inspector in the company offices to see that Baiata's creatures could not juggle the funds. The withdrawal was halted and a little later young Van Derck, questioned, disclosed that he had aided in swindling the bank.

His interviews with Baiata and Barry and Karatz, he disclosed, were all in the Barry saloon on West Madison street.

Federal Agent Tells of Abduction.

Tacoma, Wash., June 21.—(AP)—Harmon Waley, 24, was sentenced to 45 years in prison today upon his plea of guilty in the $200,000 George Weyerhaeuser abduction.

His 19 year old wife also pleaded guilty, but Federal Judge E. E. Cushman rejected her plea and ordered further consideration of her case.

Waley, an ex-convict, refused to talk for himself but made a desperate last minute appeal in behalf of his wife, asserting she knew nothing of the abduction until the third day the 9 year old timber heir was in Waley's hands.

Sentenced Under "Lindy Law."

A life sentence could have been imposed on Waley, but Judge Cushman presumably considered the Waleys' confessions. The sentence was imposed under the "Lindbergh law."

Waley's plea also embraced a conspiracy count, under which he drew a two year sentence. The court ruled, however, that the sentences should run concurrently, making his total term 45 years. Federal officers said he would be eligible for parole after 15 years.

Another indictment charging mail fraud and extortion was left pending against him.

Bids Husband Farewell.

Two hours after their brief court appearance the Waleys bade a sorrowful farewell to each other in the office of United States Marshal A. J. Chitty. Then Mrs. Waley was whisked back to the county jail to await disposition of her case.

Waley was taken to McNeil Island federal prison after the farewell. There he will stay until the United States attorney general designates the penitentiary in which he must serve.

Mrs. Waley came from the marshal's office with eyes red and swollen, but calmly faced the crowd that jammed the corridors.

Some of the inside story of the government's operations to solve the case was unfolded by E. J. Connelley, a department of justice agent, the only witness at the court hearing.

"All I have to say is for my wife," Waley told the court when asked whether he had anything to say.

"Maybe you won't be here when her case is discussed," said the judge.

Waley Pleads for Wife.

"She never knew until the Sunday after the kidnaping [the timber heir was seized Friday, May 24] that we had the boy," Waley went on. "We were in a car and I told her we had kidnaped the boy.

"She rented the house in Spokane [the kidnap gang's hideout] without knowing about the kidnaping."

Stephen J. O'Brien, attorney appointed by the court to represent the couple, called attention to the youthfulness of the accused girl.

"She rented the house as charged in the indictment without knowing what it was for," said O'Brien. "She knew nothing of the kidnaping at the time."

Guilty Plea Rejected.

"On your statement," said Judge Cushman, "I refuse to accept her plea of guilty. I will not accept a plea so qualified. It will be set aside and the case put over until ten o'clock tomorrow morning."

Waley did not say whom he meant by "we" in his admissions about the abduction. Presumably he referred to William Mahan, alias Dainard, former convict implicated by the Waley confession.

Connelley testified the kidnaping was discussed by Waley and Mahan in Salt Lake City in March of this year and that Waley and Mahan came to Washington shortly afterward and spent some time in the vicinity of Raymond and Hoquiam.

The ransom note, which demanded $200,000 originally, was revised by Mahan, Connelley said, but Waley rewrote it.

Death Notice Stirs Plot.

Several cross state trips occupied Waley and Mahan until about May 18, when they rented an apartment in Seattle.

The notice in the papers of the death of John P. Weyerhaeuser Sr., the boy's grandfather, prompted them to choose that family for the "snatch," Connelley said, and they went to Tacoma to observe the habits of the Weyerhaeuser family.

Connelley said Mahan was the one who actually seized the Weyerhaeuser boy near the tennis courts of the Annie Wright seminary in Tacoma on May 24.

Bundling the boy into an automobile, Connelley said Waley and Mahan took him to a pit in the ground near Issaquah and chained him there.

Mahan remained on guard, Connelley testified, while Waley went to Tacoma and mailed the ransom note. Waley then went to Seattle and purchased food and blankets for the boy, who was kept in the hole in the ground until Saturday night, when he was moved to another pit, 20 miles south of Issaquah.

Sunday the boy was taken to Spokane and from there to the Idaho hills, then back to the house which had been rented in Spokane.

Mahan went to Seattle May 28 for his negotiations with John P. Weyerhaeuser Jr., father of the kidnaped boy, and when he received the $200,000 ransom on May 31 returned to Spokane.

The Waleys and Mahan then brought the boy back to a lean-to shack near Issaquah and released him with instructions to wait for his father.

Splitting the ransom money, the Waleys and Mahan separated after that, Connelley said, the Waleys going to Salt Lake where they were arrested when Mrs. Waley attempted to pass a ransom bill.

BOMBS DAMAGE ELGIN DAIRY AND GARY FISH STORE

For the second time within fifteen months, a bomb was exploded yesterday at the Elgin Home Dairy, Inc., 856 Preston avenue, Elgin, blowing in the front double doors, numerous windows, and doing damage estimated at $200.

George F. Abrahamson, owner of the concern, told police he could give no reason for the attack. Authorities were told that Abrahamson, who serves mostly the wholesale trade, buys his milk from farmers not affiliated with the Pure Milk association.

On March 9, 1934, a bomb was hurled through the window of the same plant, wrecking a portion of the interior.

Another bombing in the Chicago area was in Gary, where some $3,000 damage was caused by an explosion at the entrance of the Gary Wholesale Fish company, 17 West 7th avenue. The front of the building was wrecked, and a quantity of fish ruined by glass splinters. The owners of the market, Max Bubman and Mitchell Kahan, professed to know of no motive for the bombing.

REFUSE TO OUST ROOSEVELT'S SON FROM TEXAS CLUB

Dallas, Tex., June 21.—(AP)—Following a demonstration the Young Democrats of Dallas club tonight beat a resolution that would have removed Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, as a state executive of the body and uproariously went on record as approving President Roosevelt and his New Deal.

Denunciation of the resolution asking for young Roosevelt's removal as first vice president of the state organization because he was not a long time resident of Texas and allegedly was illegally elected rang through the packed meeting hall.

Speakers defended the New Deal and termed the action of an insurgent Democratic clique which sponsored the resolutions as "a direct slap at the President."

"It is a direct slap at President Roosevelt to unceremoniously kick his son out of the vice presidency of the state organization," roared Frank Wilson, executive member of the Dallas club. "That is not democratic in spirit."

ACTRESS MARRIES EARL KNOWN FOR HIS ODD ATTIRE

LONDON, June 21.—(AP)—A secret romance of the peerage and the stage was revealed today with the wedding of Earl Poulett, 25, and Miss Oriel Ross, 28. Miss Ross played the part of the Empress Catherine of Russia in the play "Casanova." The earl is the eighth of his line.

The marriage at St. Paul's church, Knightsbridge, recalled a society sensation of 27 years ago when the earl's father married Sylvia Lilian Storey, a Gaiety actress. The seventh earl was killed in action in 1918.

Miss Ross, who has posed for Jacob Epstein, sculptor, appeared recently in several west end productions, taking a rôle in "The Mask of Virtue" at two hours' notice. The earl is known for his eccentric attire. He once attempted to introduce a scarlet lined mantle as a new fashion, and although men failed to take up the unconventional attire, women of fashion adopted it eagerly.

JURY TOLD HOW PIQUETT WALKED INTO U. S. TRAP

Dr. Loeser's Wife Testifies in Outlaw Plot Trial.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Anna Patzke, secretary and housekeeper for many years to Dr. Wilhelm Loeser, and now the doctor's wife if his Mexican divorce is good, testified yesterday against Attorney Louis Piquett in the federal court of Judge Philip L. Sullivan in the government's second effort to convict Piquett on the charge of being the brains behind the conspiracy to harbor and conceal the late gangsters, John Dillinger and Homer Van Meter.

At the close of yesterday's session the government's case was practically complete. Court will be in session today only during the morning, but it is expected that the defense will start its testimony.

Miss Patzke, attired in a new crocheted white hat of modish tilt, a white cape collar and a coat of robin's egg blue, told in lisping, tumbling language, somewhat impeded by gum chewing, how Piquett had visited her home at 1127 South Harvey avenue, Oak Park, on the morning of July 24, 1934, and had given her $500 to give to Dr. Loeser.

Warning from Piquett.

"Tell the doc to blow," she quoted Piquett as saying to her that day. "Tell him not to hide behind a tree, as the government means business."

This was after the arrest of Dr. Harold Cassidy and Arthur O'Leary in the conspiracy and while the department of justice agents were hunting for Dr. Loeser.

Miss Patzke put the money in her purse and never gave it to Dr. Loeser, for that same day the doctor was arrested and hustled down to the United States courthouse in Chicago. The agents also took her downtown and gave her a receipt for the money, Miss Patzke said. The receipt was produced in court yesterday by Special Agent R. D. Brown.

Produce 50 Tens in Court.

Piquett saw the fifty ten dollar bills again produced in court and displayed to the jury. The government considers this most clinching evidence of his participation in the plot. Cross-examination of Miss Patzke did not develop any explanation of this payment on the part of the defendant. In the first trial Piquett denied it and left the issue to the jury which acquitted him. The money, however, is there.

Miss Patzke said she had known Dr. Loeser for twenty years.

"What was the nature of your association," she was asked by Austin Hall, special prosecutor.

"I lived with him," she said simply.

She followed the doctor's fortunes in several localities until he was sent to prison for violation of the narcotic law in 1932. Then she went to California only to rejoin him here on his parole and just previous to the finger tip and face-lifting operations described in this trial.

Helps to Trap Piquett.

She had known Piquett for several years and had given him the key to her house when she went west. When she came back the furniture had been sold.

She joined with federal agents after Dr. Loeser's arrest to help the government trap Piquett. Two agents lived upstairs in her Oak Park house, keeping constant watch on the door. They were rewarded on Nov. 22, 1934, she testified, when Piquett came in at the back door and told her in their hearing that she would get from $25 to $50 a week if she would get the "doc" to turn against the government and help him.

In this conversation Piquett gave it as his idea of the ethics of the legal profession that an attorney was to protect his clients under all circumstances. "Tell Doc to say that my share of the money went for fees," she quoted Piquett as saying. "Doc should have known the jig was up when he read how the government men had thrown Probasco out of a window."

James Probasco was killed in a fall from offices occupied by department of justice agents on the 19th floor of the Bankers' building where he was being questioned on his connection with the face lifting operations performed by Dr. Loeser for John Dillinger and Van Meter. The operations were performed at Probasco's home, 2509 North Crawford avenue.

Dr. Eastman Defends Self.

The afternoon session of the Piquett trial was interrupted a few minutes by the appearance of Dr. L. K. Eastman, 1342 Park avenue, River Forest. He was under the impression, he told the court through Piquett's attorney, John Elliott Byrne, that he was the man mentioned in Dr. Loeser's first statement to the government, in connection with the name of the late E. J. Brundage, former attorney general of Illinois.

Dr. Loeser in this statement, which was read in court on Thursday, had named Brundage and an L. K. Eastman as having approached him after his parole from prison and demanded $5,000 from him on threat of sending him back to complete his sentence.

At the government's request Dr. Eastman was examined outside the presence of the jury. He testified that he had never seen Dr. Loeser or approached him directly or indirectly in any matter. He said he did not know Brundage.

Asked as to what he attributed the animus shown against him by Dr. Loeser, he said that several years ago he referred a drug addict who had come to him for cure to the department of justice.

This addict had confessed, Dr. Eastman said, that Dr. Loeser sold him the drugs and had later testified against Loeser. Dr. Eastman said that Dr. Loeser knew of his connection with the case.

Arthur O'Leary, former investigator for Piquett, was on the stand yesterday for direct and cross examination. He repeated most of his story as given at the former trial, but was somewhat hazy and confused on details.

Tells of $7,000 Payment.

He maintained that he had seen Dillinger give Piquett $7,000 on the night of June 3 in Probasco's house, and that the money was part payment for the operations. O'Leary said he got $2,100 of this sum. Piquett cross-examined him and attempted to get him to admit that Dillinger had said part of this money, the Piquett part, was for fees.

"You and Dillinger had some kind of a discussion about fees," O'Leary said to Piquett from the stand. He denied, however, that he had heard Dillinger say anything specific about Piquett taking $3,000 as his attorney's fee. He admitted that he had seen Dillinger several times outside the presence of Piquett. In July, he said, he saw Van Meter in a house in the outskirts of Hammond, where Dr. Cassidy was treating him for a head infection.

Discussion of Surrender.

Piquett indicated a part of his defense by asking O'Leary if he knew Nate Gross, a newspaper reporter, and if he had heard discussions with Gross about the surrender of Dillinger. O'Leary said that he had seen Gross at Piquett's office several times and that there was some talk there, something about surrender, but that most of the talk was about a story of Dillinger's life.

JOBLESS HIGH DIVER HALTED AS HE POISES TO JUMP OFF BRIDGE

New York, June 21.—[Special.]—Arthur Holden, a jobless 66 year old professional high diver, was prevented from jumping from the George Washington bridge today. He explained that his proposed leap was to prove to his old employer that he was fit to have his job back.

Holden, who jumped off the Manhattan bridge in 1899, was, until 18 months ago, diving at an amusement park. He would climb a 103 foot tower and jump into a tank six feet in diameter and four and a half feet deep.

Then he was injured in an automobile accident. On recovering his employer believed he was through. So he and his wife went on relief.

For three days Mrs. Holden said her husband had looked longingly at his diving suit and even tried it on. Today she discovered he had put his street clothing on over the suit and gone out.

Mrs. Holden phoned police and a patrolman was sent to the bridge. He found Holden at a point where the water is 257 feet below, peeling off his outer clothing. He told the patrolman he was tired of being out of a job. Holden was taken to the jail at Fort Lee, but later paroled in the custody of his wife.

25 Tons of Marble Stolen; Halts Work on Monument

[Copyright: 1935: By the New York Times.]

HAVANA, June 21.—The theft of twenty-five tons of marble will cause suspension of the erection of a monument to Generalissimo Maximo Gomez, the great Cuban soldier, according to Col. Perez Abreu, a member of the Veterans of the War of Independence, directing the work. Col. Abreu informed President Carlos Mendieta today that twenty-five of the thirty tons of marble for the base of the statue, being erected in Vedado suburb, had been stolen from a warehouse where it had been stored for ten years.

DEATH DUE TO HEART ATTACK.

A coroner's jury determined yesterday that Mrs. Minnie Cooney, 64 years old, owner of an antique shop at 23 East Ohio street, died of heart disease. When her body was found in her shop on June 12, it was believed she might have died while resisting a robber.

HUNT 3 ESCAPED JOLIET CONVICTS IN CHICAGO AREA

Scale Old Penitentiary Wall; Car Waiting.

The police of Chicago and the metropolitan area last night were hunting three convicts who scaled a 20 foot wall at the old Joliet penitentiary early in the day and were driven to freedom in an automobile which waited in route 4A just outside the prison walls.

The escaped convicts are Jack Ellis, 24 years old, an ex-pugilist; Vernon Guthrie, 30 years old, and George White, 23 years old, who once was a jocky on Chicago race tracks. All three were sentenced in Chicago to one to ten years for larceny in separate court actions.

The three men were urged on in their race to the waiting car by the cheers of 30 convicts working on the road outside the gates about a block from the point of escape.

Trafic Prevents Gunfire.

These convicts and their three guards, who explained that they could not shoot because of the heavy trafic on the road, watched the escape with interest.

At the time of the escape most of the prisoners and a number of guards were viewing a motion picture show in the penitentiary theater. Ellis, White, and Guthrie were working with 15 others in the new stone quarry under the scrutiny of two guards.

The three convicts placed a long board against the wall and scrambled to the top before the guards saw them. Then they dropped to the ground on the other side and raced to the automobile in which two men waited. The car sped away toward Chicago.

Pursuers Outdistanced.

One of the guards outside the walls hailed Harold Dezee, a workman in Lockport, who was driving past the prison. He ordered Dezee to take up the chase, but his car was outdistanced a half mile north of Lockport, four miles from the prison.

A posse found two prison shirts and a cap a short distance from the prison, and expressed the belief that the prisoners had changed clothing as the car raced toward Chicago. Dezee said the men carried bundles as they dropped over the wall, and an investigation was launched to determine whether clothing had been smuggled to them.

Ellis made a previous attempt to escape on Dec. 1, 1933, while working with a detail just outside the stone quarry. At that time he and two others slugged a guard and boarded a freight train as it passed the penitentiary. He was captured as he dropped from the train.

Ellis entered the penitentiary in May, 1933; Guthrie in March, 1933, and White in August, 1932.

WIFE OF BYRD SHIP CAPTAIN PLUNGES 5 STORIES; LAWYER HELD

Washington, D. C., June 21.—(AP)—Mrs. Lucille English, 28, wife of the skipper of the Bear of Oakland, Byrd polar exploration ship, was found critically injured today five stories below a window of her apartment.

Police said they had detained for questioning as a witness Harold Wayne Starr, a Washington lawyer. Starr, said police, was in the English apartment at the time in the capacity of a legal adviser.

The woman's husband is Capt. Robert English, who returned here last month from the latest antarctic trip of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

Starr, police described him as saying, was in the living room when Mrs. English went to the kitchen to mix a drink. When she failed to return, Starr said he went to the kitchen, where he found a window screen raised high and saw Mrs. English on the lawn five stories below.

Police said they found a bullet near where the woman landed and four others of the same caliber in Starr's pocket.

PRISONER TRIES ESCAPE AND GETS A LONGER TERM

Annoyed at the prospect of spending a year in the Bridewell for the theft of forty pounds of bacon, Irwin Edwards, 32 years old, colored, yesterday seized what he thought was a good opportunity to escape from the lockup at the Stockyards police station. Edwards had been sentenced by Municipal Judge Joseph A. Graber in the Stockyards court.

He had a master key concealed in his shoe when he was taken to the lockup. When Policeman Michael Higgins, the keeper, turned his back for a moment, Edwards opened the back door of the lockup and ran up a stairway. Policeman Emmett Shaughnessy saw him fleeing and brought him down with a flying tackle.

The prisoner was again taken before Judge Graber and was fined $200 for attempting to escape. That just meant a longer term in the Bridewell, because Edwards could not pay.

REFUSE TO ADMIT CONVICTED BOYS TO REFORMATORY

New Trial Sought for Pair Given Life.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 21.—(AP)—Two boys presented a problem today to the Hoosier judge who sentenced them to life terms for the kidnaping of an Indiana sheriff.

Judge John L. Sumner of Jasper imposed the life sentences when the boys, Bascum Ray Jr., 14, and Maurice Sheridan, 17, both of Huntington, W. Va., pleaded guilty to the kidnaping last Monday of Sheriff Ed Leugers from in front of the Jasper jail.

Carrying out the judge's decree the sheriff took the lads to the Pendleton reformatory today, where Supt. A. F. Miles refused to admit them. The law does not permit incarceration of life termers in the reformatory, Miles said.

An added complication is the fact that youths under age are not accepted at the state prison at Michigan City.

Attorney General Called.

The puzzled sheriff communicated with the judge, who in turn called Philip Lutz Jr., state attorney general.

Lutz studied the law and advised that the younger boy should be turned over to trustees of the boys' school at Plainfield to be held there until he is 17 years of age, and the older one should be lodged in the reformatory.

The sheriff, meanwhile, took the boys back to Jasper to hold them until a definite decision is reached regarding their place of confinement.

Father Retains Attorney.

An Indianapolis attorney, T. Ernest Maholm, said that he will attempt to block placing of the boys in any penal institution and will ask that they be given a new trial. Maholm said he had been retained by young Ray's father to take steps to obtain another hearing for the youngsters.

Judge Sumner while awaiting direct word from the attorney general said: "I shall dream over the facts in the case tonight and it may be that a solution will come to me in what I think is a most unfortunate and deplorable situation. This is brought about by conflicting interpretations of the statutes covering the crime to which these boys pleaded guilty."

21 SUPERIOR COURT CANDIDATES ASSESSED $2,500 EACH BY PARTY

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

A pensive, not to say lugubrious, air hovered over the Superior court yesterday. News had come of an assessment of $2,500 each laid upon the 21 candidates who are running on the "coalition" ticket for reelection or election to the Superior bench July 1, without opposition.

It's a "campaignless campaign," but the word was the campaign assessment is to be used for "campaign expenses." A judge's salary is $15,000 a year, and the levy is one-sixth of a year's pay or somewhat less than 3 per cent of the $90,000 received in a six year term. In recent years the rate has generally been higher.

Twenty-one assessments at $2,500 would put $52,500 into the war chest of the Democratic county committee of which Patrick A. Nash is head. Some of the judges, pondering, murmured that for a campaignless campaign it looks like a lot of fire to put under the fireless cooker.

Some of the headquarters lads explained it takes as many workers to run a no campaign as a real campaign and that the real job is to drag out the voters.

GRAND JURY ENDS SLUGGING QUIZ; FINDINGS SECRET

CRIMINAL COURT.

Clifton Davis, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary by Judge John C. Lewe.

Raymond Wisneeki and Robert E. Leslie, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life each in the penitentiary; Leo Heuss, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary by Judge William V. Brothers.

The grand jury apparently ended yesterday its reopened investigation of the slugging of two Oak Park florists on June 12. The jurors voted not to discuss their findings, which are to be sent in a written report to Chief Justice Denis Sullivan of the Criminal court, probably Monday.

Yesterday's deliberations were given over largely to an inquiry into charges that a Chicago police squad intervened in behalf of union members and officials arrested in Oak Park on the day of the slugging.

Officials Before Jury.

Among the witnesses who testified were State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney, Capt. Daniel Gilbert, head of the uniformed division of the Chicago police department, and James A. Howe, village president of Oak Park. Courtney and Gilbert were voluntary witnesses. Howe was one of eight witnesses subpenaed for the inquiry.

Courtney refused to discuss his testimony. It was understood, however, that both he and Gilbert were questioned as to whether either the police of the Chicago department or those of the state's attorney's office are protecting union officials in their campaigns for new members. Capt. Gilbert was closeted with the grand jurors for more than an hour.

Village President Quizzed.

Mr. Howe, who was largely responsible for the widening of the scope of the grand jury inquiry, also was questioned at length by the grand jurors. It is believed that he reiterated before the grand jury his condemnation of the practice of furnishing police protection for union sluggers, and his earlier demand that a complete investigation be made of the tieup between union officials and police of Chicago and the state's attorney's office.

Others who testified were: Sergt. Andrew Carroll and Policemen William McCullough and Norman Sims of the Chicago labor detail, which operates under Capt. Gilbert's orders, who are accused of interference; and Policemen Frank Schwartz, Chauncey Esch, Harvey Thor, and Frank Kerber of Oak Park, who made the charges of Chicago police intercession.

Scope of Quiz Broadened.

Yesterday's inquiry was demanded by the grand jurors on Thursday, the day when they were to have returned indictments reported voted against Fred Bohlman and Larry Monahan, business agents of the Excavating, Grading, and Asphalt Teamsters' union. Bohlman and Monahan are accused of having slugged Peter Javaras, 1145 North Harlem avenue, Oak Park, for his refusal to join the Florist Drivers' union, and Bohlman is also charged with carrying concealed weapons.

Before testifying before the grand jury, Mr. Howe conferred with Otto Kerner, attorney general of Illinois, on Howe's previous request that Kerner investigate an alleged union-police tieup throughout the county.

Kerner pointed out to Howe that it was not within his province to interfere unless called in by the state's attorney.

"Mr. Kerner promised me," Howe said, "that he would watch the progress of the investigation with much interest, and would coöperate in any consistent manner. I am convinced that we can count on Mr. Kerner's help to squelch union hoodlumism.

Certain of Justice.

"I am also satisfied that the state's attorney's office is acting wholeheartedly to bring the accused union sluggers to justice. This is due in no small measure, I believe, to the wide attention the Oak Park incident has been given."

Officials of Du Page county warned yesterday that "union sluggers had better steer clear of us." It was revealed earlier in the week that the Naperville Nursery company officials had been induced by threats to sign a year's contract with the Florist Drivers' union. The nursery is in Naperville, which is in Du Page county.

"I am now investigating among local nurserymen and florists," State's Attorney Russell Keeney of Du Page county said, "to find out if others have received similar threats. I hereby serve notice that union men who employ threats or coercion to gain members in this county are in for plenty of trouble."

Sheriff Arthur Bennett of Du Page county echoed the warning. "I am on the lookout," he said, "for any indication of violence by union sluggers. I have only six prisoners in jail that can accommodate ten times that many."

Wan from illness but in admirable humor, she said on her return from Europe that she had lost weight.

"How much?" she was asked.

"Darling," she laughed, "that's a secret."

She underwent an operation in Paris for a throat infection and now she wants to get well again on "butter and eggs and plenty of sunshine," and a rest in the country. She is due in Hollywood Aug. 1.

She remained in her stateroom during the second voyage of the Normandie to New York.

SEBASTIAN FIRED FOR MARRYING WHILE A CADET

New York, June 21.—[Special.]—Lieut. Henry A. Sebastian, famous West Point football star of yesteryear, was ordered dismissed from the United States army today by a court martial decision that ignored his show girl wife's charges that he beat her brutally.

The officers hewed rigidly to the line of military law in the harsh decision dismissing the husky second lieutenant from the service. They held that the popular Hank Sebastian violated the 9th article of war, which states that a West Point cadet cannot have "a horse, a dog, a mustache, or a wife."

The charges of beautiful Mrs. Harriet Hagman Sebastian, graduate of the "Vanties," that Hank blacked her eyes and used her for a human football following a hard drinking army day party were not considered in the verdict.

Sebastian was found guilty of twice falsely certifying that he did not have a wife while he was a student at West Point.

The story of Sebastian's secret marriage to the Broadway dancer was related by Mrs. Sebastian herself when she was found in Governor's Island hospital last April, with both eyes blacked, her face as raw as a beefsteak from punches, and her body a welter of bruises. She said she married Sebastian in June, 1931, while he was on leave from West Point to visit his family in Texas.

MAYOR PROMISES "BOOKIE" LAW TO PROTECT PUBLIC

Proposes Commission to Draft Ordinance.

Mayor Kelly announced yesterday that the welfare of the public would be the principal consideration in the drafting of a city ordinance to legalize handbooks under the enabling legislation which passed the general assembly on Thursday and is now in the hands of Gov. Horner. The mayor, who was present when the measure was adopted, returned from Springfield yesterday.

First of all, according to his plan, a commission of aldermen and citizens will be appointed to study the problems of this form of gambling regulation, which has no precedent in the United States. It is his hope that a model ordinance will come out of the deliberations.

Funds for Schools, Police.

Next, the mayor pointed out, the revenue which the bill will bring in should be allocated to good purposes. It is known that he hopes to increase the police force materially and to grant the schools additional funds out of the handbook revenue.

The amount of this revenue cannot be determined accurately in advance. If the fee is made $2,500 for each book, as has been suggested, it is estimated that 1,500 to 2,500 would pay it, making the city income from $3,750,000 to $6,250,000 annually from this source. If these estimates are feasible, it may be found possible to increase the police force by at least 1,000 and possibly by 2,000 or more men.

At present the police force has 6,250 members. Many are on special duty that prevents their patroling the streets, and the proposed addition to the force for this purpose would make Chicago one of the best policed cities in the country.

Awaits Action by Governor.

"I am not now familiar with all the details of handbook regulation," the mayor said, "but as soon as the governor approves the enabling measure I shall appoint the commission to study the problems.

"When this commission completes its work Chicago handbooks will be comparable to brokers' offices or grocery stores. By that I mean that they will be legitimate businesses, operating in a business manner.

"We will not be solely interested in the revenues that licensing of handbooks will bring to the city, nor in the fact that legalizing them will eliminate the corrupting influence now often exerted on law enforcement agencies. We will require rigid inspection, possibly bonding, certain hours for operation, and conditions under which the legal books may operate.

Certain Areas for Handbooks.

"I think that the studies of the commission will show ways to restrict the handbooks to certain areas, and to provide safeguards so that they cannot possibly cater to minors.

"It is probable that the total number of handbooks to be permitted will be determined in the ordinance. A system of inspection will insure that bookmakers who do not intend to carry on an honest and legitimate business will not be allowed to operate.

"The city administration has not favored handbook licensing as a means of gaining any political control of such establishments. As a matter of fact, if they are permitted to operate legally it should guard against any political influence.

"The ordinance should insure proper operation of handbooks, since operators violating the ordinance will lose their permits and courts will mete out penalties to unlicensed operators seeking to continue in business."

ALSCHULER NOT GUILTY, REPORT TO HOUSE TO SAY

Washington, D. C., June 21.—(AP)—A report today from a usually reliable source said the house judiciary committee planned to tell the house next week it found nothing to substantiate charges of irregularity brought against United States Circuit Judge Samuel Alschuler by Representative Dirksen [Rep., Ill.].

The latter charged the Chicago judge with certain irregularities when the banc of three judges reversed an earlier decision of Judge Charles E. Woodward which favored Charles Marshall, Chicago attorney. Marshall, head of an Elkhart, Ind., electrical company, had charged the Pullman company with infringement of a patent allegedly owned by Marshall.

An immediate investigation was made by the judiciary committee into Dirksen's charges. Marshall, pleading illness, failed to appear on days designated by the committee. Dirksen, owing to his prolonged illness, was unable to furnish additional witnesses.

The nature of the report, beyond stating that it found nothing to bolster Dirksen's charges, could not be learned.

Dirksen said he would "welcome such a report when and if it is made."

HOW IT'S DONE IN EUROPE

Much interest has been manifested in the control measures that foreign cities, notably Paris and London, have taken to regulate the horse race betting business.

Some five years ago the French government, which operates all pari-mutuel betting at the tracks, became alarmed over the bootleg betting that flourished, particularly in barber shops and small cafés, all over Paris. This business was illegal, but the police found it impossible to eradicate the evil.

So the government, not liking to lose the percentage cuts on the wagers, in good French thrift established pari-mutuel booths throughout Paris. These booths, however, close at 1:30 p. m. daily, before the first race of the afternoon is run, and illegal bookmakers still get some business between races.

Prefer to Trust Government.

Their inroads are not important, however, as experienced plungers prefer to risk their money with an organization that pays the full track odds and is sure to pay off a winner. The Paris bookies, a canny lot, had always limited winnings on a straight bet to 20 to 1.

Moreover, the government pari-mutuel is now installing a system that will permit the gambler to pyramid his winnings through a whole afternoon, lay "if coming bets" and parlay to his heart's content.

London handles the matter differently. It not only tolerates, but approves what are known as commission agents. These are bookmakers under a sweeter name, and bookmakers of high class.

British law makes it illegal to lay down a counter bet [where money is passed from hand to hand] except at a race course. It is lawful, on the other hand, to make bets and have the settlement occur later.

Betters Have Code Names.

The big commission agents, and there are dozens of them in the world's largest cities, have thousands of clients who either deposit sums of money with the agent or who have a line of credit with him. These clients may telephone, write or telegraph their wagers. Each is given a code name. All he has to do is call in and say: "Sawbucks wants to bet a pound on Field Trial in the fourth," and his bet is recorded. Settlement is made on a daily, weekly or monthly basis, as desired by the client.

The business of this type is open and aboveboard, the agents are financially responsible and they advertise liberally in numerous publications and on billboards.

The disadvantage of this system, from the law enforcement standpoint, is that only clients who are wealthy enough to make a good sized deposit or to establish credit may use it. The vast majority of the London public has to patronize illegal bookmakers who have no scruples about accepting anything from pennies up on an "over the counter" basis.

Bet Bootlegging Goes On.

These bookies swarm in the streets. Frequently they are arrested and taken to court, where they pay fines, are liberated and go back to their work. It can hardly be said London has stopped bet bootlegging.

Chicago, it appears, will be doing pioneer work in licensing and regulating bookmaking establishments in which bets may be made as freely and in the same way as they are made at the track.

MAYWOOD ASSURES POLICE PROTECTION TO UNION FACTION

Curt D. Krausser, village president of Maywood, announced yesterday that he would furnish police protection for a meeting next Tuesday of an ousted faction of Local No. 782 of the Chicago Teamsters' union. The meeting will be held in a hall at Maywood.

James A. Farmer, former secretary treasurer of the local, appealed to Krausser for help. He asserts that he is still, in legal right, an official of the union, and that he and his supporters were thrown out of the organization by a group that had the support of State's Attorney Courtney. James Baggott is the officially recognized head of the union at present.

According to Farmer, Chicago policemen have been interfering with all meetings of his group. Krausser said that he would attend Farmer's meeting and would see that enough Maywood policemen would be present to prevent any outside interference.

AGREE TO RAISE PENSIONS FOR CITY'S TEACHERS

Legislature Will Pass Bill Next Week.

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., June 21.—[Special.]—Pensions for Chicago school teachers would be raised from $1,000 to $1,200 annually by passage of an agreed bill introduced in the house today and to be rushed next week with the goal of passage by sine die adjournment next Saturday night.

Two measures passed early this week, which set $1,000 as the maximum pension, were fought by a lobby of teachers. Since passage conferences were held with James B. McCahey, president of the Chicago board of education in attendance. It was not possible to raise the figure since the bill has been passed, but it could be amended by a separate measure.

Accordingly, Majority Leader Benjamin S. Adamowski of Chicago presented the new bill today and it was sent to second reading without objection. The plan is to pass it Tuesday in the house and, granting uninterrupted progress, in the senate Thursday.

House Bills Stricken.

At its closing session of the week today all house bills in committee, save those carrying appropriations, were stricken.

Before adjournment the Ward senate bill appropriating $500,000 with which to purchase the Chicago Riding club for an armory for the 106th cavalry was sent to third reading on motion of James P. Boyle [Dem., Chicago], chairman of the appropriations committee. It will be called for passage early next week.

Representative Henry C. Allen [Rep., Lyndon] took considerable satisfaction today in killing a bill for the third time in the last ten years. Mr. Allen, a farmer who generally sits serene while the legislative maelstrom swirls about his head, made one of his rare speeches on the floor this morning. It was effective.

The bill under consideration, and being urged by F. W. Lewis [Dem., Robinson], would have changed the assessment date of personal property from April 1 to Jan. 1.

"Unfair to Farmers."

"That would be very unfair to the farmers," Allen declared. "On Jan. 1, the farmers' personal property is at its peak; grains are stored, and live stock hasn't been sold. But in other businesses, inventories generally are at their low point. Passage of this bill would double the farmers' tax."

The house agreed with the farmer member and the bill received only 11 votes.

"That's the third time in ten years I've had to kill that bill," Allen said.

After passing and advancing bills for four hours, the house adjourned until 5 p. m. Monday.

Two Children Burned by Lighting Sewer Gas 'Pocket'

Luther Peterson, 8 years old, and his sister Faith, 6 years old, of 1111 Newport avenue, were burned on their faces and hands yesterday afternoon when they struck a match and ignited a pocket of gas under a sewer manhole cover at School street and Seminary avenue. The cover was blown from the manhole and the flames that spurted out reached the children. Their hurts were not regarded as serious and both were sent home after being treated at the John B. Murphy hospital.

Ann Harding Forbidden to Take Child from State

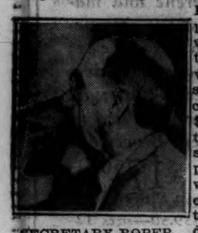
ROPER ASSAILS ROOSEVELT LINK IN SHIP CHARGE

Denies Mitchell Accusation Before Committee.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 21.—[Special.]—The charge that President Roosevelt approved the withdrawal of the liner Leviathan from service because it saved $1,720,000 for the steamship company, in which Vincent Astor, the President's yachting companion, is a stockholder, was vigorously denied today by Secretary of Commerce Roper before a senate committee.



SECRETARY ROPER Before Committee. [AP Wirephoto.]

Secretary Roper took upon his own shoulders all responsibility for the laying up of the Leviathan. He characterized Ewing Y. Mitchell, whom he recently ousted as his assistant, as "inefficient, unjust, prejudiced, and prone to unfounded suspicions." Mitchell made the charge regarding the Leviathan and asserted there was "favoritism" and the "appearance of corruption" in the department of commerce.

Rakes Mitchell Charge.

"Mr. Mitchell is represented as saying that he attributed the President's action in approving my recommendation to lay up the Leviathan and the terms attaching thereto as influenced by the President's personal friendship with Vincent Astor, who happens to be a stockholder of the International Merchant Marine, which owns the United States Lines which owns the Leviathan," Roper remarked to the senators appointed to investigate Mitchell's charges.

The secretary raised his voice and in indignant tones continued:

"I wish to say emphatically that the President did not initiate my action in laying up the Leviathan, and from the beginning has done no more than manifest an interest in developing a better American merchant marine consistent with the approved plans of the congress. The statement of Mr. Mitchell, based on his ever active imagination and suspicions, is without foundation."

Inquiry Comes to End.

The inquiry came to an undecisive end this afternoon with the plain intimation from Senator Royal S. Copeland [Dem., N. Y.], chairman of the committee, that no senatorial action would be taken on Mitchell's charges.

Senator Copeland was the only member of the committee present at the afternoon session. When no more witnesses came forward he looked at the empty chairs beside him and remarked:

"Well, we'll leave the record open. But just as the committee has faded away, so likewise the allegations seem to have faded away."

Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan started an investigation of Mitchell's accusations yesterday.

Specific Denial Wished.

The defense of the President had not been included in advance copies of Roper's statement distributed to the press when he appeared before the committee. It was said to have been added after the statement had been scanned at the White House and the President had indicated that he wished a specific denial made of the charges accusing him of favoring Astor because of his well-known friendship for the wealthy sportsman, upon whose big yacht he frequently takes vacations.

The contract between the government and the I. M. M. had provided that the Leviathan make seven voyages each year from 1932 to 1936. But heavy losses were suffered by the steamship company in operating the vessel. Roper attributed the scarcity of passengers to a fear that the ship was unsafe and a fire-trap.

"Reports of the unseaworthy condition of the ship naturally had weight in prompting me to consider the question of what to do with the Leviathan," he testified. "Arrangements were worked out whereby, in consideration of retiring it from service, the company agreed to pay the government $500,000 over a period of years and to construct a new ship of the Manhattan-Washington type."

Talked with Roosevelt.

Mitchell, in his testimony, had calculated that the company in which Astor is interested saved $1,720,000 by this cancelation of the contract.

"Did you ever talk with the President about retiring the Leviathan?" inquired Senator Copeland.

"O, yes," said Roper, "but not until I got ready to do it."

After Senator Copeland, in a friendly tone, had expressed his approval of the withdrawal of the Leviathan from service, Roper remarked confidently:

"I believe that your committee will agree that I followed the proper administrative procedure in providing for a new up to date vessel for the American Merchant Marine."

Roper proceeded to deny other charges made by Mitchell. Questioned concerning the purported deal whereby Postmaster General Farley was supposed to have promised the ousting of Mitchell in return for the political support of Tom Pendergast, Democratic boss of Kansas City, Mo., Roper asserted he knew nothing about Pendergast.

"No Politics," Says Roper.

"There was absolutely no politics in my discharge of Mitchell," he declared. Then he added a political axiom of his own.

"Mr. Mitchell does not realize," he stated, "that the best way to serve the Democratic party is by securing the best service to the people. He serves his party best who serves his country best."

Democratic senators smiled complacently at this worthy sentiment.

"Mitchell's inability promptly to pass on even routine matters," Roper continued, "was creating a veritable log jam in the bureaus under his jurisdiction. His removal was imperative in the interest of efficiency."

Roper stoutly defended his appointment of South Trimble Jr. as solicitor for the department of commerce. Mitchell had intimated that Trimble was appointed at the request of W. Gwynn Gardiner, whom he termed a shipping lobbyist, and with whom Trimble formerly was associated in the practice of law.

Calls Mitchell Charge Unjust.

"This allegation is without foundation in fact and very unjust," he asserted. "Soon after I was invited into the cabinet I advised Mr. Trimble that I was going to nominate him as solicitor. Neither Gardiner nor anyone else had spoken to me about him."

Trimble later testified and made the same denial. He said he had known Gardiner over a period of ten years and had never known him to do any lobbying. He also denied Mitchell's charges that he had permitted the running of the statute of limitations in cases in which it is indicated there was "criminal collusion between ship operators and shipping board officials."

"Neither I nor any of my staf know of any case in which there is any indication of fraud in which the statute of limitations has run during my term of office," he testified.

St. Clair an "Educator."

Secretary Roper characterized his $3,000 a year employe, Labert St. Clair, former newspaper man, as an "educator," not a press agent, as asserted by Mitchell.

"Because of his experience in newspaper work," he admitted, "I do consult him on matters pertaining to disseminating business information. He conceived the idea of the department's national weekly business survey. But he is primarily a transportation expert and engaged to educate us on that subject in outlining a program for the President and congress."

He defended also his appointment of Joseph B. Weaver as director of the bureau of navigation and steamboat inspection. He pointed out that Weaver's connection with the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock company dated back to 1917 and that he had been an independent consulting engineer since 1922.

Weaver also testified, denying that the Morro Castle and other disasters were due to improper inspection of steamships, as hinted by Mitchell. He discoursed at length upon the Morro Castle tragedy, expressing the opinion that either spontaneous combustion or an incendiary explosion caused the boat to burst into flames at sea with a great loss of life.

Roper Defends Vidal.

Roper also defended his director of the bureau of air commerce, E. L. Vidal.

"Mr. Mitchell made a serious statement to the effect that the airplane accident in which Senator Cutting lost his life might not have occurred had a person with 'more experience, knowledge, and stability' been in charge of the bureau of air commerce," he commented.

"Mr. Vidal is a West Point graduate, an airplane pilot of fourteen years' experience. The experts of the bureau inform me that they cannot conceive how the airplane accident could have been avoided irrespective of who was at the head of the bureau."

J. Craig Peacock, director of the shipping board bureau, followed Roper in the witness chair. He was questioned closely by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.] concerning the contracts entered into between the government and the I. M. M.

"What are these contracts, a heads you win, tails you lose proposition?" the senator wanted to know. "Apparently the government is to take any losses if any occur."

Calls Contracts Fair.

Peacock said he believed the contracts were fairly drawn. He ridiculed the $1,720,000 saving to the company mentioned by Mitchell as "wholly illusory and imaginative."

He admitted, however, that the government, if it had wished to insist strictly upon the terms of the contract, could have seized the company's entire fleet of ships with a value of many millions. He also insisted, in answer to Senator Vandenberg's queries, that the cancelation of the contract was not executed at the direction of President Roosevelt.

AWARD GENERAL ELECTRIC MILLION DOLLAR U. S. JOB

Roosevelt Is Stockholder in Favored Company.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 21.—[Special.]—The General Electric company, in which President Roosevelt and his mother hold 5,792 shares of stock, has been awarded a million dollar easy money contract by the war department, inquiry disclosed today.

The contract, amounting to $1,144,880, is for building and installing two giant generators of electric power at the New Deal's Bonneville dam, which army engineers are building in Oregon.

It is the second sizable contract General Electric is known to have received under the New Deal. Tennessee Valley Authority bought a $424,785 generator from the company.

Benefit by New Deal Projects.

In addition General Electric has benefited as New Deal power projects, notably the TVA, increase the demand for electrical appliances and equipment. A large scale example is furnished by the four condensers, costing $731,600, which General Electric recently sold to the Los Angeles city power department. Although New Deal money did not pay for the condensers, it has helped to complete the Los Angeles water and power systems. General Electric stock has advanced steadily in price.

The disclosure that the President and his mother own stock in General Electric came late in March. An examination of the company's books showed that at that time the President held 1,792 shares of common stock as a joint trustee for his mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt. In addition Mrs. Roosevelt owned 4,000 shares.

The contract awarded to General Electric for generators at Bonneville is one of the largest easy money contracts let during recent months. A survey of other large easy money contracts recently awarded shows that some of the big contractors, who obtained millions of dollars' worth of contracts in the original outpouring of cash, have obtained more, while some new names have appeared among the big money makers.

Eccles Dominates Companies.

One of the largest money makers among contractors has been a group of a half dozen who first associated together as Six Companies, Inc., to build the Boulder dam. One of the six companies was Utah Construction company, dominated by Marriner S. Eccles, now governor of the federal reserve board.

Under the New Deal the six companies in Six Companies, Inc., either as individual units or in various combines with each other and with outsiders, have figured in $45,810,000 worth of government contracts. Their most recent plum is a $3,219,965 contract for increasing the height of one of San Francisco's dams. This they obtained under the name of the Trans-Bay company. In addition, the Utah Construction company and two other members of Six Companies, Inc., have recently won a $798,075 contract for a federal dam near Gunnison, O.

The Six Companies group is surpassed only by an association of the Silas Mason, Walsh Construction, and Guy F. Atkinson companies. These three concerns, in various groupings or individually, have figured in almost 50 million dollars' worth of contracts under the New Deal. None has been awarded recently, however.

Among Largest Contracts.

One of the largest contracts financed by easy money which has been awarded recently is the $4,865,717 contract to build a dam across the Mississippi river at Alton, Ill. It went to the Engineering Construction corporation, New York, of which Lou Crandall is president.

Mr. Crandall also is president of the George A. Fuller Construction company, which already held three contracts totaling $1,762,400 under the New Deal and which recently was awarded another $429,313 contract for a PWA financed hospital at Worcester, Mass. Mr. Crandall thus figures in $7,057,430 worth of contracts.

A combination of two firms, Addison Miller, Inc., and Fielding & Shepley, both of St. Paul, recently has moved up among the big money makers. They were awarded jointly a $3,985,424 contract for work on the spillways and gate structures at the giant Fort Peck dam. They already held jointly a $1,292,300 contract for work on Fort Peck, so that their New Deal contracts now total $5,287,724.

Other Large Contracts.

Other large easy money contracts let recently and the contractors to whom they have been awarded are:

Herlihy Mid-Continental company, $3,190,217 contract for settling tanks in Chicago sanitary district; S. A. Healy, $1,978,000 contract for Chicago's southwest intercepting sewer; M. P. Severin, $1,984,042 contract for university housing project; G. M. Brewster company, $1,720,644 contract for Mohawk dam on Ohio river; A. W. Kutsche company, $1,780,000 contract for San Antonio postoffice; J. G. Brill company, $1,365,865 contract for cars and trucks in Delaware river subway.

Walter J. Cummings, chairman of the Continental Illinois National bank and treasurer of the Democratic national committee, is a director in the J. G. Brill company.

NIGHT IN JAIL CELL IS NOT VERY FUNNY TO FILM COMEDIAN

Hollywood, Cal., June 21.—[Special.]—Vince Barnett, 32, "professional ribber" and movie comedian, threatened to sue the Los Angeles police today for a gash over his right eye, after he and his 22 year old wife, Genevieve, had spent the night in Lincoln Heights jail.

At sunrise court they denied charges of intoxication, demanding jury trial on July 9. Barnett, who makes part of his living on retainers from jocular movie notibles to attend banquets and insult their guests, was arrested last night, according to police, when tearing the advertising posters out of their frames in a downtown film theater foyer.

"He used profane language and resisted arrest," two policemen reported. "Mrs. Barnett attacked us when we took Barnett by the arm." Barnett said he and his wife had attended the theater as guests of Wallace Ford of the movies, and the latter's wife, a film fan magazine writer, and that the cops had confused him with the real offenders in the poster tearing.

PLAN HUNT FOR LUSITANIA, SUNK 20 YEARS AGO

DUBLIN, June 21. — (AP) — Salvage experts made plans today to attempt to locate the wreck of the Lusitania, sunk by a German submarine 20 years ago.

The attempt will be made early next month. A Glasgow firm, the Tritonia company, is organizing a staf to conduct the work. A. A. Bestic, surviving officer of the vessel, will participate. Bestic said the Lusitania's officers were about to take the ship's position when the torpedo struck it, so it may be a difficult task to find the wreck.

[The Cunard liner Lusitania was sunk May 7, 1915, about 10 miles off the Old Head of Kinsale, southeast tip of Ireland. It was making its eastward voyage from New York, and sank 18 minutes after being struck, with a loss of 1,198 lives, including 124 Americans.]

Waits for Ferry to Dock; Car Plunges Into River

New York, June 21.—[Special.]—As the ferryboat Mount Hope neared its slip at East 34th street today, Aggripino Drago, president of the Drago Garment company, was seated in his automobile, the first in line. The car suddenly moved ahead, crashed through a folding gate and a chain, and plunged into the East river. While persons on the dock shouted to the pilot and prepared to go to Drago's rescue, he came to the surface and struck out for the piling. Unaided, he grasped the timber and scrambled to the dock.

6 KILLED IN BRAZILIAN WRECK.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, June 21.—(AP)—Six persons were killed and 21 injured today when two trains collided near the suburban station of Deodoro.

Liberty League Units Form in 15 Downstate Districts

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Republicans and constitutional Democrats now are organizing branches of the American Liberty league in each of the fifteen downstate congressional districts in Illinois, according to word yesterday at headquarters.

Chapters are being formed in Danville, Rockford, Quincy, Alton, Galesburg, Moline, East St. Louis, and other cities outside Chicago. The membership is coming from both parties, the league being a nonpartisan body pledged to "defend and uphold the constitution."

Among its founders are Alfred E. Smith, Democratic nominee for President in 1928, and James W. Wadsworth, former Republican senator from New York, now a member of the national house and among presidential possibilities.

Gives Voice to Citizenry.

Organization is to be extended by congressional districts with a view of giving the citizenship an agency with which to make itself heard and felt in congress. Headquarters reported yesterday that the executive committees being formed conform to the political complexion of the district.

In Peoria, which has a Republican congressman, Everett M. Dirksen, there are four Republicans and three Democrats on the committee. In the Sangamon district, with a Democratic representative in congress, Harry H. Mason, the committee is composed of four Democrats and three Republicans. The Springfield branch is headed by a Democrat.

Shouse Outlines Aims.

A declaration by Jouett Shouse, president of the league and former head of the Democratic national executive committee, sent out by headquarters yesterday, says:

"It is our hope to enlist promptly a membership of several millions throughout the country. The desire is that there shall be established a medium through which the American people may at last have an influential voice in the conduct of their government.

"The aim is to help build for a better future and to provide a medium of expression for a large group of citizens aggregating millions in number, constituting the very bone and sinew of the country, to the end that the form of government under which we have grown to be the most powerful and prosperous nation in the world may be preserved."

Condemn Roosevelt Policies.

Reaffirmation of the principles set forth by the recent Grass Roots Republican "save the constitution" round-up of ten states at Springfield by G. O. P. ward clubs is expected to be completed next week. Typical of the resolutions being adopted is one from the Twenty-eighth Ward Republican club, Joseph A. Porcaro, committeeman, which says:

"We condemn President Roosevelt's policy of killing hogs and cattle, plowing under cotton and limiting the production of grain, because it tends to rob our people of their proper sustenance and clothing.

"This policy has caused an alarming reduction in the amount of meat and farm products coming to market, thus increasing the cost of food and clothing. Such increase in the cost of bread, milk, meats and other foods and clothing, due to these policies, is liable to undermine the health and destroy the happiness of a large part of our people by keeping out of reach of the poor and underprivileged the abundant supplies of food and clothing which the god of nature permits our American soil to produce."

JOHN G. OGLESBY TO ENTER RACE FOR GOVERNOR

Rockford, Ill., June 21.—[Special.]—John G. Oglesby of Elkhart, former lieutenant governor of Illinois for two terms, announced here today that he would seek the Republican nomination for governor at the primary next spring.

Oglesby made the announcement while attending the 32d annual encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans of Illinois here.

"As things stand now, I am a candidate for my party's nomination for governor," Mr. Oglesby declared. "My plans, however, are subject to the welfare and best interests of the Republican party.

"Harmony in the party this year is more important than ever and I shall hold my own personal ambition for public service subordinate to my party's welfare and the interests of the people of the state of Illinois."

Oglesby is the son of the late Richard J. Oglesby, who served as governor of Illinois for three terms and as United States senator from Illinois for one term.

Communist Paper Orders War on Religion Renewed

MOSCOW, June 21.—(AP)—The newspaper Pravda let it be known today that the communist party does not intend to relax its anti-religious work. It said vigilance against religious rights had not been satisfactory in some farming regions, citing several cases where Christian rites and even pagan practices had been allowed. On some farms, Pravda said, bulls and colts had been sacrificed by worshipers and in one instance a village soviet, or assembly, not only permitted the people to pay priests with eggs, but fined them if they failed to do so.

CORRECTION

We go to extremes to make our advertising truthful and accurate. When we are in any doubt, our advertising copy understates, rather than overstates, an article's value. Occasionally an error in technical description creeps in. When it does, and we think it possible that a customer has been misled, we run an advertisement similar to this one, in correction of our previous statement.

Recently we ran an advertisement in the Chicago Tribune on quilted taffeta coats. The Federal Trade Commission has ruled that the word "taffeta" should be applied only to fabrics made of silk fibres. These coats were made of rayon.

While we did not state that the coats were made of silk, if any customer is dissatisfied with her purchase, we invite the return of the coat.

ONE SHOT DEAD, NINE WOUNDED IN STRIKE RIOTING

Martial Law Lifted from Omaha by Governor.

Eureka, Cal., June 21.—(AP)—Ten persons were shot by police, one fatally, in fierce rioting today between about 250 strike pickets and 300 employés of the Holmes-Eureka Lumber Mill, scene of five weeks of labor unrest.

One of those felled by police bullets was a woman. Another was believed dying. Five policemen were hurt and ten civilians were injured.

Between 75 and 100 men were jailed after the two hour hand to hand combat. None of the victims, except the officers injured, was identified immediately.

When James O'Neill, a special officer, reported for patrol duty at the mill, he was attacked. A short time later, when the mill's 300 employés reported for work, the real battle started. Police fired after their car had been stoned.

Martial Law Is Lifted.

Omaha, Neb., June 21.—[Special.]—Omaha settled down to normal life again tonight after nearly a week of martial law, but not before Gov. R. L. Cochran had one last word as to the conduct of the city's transportation system.

Before the last of the National Guardsmen had left, and before issuing the order that lifted martial law, Gov. Cochran, through Mayor Roy Towl, announced that all private autos carrying pay passengers had been ordered off the street, effective at once. This countermanded Mayor Towl's order of yesterday permitting full operation of private cars in the transportation system. The governor issued his order in behalf of both the street railway and the workers in order to give the maximum business and hence employment to the car company.

The last of 1,800 militiamen left town tonight without having fired a shot or set off a gas bomb. All striking employés of the car company were back on the pay roll today following the arbitration which ended the strike yesterday.

FERA Strike Ended.

Toledo, O., June 21.—[Special.]—The many month old strike of FERA workers in Lucas county, which had kept 1,500 men out of part time employment and halted work on major projects here, ended today. Work on all projects financed under the FERA and PWA will be resumed Monday.

The strike ended after a conference of union business agents, representatives of the Workers' alliance, and Local Relief Administrator Clarence Benedict. The projects on which work will be resumed include the new tuberculosis hospital, naval, army, and boulevard construction.

MINING CAREER OF TWO BOYS IS RUDELY HALTED

Policemen William Brown and Maurice Mahoney of the Chicago Lawn station observed two small boys on a street corner last night and stepped closer to hear what they were saying.

"This must be the place," said one, adjusting a lether knapsack, the counterpart of the one his companion wore, "see the sign?"

"Yep," replied the other, "but I don't see Uncle Joe's mine."

The two policemen stepped forward.

"Say, mister, this is California, ain't it?" one of the boys asked at their approach.

"Sure," said Policeman Brown, glancing at the street sign. "What address are you looking for?"

"We're looking for Weaversville, Cal.," was the astounding reply. "My uncle owns a gold mine there and we're going to be miners."

"You're minors, all right," put in Policeman Mahoney, "but this is 63d street and California avenue in Chicago. Better come along."

The boys identified themselves as Donald Benson, 15 years old, and Robert Boyd, 14 years old, and admitted they had run away from their homes in Garden City, Mich., to seek their fortunes in mining. The Travelers' Aid society is taking care of them until word is received from their parents.

COMPROMISE TVA BILL IS APPROVED BY COMMITTEE

Washington, D. C., June 21.—(AP)—By a one vote margin the house military committee today approved a compromise TVA bill and arranged to press the measure toward a house vote sometime next week.

Deadlocked since May 24, when it tabled senate approved amendments to broaden the powers of the Tennessee valley authority, the committee agreed to the compromise only after heavy concessions were made to meet the objections of a powerful block of committee foes of the huge administration project in the Tennessee basin.

Earlier, TVA weathered a storm of Republican opposition on the floor when Democrats shouted down an attempt to slice $6,000,000 from the $35,000,000 set aside for the authority in a $224,000,000 appropriation bill which passed the house today.

Administration leaders have indicated they were willing to accept any concessions necessary in the TVA bill to get it onto the house floor. That would open the way for amendments either there or in conference with senate spokesmen to bring the bill more into conformity with administration wishes.

Three Sentenced in Plot to Swindle Cab Company

Three men were found guilty and sentenced yesterday by Judge Matthew D. Hartigan in the Felony court on charges of conspiring to swindle the Checker Cab company through a fake accident claim. Nick Sourbis, 40 years old, and Sam Koclas, 40 years old, were sentenced to five months each in the Bridewell. Dan Koutsea, 41 years old, alleged leader of the conspiracy, was sentenced to six months in the Bridewell.

CONGRESS WARNS BRAIN TRUSTERS ON FUTURE BILLS

Misleading Preambles Create Revolt.

Washington, D. C., June 21.—(AP)—The brain trusters of the administration were given blunt notice today by Democratic congressmen that the bills they draft in the future will be put through a closely meshed legislative sieve.

Orders were issued by Chairman Robert L. Doughton [Dem., N. C.] that all departmental drafts of legislation sent to the ways and means committee hereafter should be studied and redrafted by the congressional legislative drafting service before introduction.

Similar instructions were given certain other senate and house committees, where Democratic chairmen intimated they did not want their names on bills providing for things they opposed.

Claims Growing Revolt.

Senator Alva B. Adams [Dem., Colo.] said there was a growing "revolt in congress" against brain trusters' legislative drafts because of "smoke screen preambles" designed to "develop a constitutional basis" for the bills. Adams added that since the Supreme court's NRA decision congress was making an especial effort to simplify bills and to bring them within constitutional limits.

Doughton's orders came after his committee, Secretary Morgenthau's aids, and Federal Alcohol Control administration officials had a dispute over the department's new liquor regulation bill to supplant FACA, ended by the NRA decision.

Writes Own Measure.

The committee scrapped the measure providing for a setting up of a new independent agency and wrote its own, putting the agency under the treasury and allowing bulk liquor sales over the secretary's objections.

It was when Harold N. Graves, assistant to Morgenthau, told the committee that the secretary opposed bulk sales and having the agency under the treasury that Representative Fred M. Vinson [Dem., Ky.] asked:

"When did it ever come to the point that congress could not have something to say about what the duties of the executive branch of the government should be?"

"Of course, it is recognized that congress does have the complete authority to determine the allocation of this function," Graves replied.

Overhauled if Necessary.

Members of the committee said all future drafts of such legislation would be completely revamped if necessary. They pointed out that they revised Secretary Perkins' social security bill.

Senator Adams said other committees also were giving close revision to bills drafted by administrative aids, whereas in the first Roosevelt congress most "brain trust bills were swallowed whole."

"It is an indication that congress is asserting its legislative right," Adams said.

At the house appropriations committee it was said that Chairman James P. Buchanan [Dem., Tex.] had the administration's 5 billion dollar work relief bill revised five times before he would introduce it, and later the senate fought over it for 75 days.

In addition, changes were made in other supply bills, in the utility holding company bill, the AAA amendments, and various other measures.

RAZOR NICK PROVES FATAL TO JOURNALIST, KARL K. KITCHEN, 50

New York, June 21.—[Special.]—Karl K. Kitchen, 50, author and newspaper correspondent, died today at St. Luke's hospital after a brief illness. He was removed to the hospital on June 17, suffering from a streptococcic infection, which was followed by pneumonia.

A little more than a week ago Mr. Kitchen was nicked by a razor while being shaved. The cut was a small one on his right ear. At first it was only a slight annoyance, but in a short time it induced a rising temperature. When Mr. Kitchen found himself unable to shake off the fever he was removed to the hospital.

Mr. Kitchen was well known in New York newspaper circles. He was a member of the staf of the Evening World and lated conducted a column for the Sun. Nearly every summer he spent several weeks in Europe, and his series of travel articles, particularly those on Germany, were widely read.

In 1917 Mr. Kitchen was divorced by his first wife, Mrs. Mary Oakes Kitchen. Subsequently he married Miss Dorothy Follis, a member of the Chicago Opera company, who died in 1923. Two years ago he married Miss Gladys Irene Davis, who survives him.

RUSH D. HOLT, 30, GIVEN HIS SEAT IN U. S. SENATE

Washington, D. C., June 21.—[Special.]—With a broad smile on his face, Rush D. Holt, 30 year old West Virginian, today heard the senate, by a 62-17 vote, admit him to its membership. Elected to the senate at the term beginning last Jan. 3, Holt had waited until he was 30 years old Tuesday before applying for the seat.

Immediately thereafter the young bachelor took the oath from Vice President Garner. He retired to his flower bedecked office, where his 84 year old father, his 21 year old sister, Jane, and ag roup of admiring women hugged him.

Will Do Own Thinking.

In his first interview as a senator, Holt, known as a radical Democrat, announced that he would not be a "rubber stamp" for President Roosevelt.

"Those folks who pinned a rubber stamp on me during the campaign were mistaken," he declared, emerging breathlessly from the clasps of his feminine fans. "I'm for the New Deal, but I'm also a West Virginian and expect to do some independent thinking."

He said he expected to cast his first vote for the Guffey coal bill, but had not made up his mind on the administration sponsored AAA amendments and the banking bill.

70 Democrats in Senate.

Holt became the 70th Democrat in the senate. Fifty-five Democrats, five Republicans, a Progressive and a Farmer-Laborite voted to seat him. Four Democrats and thirteen Republicans voted against his admission, holding that his election was void because he was not 30 years old, the minimum age set by the constitution for senators, when his term began.

The galleries, packed with Holt's friends, broke into applause as he advanced down the alles, escorted by his Democratic colleague, Senator Matthew M. Neely [Dem., W. Va.], to take the oath from Vice President Garner, who pounded his gavel to restore order.

Afterwards, in his office, he pointed proudly to a great mass of mail upon which his six stenographers were working. He said his mail was averaging 3,000 letters a week.

VOLCANO ERUPTS IN CALIFORNIA; EARTH QUAKES

Mineral, Cal., June 21.—(AP)—Lassen peak, only active volcano in the United States proper, staged a show for tourists today. It emitted a puff of steam from its crater, while two earth shocks were felt simultaneously in the surrounding area.

The steam puff appeared at 9:40 a. m., Pacific standard time [12:40 p. m., Chicago time]. Both needles were knocked off the seismograph at Manzanita lake, Lassen Volcanic National park, by the earth shocks, which registered at 9:17 and 9:20 a. m.

This new idea (new to us at any rate) doesn't come under the heading of budget accounts. It's a regular charge account—the only difference being that the man who wishes to avail himself of this convenient way of purchasing clothing here tells us so.

Then between ourselves we work out the details of paying the amount in three monthly payments, instead of in one lump sum. The details, incidentally, don't involve the matter of carrying charges.

We give you an example of how it works above on the purchase of a $34.50 suit. Credit arrangements before buying on this plan may be made by phone or letter.

AIRPORT ON LAKE RECOMMENDED TO PLANNING BOARD

Engineer Urges Project; Favors Superhighways.

BY JOSEPH ATOR.

Hugh E. Young, engineer for the Chicago plan commission, made a strong plea for a lake front airport in his report yesterday to the commission at its annual meeting in its headquarters at 208 West Washington street. The airport was one of a dozen projects which Mr. Young listed for attention and investigation by the commission.

Col. A. A. Sprague, chairman of the commission, announced that he will appoint a committee to investigate the airport project. Another committee will be appointed to make recommendations on the proposed Chicago Fair in Burnham park, and a third to discuss coördination of the plan commission's efforts with those of the Chicago regional planning board.

Col. Sprague disclosed also that a committee of the commission is already holding informal discussions with representatives of the city, federal government and sanitary district on a fixed bridge policy for the city.

Visions 50 Million Saving.

This he said, will save the city an estimated $50,000,000 within ten to fifteen years in operation and replacement costs of movable bridges over the Chicago river. Mr. Young gave the members of the commission further information on one of the essentials of this policy, a navigation lock at the mouth of the river.

The commission approved Col. Sprague's amendment to the by-laws, designed to revitalize the important executive committee. Hitherto members of the executive committee have served for definite trms. Under the amendment, they will be appointed for three year terms, on a rotating basis.

"It would encourage the airplane industry and help attract it to Chicago if this city had a port where passengers could land close to the downtown district," said Mr. Young. "On account of the large area of land required for an airport, of necessity it must be established where physical conditions and property values permit, namely, on the borderland of the city.

Air Travel Heavy Here.

"About 30 per cent of all airplane passengers in the United States pass through Chicago. A new class of trafic from neighboring cities would be created if the business center of Chicago could be reached in ten minutes instead of the 55 now required.

"Need for an island airport, safe for all weather flying, was demonstrated during a fog here recently when a pilot refused to land at the Chicago airport because of the hazard in the shape of huge water towers and factory chimneys surrounding it.

"The installation of blind or fog landing equipment by the federal bureau of air commerce seems impractical at the Chicago airport because this field, being surrounded by obstructions, is not suitable for the blind landing system, which lack of suitability will increase in importance as flying in bad weather becomes more customary."

Recommended 11 Years Ago.

In announcing that he would appoint an airport committee, Col. Sprague informed the members that he had felt bound to refrain from comment on controversial questions, since he felt that the commission as a whole should pass on them. He pointed out, however, that the commission recommended a lake front airport as long ago as 1924.

"It is going to be a hard thing to run the plan commission," said Col. Sprague, "when the impression persists that the only thing it does is to recommend expenditures of large sums of money. Personally, I don't think that should be our principal function.

"There are now so many questions that an organization of men of your type should pass upon. An enormous amount of money is being spent by the federal government, some of which I think is going to bring a minimum of results."

Urge Speed in Planning.

Mr. Young also stressed the necessity for planning, pointing out that the lapse of planning activities during the depression has left many communities without sufficient data for projects under the federal work relief program. As a vital aid to planning in Chicago he recommended a land use survey, at an estimated cost of $911,720, which would give jobs under the work relief program to 3,531 relief clients.

In a discussion of housing and rehabilitation of Chicago's blighted areas, Mr. Young touched again for the necessity of information such as would be obtained by the land use survey.

The two federal housing projects now under consideration in Chicago, he said, will rehabilitate only ½ of 1 per cent of the city's blighted area, and house only 1 per cent of the people now living in that district.

Eight Other Objects Vital.

Mr. Young mentioned eight other projects as vital to the Chicago plan. These were the opening of more through streets to relieve congestion in present arteries; construction of super highways, in which connection he commented that elevated highways along railroad tracks are the most economical; completion of the lake front development; completion of the outer drive; filtration plants; creation of park areas in the great west side medical center; construction of the Randolph street railroad terminal; and zoned street lighting as a means of reducing the automobile death toll.

Col. Sprague appointed John Wentworth, architect, and Michael Zimmer, warden of the county hospital, vice chairman of the commission. His appointments to the executive committee were: for one year terms, William H. Beckman, T. J. Carney, William J. Lynch, Gerhardt F. Meyne, Wirt Morton and A. D. Plamondon; for two year terms, Kent Chandler, Barnet Hodes, John A. Holabird, E. L. Ryerson, John M. Simpson and Mr. Zimmer; for three year terms, Arthur G. Cable, Mark W. Cresap, John V. Farwell, Daniel J. Schuyler, Alfred Shaw, James Simpson and Mr. Wentworth.

CLIPPER PLANE HOPS OFF FROM HAWAII FOR U. S.

Begins Fourth Flight Across Pacific.

HONOLULU, Hawaii, June 21.—(AP)—The Pan-American Clipper took off for Alameda, Cal., at 3:01 p. m. [8:31 p. m. Chicago time] today from Pearl Harbor.

After less than one minute's run across the harbor waters, the huge plane lifted easily to begin its fourth flight across the 2,410 mile stretch of open water.

Capt. E. C. Musick was in command of the ship, with the same six man crew that has operated it on all its Pacific ocean test flights.

Course Is Uncertain.

Before the take-off, Capt. Musick said the Clipper would fly a short distance before its exact course to Alameda was chosen. Choice of this course from among a number laid out by Pan-American Airways navigators would depend on weather and other conditions.

[Officials at the Pan-American Alameda base said the Clipper would take a northerly course, possibly going as far as 300 miles north of the great circle route.]

Musick estimated the trip would require 19 to 20 hours. According to this reckoning, the Clipper should arrive at Alameda between 3:30 and 4:30 p. m., Chicago time, tomorrow.

Faces Head Winds.

Weather prospects were fairly good, Musick said, with the probability head winds would be encountered almost immediately and would continue about two-thirds of the way. These would present an opportunity to obtain new data on conditions to be encountered by planes in the regular California-Hawaii service contemplated for the near future, he pointed out.

Musick refused to estimate when the Clipper would begin another westward flight after arriving at Alameda.

Less than 100 persons gathered to see the ship off today.

CLARK APPOINTS 60 TO HELP HIM IN ASSESSMENT

Sixty persons were appointed by County Assessor John S. Clark yesterday to the special citizens' advisory committee which will aid in the 1935 quadrennial assessment which is now being started.

The list contains the names of architects, engineers, real estate dealers, contractors, and other leading business and professional men. It is headed by A. J. Brockman, consultant to Clark, who was formerly president of the Cook county real estate board.

Assessor Clark recommended that the men name a general committee to direct the work of the group, as well as subcommittees, each of which will make intensive research into some phase of the huge task of revaluing all real estate in the county for tax purposes. The reassessment is expected to stand through 1938.

KELLY SEES HOME RULE BILL AS KEY TO TRANSIT UNITY

Believes It 'Whip' Needed to Force Action.

Mayor Kelly, gratified at the passage Thursday by the state legislature of the traction home rule bill for Chicago, said yesterday that he hopes to use the powers conferred on the city administration to get Chicago a unified local transportation system.

"The bill gives us a whip," said Mayor Kelly. "The companies have been too much inclined to sit back and do nothing, satisfied that the city was so enmeshed in legal technicalities that it could not force action. Now we are free to force action."

Mayor Kelly voiced the hope that informal discussions can be started soon, although provisions of the bill will not become effective for nine months. The bill requires that the citizens of Chicago vote their approval in order to take advantage of its provisions at a referendum in either a regular or special election.

No Referendum Before April.

Mayor Kelly, who has been a consistent advocate of consolidating elections and reducing election costs, said he would not depart from that stand to call a special election on home rule. The earliest date at which the referendum can be submitted otherwise is in the general primary on the second Tuesday of next April.

Before the bill can go to Goy, Horner for signature, moreover, a conference between house and senate committees must reach an agreement on numerous amendments to the bill adopted by the house after its passage by the senate.

The bill passed by the senate applied to all utility companies. It provided that the city could bar use of the streets to any company which does not have a franchise within three years after the bill becomes effective. It gave the city the power to regulate service and require extensions. The city also was given power to order removal of railroad crossings and separation of railroad grades, and removal of railroad and street car tracks.

Time Limit Reduced.

As amended in the house the powers of the bill were confined to local transportation companies. The deadline for obtaining franchises was reduced to sixty days, and the power of regulating service was restored to the Illinois commerce commission, which under the broader senate bill retained its power over rates and the financial structure of companies.

Guy A. Richardson, president of the Chicago Surface Lines, expressed gratification at Mayor Kelly's declaration for a unified local transportation system. The street car companies had opposed the bill in the legislature.

"What the public wants is good service, which can be provided only if the companies earn sufficient profits to keep their equipment modern," said Mr. Richardson. "We believe that unification will prove most profitable to the companies and the public. We will be glad to coöperate with Mayor Kelly toward that end."

Two Companies Without Franchise.

The Surface Lines have been operating without a franchise since Mayor Kelly caused the abrogation of the 1930 traction settlement ordinance, the financial provisions of which never were fulfilled. The Chicago Motor Coach company also has no city franchise, but would be compelled to obtain one under provisions of the bill.

Col. A. A. Sprague, co-receiver of the elevated lines, pledged his coöperation to Mayor Kelly in negotiating a unified local transportation settlement.

Prof. James M. Van Hook of Indiana U. Dies at 63

DR. MIDDLETON NAMED DEAN OF MEDICAL SCHOOL

Successor to Dr. Bardeen at Wisconsin U.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., June 21.—[Special.]—Dr. William S. Middleton, professor of medicine, was selected today by a committee of the whole of the University of Wisconsin board of regents to succeed Dr. Charles R. Bardeen as dean of the institution's medical school.

Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the university, recommended Dr. Middleton for the office and the regent committee adopted the recommendation unanimously. Dr. Middleton is to be formally named dean of the school at a general meeting of the board of regents tomorrow.

Dr. Middleton will be the second medical school dean of the university. Dr. Bardeen was dean of the school since it was instituted. He died last week.

Born in Pennsylvania.

Born in Norristown, Pa., in 1880, Dr. Middleton received his medical degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1911. He then served his internship at the Philadelphia general hospital and at the babies' hospital in Philadelphia.

He joined the University of Wisconsin staff in 1912 as a member of the department of student health. With the exception of two years, 1917 to 1919, when he was in the medical corps of the United States army, Dr. Middleton has been a member of the university staf.

Dr. Middleton has contributed many articles to medical periodicals and has concentrated while at the University of Wisconsin on research into diseases of the blood circulation.

Member of Many Medical Groups.

He is a member of the American Medical association and the state and Dane county medical associations. He also is an associate member of the Association of American Physicians and a fellow of the American College of Physicians.

Dr. Middleton also is connected with the American Society for Clinical Investigation, the Central Society of Clinical Research, American Association of the History of Medicine, and the Society of Experimental Biology and Medicine.

Three men were considered by the regent committee for the office of university registrar, a position to be vacated by F. O. Holt, who has been named dean of the university extension division. The three considered were R. F. Lewis, Marshfield school superintendent; L. P. Goodrich, Fond du Lac superintendent, and John Bergstresser, university assistant junior dean.

FIVE DIE, 14 HURT AS TORNADO HITS PLAINS STATES

New Destruction Brought to Stricken Areas.

Kansas City, Mo., June 21.—[Special.]—Five persons were killed and 14 injured today by tornadic storms that swept across the plains states, bringing new destruction to an area already suffering from floods and deluges of rain.

About a dozen heavy wind storms struck scattered parts of Nebraska, while wind, hail and overflowing streams caused lesser degrees of destruction to other sections. At the same time dust returned to western Kansas despite scattered showers.

Three Die at Texarkana.

A violent wind storm that struck suddenly at Texarkana, Tex., killed three persons and injured 15 others. The Texarkana airport hangar was demolished and five planes damaged. Trees were uprooted and houses damaged throughout the city.

In Texarkana, Dempsey Freeze, 40, a farmer, and his two year old son, Gilbert, were killed. Less than three hours later his widow gave birth to a baby girl in a hospital here. The third person killed was Dunbar McCartney, colored.

Lightning killed Mrs. Mert Hunter, 46, near Joplin, Mo. A tornado near Shields, N. D., killed Ann Kraft, 24, and seriously injured her parents. Two persons living near Fairfax, Okla., were injured when their home was hurled 150 yards by a twister. The same storm killed 155 head of cattle on one ranch.

Two More Levees Crumble.

Two more levees on the Arkansas river crumbled today. A levee near Morrilton, Ark., was crushed, inundating 15,000 acres of plantation land. Later the river broke through in the Carden bottoms in Yell county, spreading water over 8,000 acres of farm land. Eight hundred families are now homeless in the sector.

In sections of Nebraska cattle were left bleeding from wounds inflicted by hail stones which farmers said were "as large as baseballs." Crops were levelled by wind and hail, farm buildings were demolished, roofs smashed and automobile tops ripped.

Southern Illinois Flooded.

Centralia, Ill., June 21.—[Special.]—Rising flood waters caused by rainfall of cloudburst proportions and overflowing streams today paralyzed trafic in many sections of southern Illinois, made canals of city streets and caused great damage.

A cloudburst ten miles southeast of Harrisburg swept a dance hall and two cottages from their foundations. The Illinois Central railroad tracks were under five feet of water in some places and a locomotive was forced off the track at Bristol by débris and rocks washed down upon the rails.

A five and one-half inch downpour turned Carbondale into a Venice. Boys cruised about the flooded streets in rowboats. The water stood three feet deep in some sections and damaged thousands of dollars worth of merchandise in stores.

Crack Trains Tied Up.

Six passenger trains, including the Panama Limited, the Seminole, and the Chicasaw, were tied up at Carbondale. The rising waters of the Big Muddy river overflowed bordering lowlands in territory surrounding the city, crippling communication systems and destroying crops.

A five hour rainstorm flooded streets in Murphysboro and three feet of water stood at the intersection of highways 37 and 13 in Marion.

The water was reported the highest in history over the railroad tracks at Makanda. Two trains were reported detained by high water at Anna. The Big Four railroad reported three track washouts in Saline and Johnson counties between Harrisburg and Vienna.

ALASKA COLONY REPORT ASKED FROM HOPKINS

Washington, D. C., June 21.—(AP)—The senate today asked Harry L. Hopkins, relief director, for a full report on the Alaskan colonization project in view of reports of want and possible danger to life of those transported to Alaska by the government.

A resolution was adopted without objection from Democratic leaders asking Hopkins for the report. It was submitted by Senators Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.], Shipstead [F. L., Minn.], and La Follette [Prog., Wis.], representing the states from which most of the colonists were taken.

Vandenberg read to the senate messages from some of those transported to Alaska complaining bitterly of conditions there and charging the government had not lived up to its promises to take care of them.

TRIAL OF EMBLEN DELAYED AFTER LEGAL ARGUMENT

The trial of Arthur Emblen, Gary hoodlum, on a charge of assault with intent to murder, was put over until Monday yesterday by Judge Grover C. Niemeyer in the Criminal court after a long legal argument as to the admissibility of the defendant's confession.

Emblen is charged with assault on Eli Daiches, advertising executive, who later was slain by assassins at 53d street and the Outer drive on March 3, 1934. The state holds that Emblen confessed that he entered Daiches' office on Jan. 24, 1933, beat him with a gun butt and left him for dead.

Irving Weitzman, owner of a chain of south side bakeries, was convicted by a jury of inspiring the murder of Daiches and was sentenced to serve a life term in penitentiary. He has an appeal pending.

Striking Mechanic Admits Smashing of Windows

Marvin Jefferson, 27 years old, 5843 Eddy street, was arrested yesterday and identified as the man who had thrown several stones through the windows of Nelsen-Hirschberg, Inc., automobile dealers at 5133 Irving Park boulevard. Jefferson, a member of the automobile mechanics' union, now on strike, said that he was formerly employed at the place and was picketing it. He admitted breaking the windows.

Testify at Williams Inquest

Ex-Wife Chief Witness

Mrs. Vera Beryl Williams of the Seneca hotel was the chief witness yesterday at the coroner's inquest into the death of Weir Williams, 43 years old, 6039 Sheridan road, whom she divorced on May 14. A verdict of suicide while despondent was returned.

Williams was until recently sales director of the Bankers' Commercial corporation, 520 North Michigan avenue. He was found dead of carbon monoxide fumes in the garage at the rear of his home Thursday. Mrs. Williams is the daughter of the late David Beryl, London publisher.

She told of a quarrel with her former husband last Sunday which resulted in her filing a $25,000 damage suit against him the next day.

"I telephoned him for my clothing," she said. "He invited me to his home. When I got there I saw another woman wearing my negligee and spoke to him about it. He struck and kicked me, fracturing my hip. I left without my belongings."

Mrs. Williams' testimony followed that of Bradley Williams, 2318 Harrison street, Evanston, who expressed the belief that the damage suit was the immediate motive for his brother's suicide. Another witness was Mrs. Madeline MacClaine, owner of a beauty shop in Evanston, who lives over the garage where Williams' body was found. She told of discovering the body and calling the police.

EDITOR BEATEN BY PICKETS IN PRESS STRIKE

Lorain, O., June 21.—(AP)—Common Pleas Judge Guy B. Findley issued an injunction against the Cleveland Newspaper guild late today, prohibiting picketing by more than two members at the Lorain Journal and restraining publication of any matter designed to intimidate Journal employés, advertisers or subscribers.

The injunction was requested by the newspaper after its managing editor, Frank Malloy, was assaulted by unidentified persons as he entered the newspaper's plant today.

Guild members and sympathizers have been picketing the plant since a controversy between the management and editorial employés arose last week.

The injunction forbids members of the guild from interfering in any way with the employés entering or leaving the Journal plant, from interfering with truck drivers or carriers and from loitering near the plant, except for two members who are permitted to be stationed there. They are enjoined against the use of threats for purposes of boycotting. The injunction further provides that they shall not intimidate advertisers.

Before the injunction was issued, John Dunn, chairman of the Lorain branch of the Cleveland guild, said the picket line "had been reinforced by the appearance of about 100 labor sympathizers." He issued an apology for the violence and said "We give our pledge it shall not happen again."

ROCKFORD GROUP UNABLE TO STOP BUBBLE DANCER

Rockford, Ill., June 21.—[Special.]—A group of citizens attempting to prevent the appearance of Sally Rand, fan and bubble dancer, at a theater here today and tomorrow were informed by city officials that there was no ordinance to prevent her from dancing here.

City Attorney Alfred O. Ahlstrand informed the group that there was an ordinance prohibiting the showing of prize fight and "robber" scenes, but that there was nothing to give the city the slightest jurisdiction over fan dancers, clothed or unclothed, with or without bubbles.

Sally, whose arrival this afternoon tied up traffic in the downtown district for some minutes, was indignant over efforts of the group to halt her appearance.

Divorces Husband Because He's "Too Old Fashioned"

Mrs. Sophie Foremal, 40 years old, 2649 East 78th street, was granted a divorce by Superior Judge Francis B. Allegretti yesterday from Peter Foremal, 53 years old, on a charge of cruelty. Questioned by her attorney, Harry X. Cole, Mrs. Foremal testified that their trouble arose from the fact that her husband was "too old fashioned, stayed at home all the time, and struck me when I suggested going out." The Foremals were married in 1922. Under a settlement each is to get one of the two millinery stores they own jointly.

HIT BY FALLING CANOPY; DIES.

Charles Solton, 60 years old, 1601 South Halsted street, died yesterday in St. Mary's hospital of injuries incurred June 16 when he was struck by a falling steel frame of a canopy over the sidewalk at 660 Madison street.

CORSICAN BANDIT LEADER DIES ON THE GUILLOTINE

Andre Spada Is Executed for Six Murders.

BASTIA, Corsica, June 21.—(AP)—Andre Spada, onetime tough king of the Corsican brush and multiple murderer, strolled casually to the guillotine today, warning the world that "catastrophe will follow my death."

The 36 year old, 110 pound "last of the brigands," whose reign of terror in the hills stirred France to send an army of 2,000 men after him in 1931, faced the loss of his head with stoic indifference.

"It was never courage I lacked," he said, as they awakened him on his last morning of life.

Calls Self Agent of Heaven.

Religious fanaticism, developing in Spada's curious mind in the last years of his bandit reign, led to his capture, and religious fanaticism marked his last words.

"I am killed only as an agent of heaven," he told his jailers. "If heaven had not ordered me to surrender, hundreds more would have died."

Smiling wryly, Spada refused the customary cigaret and rum proferred those about to die.

All through the night the doomed man, his plea to President Albert Lebrun of France refused, played cards. Once his game was interrupted, and he himself startled, when lights went off and alarms sounded. Guards told him Corsica was merely being drilled against air attacks. When the lights came on he resumed his game.

Preaches to Jailers.

After mass at an improvised altar in his cell, the bandit king seemed resigned to his fate. He gave the jailers long religious speeches.

Since the day he wandered barefooted, half starved, half naked down the mountain to his native Coggia to pray loudly in the open and, finally to be captured, the "Tiger of La Cinarca" had been meek and subdued. His old spirit flashed, however, in the words he said as he walked to the scaffold supported by gendarmes:

"I am still brave enough to walk alone."

Anatole Deibler, "Monsieur de Paris," France's aged hereditary headman, was waiting for him. Quickly the knife flashed down. Spada's head rolled in the courtyard.

His body, still clad in the sweater he knitted during the months he was awaiting trial for six murders, was buried in the spot reserved for those executed on the guillotine.

COOGAN IS SUED FOR $500,000 IN FATAL ACCIDENT

Los Angeles, Cal., June 21.—(AP)—Two damage suits aggregating $500,000 were filed today against Jackie Coogan, film actor, in connection with the automobile accident May 4, in which four persons, including his father, were killed.

Young Coogan was the sole survivor.

The suits were filed by Anna V. Horner, mother of Robert J. Horner, playright, and by Grace Durkin, guardian of Trent Junior Durkin, actor.

The plaintifs charge that John H. Coogan, Jackie's father, was driving "at an excessive speed while under the influence of liquor." Charles Jones, foreman of the Coogan ranch near San Diego, also was killed along with Horner, Durkin, and the elder Coogan.

In each suit damages of $250,000 was asked.

TELLS SUFFERING OF MUSSOLINI'S ARMY IN AFRICA

Troops Labor in Sun, Sleep Naked in Streets.

BY WILL BARBER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DJIBOUTI, French Somaliland, Africa, June 21.—Italian soldiers and workers sleeping stark naked in the streets to escape the heat; others toiling in a blistering sun without cork helmets; and still others begging money from Arab sailors to buy food, which they are unable to buy with their meager pay.

Everywhere confusion and disorder; everywhere haste, and everywhere determination to occupy the rich lands of the Ethiopian plateau—without fighting if possible, but with war to the death if the Ethiopians resist.

Hospitals are full and the situation haphazard. The Italians are said to admit an average of six deaths from sunstroke a day, and for two days, it is said, there has not been water in the city.

Eyewitness Tells Story.

That is Massaua, port city in the Italian colony of Eritrea, as described to THE TRIBUNE correspondent today by one of the first men to reach Djibouti from there in several weeks. He is a citizen of a great nation historically friendly and disposed to favor Italian aspirations.

THE TRIBUNE correspondent has no means of checking the informant's statements, but has no reason, after inquiry, to doubt his honesty. For obvious reasons, his name cannot be used.

What he told THE TRIBUNE correspondent, the informant saw as an eyewitness—all but the story about the Italians begging from Arab sailors. That came from the Arabs themselves.

Bares Mussolini's Blunders.

From what THE TRIBUNE correspondent was told, Premier Mussolini seems to have plunged into his Ethiopian adventure without proper preparation, and perhaps with lack of knowledge of true conditions in East Africa.

Italian soldiers and workers have been sent down to a steaming, sun baked port where there is hardly a tree and water is lacking, and many of them came down without sun helmets and still dressed in their heavy European uniforms. All night long these soldiers and workers toil at discharging vessels that jam the harbor. The Italians have learned at last to avoid such a task as unloading ships in the daytime.

Thousands of other soldiers and workers are obliged to work all day in the scorching desert country, mending roads that trucks, tanks, and tractors break down a few hours later as they roar through the night to the plateau at the capital of Asmara, where conditions are much better, though it is overcrowded.

Italians Die in Streets.

It is impossible to sleep in houses in this climate, let alone under canvas tents or in low wooden barracks like our wartime camps, without ventilation. Down here Europeans keep electric fans going all night and pajamas are all the tribute paid to decency.

In day and night walks through Massaua, THE TRIBUNE'S informant said, he saw many Italians lying naked in the streets trying to get enough air so they would be able to sleep. They did not even have a rag to cover them. He saw one Italian drop dead of sunstroke in the main street. An officer on a big Italian steamer also fell dead. The Italians are ready to admit six deaths a day, so the toll may be higher.

Then, in daytime motor drives he was able to take, the informant saw thousands of Italians working on roads and "looking damned miserable" for all the swank displayed by gold braided, blue shirted Italian officers, who are aching for a chance to fight the Ethiopians.

Price of Food Soars.

The pay of the soldiers and workers is very low, and the price of food has gone up to such an extent that Italian civilians resident in Massaua have opened a subscription to aid them. Prices have skyrocketed, and water, instead of being a mere necessity, has become a luxury of luxuries.

The only people getting rich out of this affair are the British, who are selling water; Arab sailors, who have brought their dhows [Arabian boats] from all other Red sea ports for use in unloading Italian vessels, and, ironically, the Ethiopians themselves, who keep on selling coffee to the Italians.

Confusion? The whole town of Massaua is choked with cargoes, which are piled up in the streets. Huge rolls of barbed wire adorn the front of the Bank of Italy awaiting removal. Cases of ammunition, shovels, and other tools and cases of food fill the single public square to the height of trees. On the mainland south of the town ammunition is unloaded, while to the north 1,000,000 square feet of timber lies in the sun waiting to be turned into baracks.

10 Die in Fall Into Ravine.

Cranes mounted on tractors swoop around corners, grab piles of cargo and load them on trucks, which then move on with such speed and haste that pedestrians are endangered. A causeway joins the island to the mainland, but it is very narrow and the trucks are forced to go single file.

One truck, with ten soldiers aboard, fell into a ravine 3,000 feet deep. The bodies could not be recovered.

My informant said:

"It is war without being war. Among the war materials are 400 airplanes. There are plenty of tanks, too, but they will be no good in these mountains and these deserts—how are the Italians going to get the gasoline and water necessary to run them? They can't do it.

"The Italians also have brought two of those fast engined, streamlined trains like the one which set an American record recently. They make the run to Asmara, about 70 miles way, in three hours and one-half, with a climb from the sea level to 6,600 feet. They keep going all day."

A train will start for Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia, tomorrow—the railway runs bi-weekly service—and THE TRIBUNE correspondent hopes to be aboard. The journey of 500 miles will take three days.

DUCE PUSHES AFRICAN ADVENTURE

Reports from Massaua, port of the Italian colony of Eritrea, yesterday told of the great hardships encountered by Premier Mussolini's army in its preparations for war with Ethiopia. The Italian troops were said to be suffering greatly from the blistering heat and a shortage of water.

DUCE REGIMENTS CIVIL WORKERS UNDER ARMY RULE

Classed in 3 Groups and Wear Insignia.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 21.—Fascism's mania for regimentation was carried a step further with Dictator Mussolini's decision recently that all civil servants—and there is a real army of them in Italy—must be classified according to military regulations.

From now on they will wear insignia denoting their rank and importance and will salute each other, according to grade, with the Roman salute.

Classified Into 3 Groups.

Civil servants have been classified into three groups:

Group A includes civil servants who have had university training and are capable of filling the big jobs in government administration. They wear a special insignia embroidered on their coat lapel and this ensignia gives them a rank which in the army would correspond to that running from lieutenant to general.

Group B includes civil servants who have only what would amount in the United States to a high school training. They wear the same emblem, but on a background of blue. Functionaries in class B cannot rise higher than what would correspond to colonel in the army.

The third group, C, includes civil servants who have only primary school education and their ranks run from corporal to major. They also have a special emblem denoting their grade.

Aimed to Enforce Discipline.

In the new system a bailif would probably rank as a top sergeant. A doorkeeper will be a corporal. A prefect is brigadier general, while the head of a department is a general commanding a corps.

The application of military grading to the burocracy has been made, it is said, to enforce discipline. The rank and importance of a civil servant can now be recognized at sight by his emblem, just as an officer by his bars or chevrons. Superiors must be saluted by inferiors.

MEET TOMORROW TO ASSAIL ITALY'S ACTS IN ETHIOPIA

A second massmeeting of Chicago Negroes in protest against the Italian government's policy of aggression in Ethiopia will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in Roseland hall, 4711 South Parkway. More than 2,000 colored people are expected to attend.

The first meeting was held last Sunday afternoon and Robert Ephraim, international president general of the Negro World alliance, had planned a parade on the south side tomorrow. On Thursday, however, the Chicago Park district commissioners refused a permit for the parade.

Ephraim, Dr. Frank J. Hawkins, and Attorney Joseph D. Bibb will be the principal speakers at the rally tomorrow. Three Italians, who recently escaped from their home country, also are expected to participate in the program, Ephriam said. He declared that he expects to file a mandamus suit in the Superior court next week to compel the park commissioners to issue a parade permit.

WAR CHIEF URGES GREECE TO BRING BACK MONARCHY

ATHENS, June 21. — (AP) — Gen. George Kondylis, minister of war, executed a sensational political about-face today, declaring himself in favor of the restoration of the monarchy.

"I favor the monarchial restoration," he said, "and sincerely wish for a strong majority in the plebiscite for the king's return. The republic has proved incapable of maintaining the country's political stability."

Kondylis, reputedly in personal control of the army, previously had been a strong supporter of the republic. His statement was considered a severe blow to the Greek republican cause.

Italian Woman's Altitude Mark Set at 39,511 Feet

ROME, June 21.—(AP)—The new world's altitude record for women flyers, established yesterday by the Marchesa Carina Negrone, was announced officially today as 12,043 meters [39,511.0758 feet]. Her mark is about one-half mile higher than that set by Mlle Maryse Hilsz of France, who flew to a height of 36,771 feet on June 17.

DICTATOR OF RUSSIA GOES 'SOFT'; DISPORTS WITH LITTLE CHILDREN

MOSCOW, June 21.—(AP)—Joseph Stalin, Russia's man of steel, who usually appears most grim, changed his mien today and played with little children in an amusement park.

Stalin was setting the example for the rest of Russia in a new effort to make the people give their offspring more attention. Dressed in white, with his customary knee boots, and surrounded by members of the government, Stalin strolled through the park, trailed by hundreds of youngsters. He stopped every now and then to caress a child or answer a question put by one of them.

Put on Big Wedding Party.

PERVOMASKAYA, Caucasus, U. S. S. R., June 21.—(AP)—To the accompaniment of aerial acrobatics, parachute jumps, rough riding, and native dances, Grigori Velichko, soviet "noble" of work, and Nina Belavskaya, first farm woman to jump from an airplane, were married here today. Eight hundred guests participated in the wedding feast and celebration, the first big affair since the start of the nation-wide campaign to make marriage an occasion for festivity.

GERMAN PASTORS DEFY NAZI DRIVE TO SILENCE THEM

Ask Laymen to Preach if They Are Jailed.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, June 21.—The proclamation of the Augsburg Confessional synod, which opposes the Nazi dictatorship of Reichsbishop Dr. Ludwig Mueller, was read today to a congregation which packed the Emmaus cathedral in Berlin. It was estimated that close to 5,000 worshipers were within the church. Another 5,000 stood outside unable to enter.

One hundred and two pastors led by Supt. Koch, leader of the Confessional churchmen, walked up the aile of the church three abreast as services began.

Pastor Urges Patience.

Pastor Humburg delivered a sermon in which he urged followers of the Confessional movement to "bear their trials and tribulations patiently" for the sake of the freedom of the Protestant church. He requested the worshipers to obey the state "but only as long as its orders do not conflict with God's command."

Despite promises made to the Augsburg synod by a representative of the government, the Rev. Mr. Humburg voiced the fear that more Confessional pastors will be arrested. He urged the opposition churchmen to organize services in their homes if necessary.

"Let private individuals officiate, if a pastor is not available," the pastor concluded.

Supt. Koch then read the contents of the Augsburg proclamation. It corresponded exactly with the Rev. Mr. Humburg's sermon.

Police Release 12 Pastors.

BERLIN, June 21. — (AP) — Secret police today released 12 more Protestant pastors from concentration camps. Thirteen ministers, however, still are forbidden to preach and 25 more have been forced to leave their congregations.

Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's arms expert, who is working an Anglo-German understanding, is understood to have urged settlement of the German church problems as an aid to appeasing British public opinion. Yesterday Von Ribbentrop visited Bishop Chichester, one of the most violent critics of the Nazi religious policy.

Swedish General Advises Bigger Ethiopian Air Force

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 21.—Gen. Erik Virgin, former commander in chief of the Swedish air force, who is now military adviser to Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, has recommended the purchase from Great Britain of two or three squadrons of fighting and bombing planes. This recommendation was submitted immediately after Gen. Virgin organized the first large-scale maneuvers ever held by the Ethiopian army. Italy, which lacks iron and has been a heavy purchaser of Swedish ore, long has exerted pressure on Stockholm to secure Gen. Virgin's recall. He resigned his Swedish post for a year last August to become adviser to the Ethiopian emperor.

THREE CHINESE WARSHIPS STAGE MYSTERY BATTLE

Twelve Shots Fired at Sea Near Hongkong.

HONGKONG, China, June 21.—(AP)—A clash at sea between one loyal and two rebel — or former rebel — Chinese cruisers today led British naval authorities here to order all sailors back to their posts aboard the warships Defender and Regent.

[An Exchange telegraph dispatch from Hongkong to London said the British took the precautionary step because of fears that fighting might extend into British territory.]

A dozen shots from the 4 year old, 2,500-ton cruiser Ning Hai, one of the Nanking government's crack ships, chased the 37 year old Hai Chi and Hai Chen, of 4,300 and 3,000 tons, back into the harbor here after they attempted to put out to sea.

Mystery Surrounds Fight.

The two ships, which went over to the Canton government several years ago, recently deserted the Cantonese and, running the gamut of land forts' fire, arrived at Hongkong presumably en route to join the Nanking forces.

At 4:45 p. m. today they cleared, ostensibly for Shanghai. Two hours later, when they were one mile north of Waglan lighthouse, the smaller cruiser, which had been standing off for an hour, apparently awaiting them, bore down and opened fire from eight miles. The bigger cruisers returned to Hongkong without answering the fire.

While considerable mystery surrounded the sea fight and the commander of the Hai Chi, interview aboard, even denied there had been any fighting, it was understood the Canton government had asked that the vessels be detained here.

Manchukuans in Crew.

Fifty Cantonese members of the crews, given their choice, elected to leave the vessel here, it was understood. One explanation was that Nanking, while wanting the cruisers, demanded that undesirable elements be eliminated from the crews. It was expected some officers would desert.

Another surmise, not confirmed, was that the rebel crews might have intended going to Formosa to join the Manchukuo navy, since some members were Manchukuans.

The Ning Hai entered the harbor at midnight with C. L. Chen, vice minister of the navy, and his advisors aboard. One officer on the cruiser said the shots fired were merely a warning to the other craft to return to port, another said they were a salute, while a third denied any shots had been fired. All agreed, however, that the former rebels were completely reconciled with Nanking. The Ning Hai had been ordered to Hongkong to escort the vessels north, they said.

PEIPING, June 21.—(AP)—A Japanese army spokesman today expressed satisfaction "with the steps taken by Chinese authorities in Hopei province to meet Japanese requirements," but admitted "between 10,000 and 20,000" Japanese troops were held ready.

Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara, "man of mystery" and the army's chief political manipulator, the spokesman, said the troops were watching progress of the Sino-Japanese settlement "from within China and along the Great Wall."

He said, however, that he believed it unlikely "the troops would be used, as we are sure the Chinese intend to fulfill their pledges."

BOLIVIAN HOUSE RATIFIES CHACO PEACE PROTOCOL

LA PAZ, Bolivia, June 21.—(AP)—The Bolivian congress today unanimously ratified the peace protocol signed at Buenos Aires last week, setting up machinery for settlement of the Gran Chaco war.

A formal truce now goes into effect on the Chaco front, where hostilities have been suspended since last Friday at noon, and neutral mediators at Buenos Aires will work out details of demobilization and demilitarization.

ITALY INCREASES AIR FORCE; MOVES TROOPS NORTH

ROME, June 21.—(AP)—An important increase in the Italian air force by July 1 and transfer of an army corps to Bolzano, near the famed Brenner pass—the gateway from Austria—was announced today.

There will be 288 military pilots added to the 1,755 now in the air force by the first of the month. Supplementary personnel, such as service officers and specialists, also is to be increased.

No details were made public concerning the basing of the army corps at the northern frontier post. The announcement limited itself to a statement that a corps formally stationed at Verona was being transferred to Bolzano and one at Florence would be shifted to Verona.

FRANCE REBUFFS BRITISH PLEA ON BIG GERMAN NAVY

ısists on Free Hand to Increase Own Fleet.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 21.—British hopes of converting France to the policy of turning the other cheek when some one slaps you got at least a temporary setback in negotiations between Capt. Anthony Eden of Great Britain and Premier Pierre Laval of France today.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's minister for league of nations affairs arrived in the French capital last night in hopes of talking the French out of their resentment over the recently concluded British-German naval accord and of talking them into making direct concessions themselves.

Talks Broken Off.

The conversations opened this morning at the Quai d'Orsay between Laval, who is also France's foreign minister, and Capt. Eden and two naval experts. There was a break for luncheon with a small company of French diplomatic officials and politicians, followed by another conference at which François Pietri, French naval minister, was present.

Shortly after 3 p. m. it was announced that the conversation suddenly had been broken off and would be resumed tomorrow. It was reported that Laval countered Eden's suggestions with some new proposition which the latter had to submit to London for instructions.

As far as can be learned no progress was made in the negotiations. Laval accepted with more or less good grace Capt. Eden's explanations of the accord, which allows Germany a naval tonnage 35 per cent that of Britain, but was extremely cool to the British suggestion that France send naval experts to London to work out an agreement with the British on their own account.

Keeps Hands Free to Build.

The French premier is understood to have reaffirmed his position, which was stated in a recent memorandum to London, that France intends to keep its hands free to build its navy up to any level considered necessary to insure national security.

Despite this inauspicious beginning, Capt. Eden then calmly proposed that the French give the Germans satisfaction by publicly interpreting the Franco-soviet mutual assistance pact so as to calm German apprehensions that it is directed against them.

He next tried to get Laval to agree to the German idea of an "air Locarno." The French answer to this is understood to have been a reiteration of their thesis that disarmament and security cannot be separated and that, therefore, there is no use talking about an air Lacarno or any other kind of arms accord with Germany until Reichsfuehrer Hitler accepts the proposed eastern European and Danubian security pacts.

Britain Defends Pact.

LONDON, June 21.—The Anglo-German naval agreement was defended before the house of commons today by Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell, first lord of the admiralty.

"The British government," he said, "believes the agreement will be in the ultimate interests of all naval powers, and it is satisfied a serious error would have been committed if it had refused or hesitated to accept Germany's offer.

"It has been suggested that the British government should have refrained from entering this agreement, but we have to face the facts. We have to deal with the essential and practical problem that Germany is already building a fleet which is outside the limits laid down by the Versailles treaty. What we have done is, by agreement with Germany, to circumscribe the effects which might flow from this unilateral decision of Germany."

Answers His Critics.

Answering criticisms that Britain is not entitled to deal with the question of naval limitation independently of land and air disarmament, Eyres-Monsell said the government never has been able to accept this view.

He emphasized, however, that this did not mean that if in the future a general treaty of naval limitation should be concluded the British government would relax in any way its efforts to secure an agreement in regard to land and air armaments.

"On the contrary," Eyres-Monsell said, "the government regards prevention of international competition in all three categories of armaments as a matter of the most urgent importance. The government does not believe in the thesis that progress with the discussion of naval armaments should necessarily be delayed pending further progress with the discussion of land and air armaments."

GERMANY ORDERS NIGHT FETES FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

BERLIN, June 21.—Summer nights were ordered today to be turned into a festival of youth throughout Germany. Boys and girls will gather around traditional midsummer night bonfires to pledge their lives to Reichsfuehrer Hitler and the nation. Athletic events, speeches, and recitals will mark the festival days.

"Even the smallest village shall not exclude itself from athletic events of 1935 which are being carried out in preparation for the Olympic games," said a proclamation signed by Minister of Propaganda Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, Minister of Interior Wilhelm Frick, Minister of Culture Bernhard Rust, Sports Leader Von Tschammer-Osten, and Youth Leader Baldur von Schirach.

The summer holidays will start next Monday. School children have been urged to attend the festivals.

460 Million Naval Bill Is Sent to Roosevelt

Washington, D. C., June 21.—(AP)—The $460,000,000 naval bill, including provision for starting construction of 24 new vessels to bring the navy up to treaty strength, was sent today to the White House. The house and senate adopted the conference report.

SERBIA SENDS FOR CROAT PATRIOT IN CABINET CRISIS

Head of Regency Asks Leader for Help.

BELGRADE, June 21.—(AP)—Dr. Vladko Machek, the oft-jailed Croat patriot, who has many times been called "traitor" to Jugo-Slavia, hurried to Belgrade today to help the government he fought for years settle its newest cabinet crisis.

At conferences tonight with Prince Paul, head of the regency, who summoned him by telephone from Zagreb, Machek offered suggestions for replacement of Premier Bogolyub Yevtich's cabinet, which resigned yesterday over political differences. After his audience with the prince Machek paid a visit to his former bitter enemy, Gen. Zivkovich, minister of war. The general was chiefly responsible for Machek's imprisonment.

A novel rôle it was for the veteran Croat and Slovene leader, who opposed the Belgrade régime unrelentingly all through the late King Alexander's dictatorship.

Rides in Royal Carriage.

For years he had expected only prison terms from Belgrade, and since 1929 he had visited the capital only en route to prison cells. Today, however, a royal automobile met the sumptuous government railway car on which he traveled from Zagreb and took him directly to Dedinje palace, where Prince Paul awaited.

Machek, tired and stubbly of chin but obviously eager for his meeting with the regent, was greeted by crowds at the station who shouted, "Hail freedom! Down with dictatorship!"

While Machek did not divulge his plans, friends said the price of the opposition's coöperation in the new government would be constitutional reforms, new parliamentary elections, and revision of the election law to give minorities just representation. It was also expected the Croats would hold out for some measure of self-government.

Old Quarrel Stirs Crisis.

The old quarrel between Croats and Serbs, Zagreb and Belgrade, which several times flared into violence during the recent parliamentary elections in which the government triumphed, was largely responsible for the Yevtich ministry's resignation.

Inextricably intermingled with internal issues, however, were broader questions of foreign policy, among them the rapidly growing split between pro-French and pro-German factions in Jugo-Slavia.

German and Italian influences immediately began to vie for supremacy. One powerful faction favored a closer approach to the Italian viewpoint for continued coöperation with France and the little entent [Rumania, Jugo-Slavia, and Czechoslovakia]. Another group sided with Germany, favoring more pronounced anti-communist policies in conformity with the German plan for an anti-bolshevik bloc from the Baltic to the Black sea.

A little entente conference, scheduled for Belgrade Saturday, has been canceled, and a proposed meeting between Premier Mussolini of Italy and Premier Yevtich was postponed indefinitly.

MONGOLS EXTORT "BULLET MONEY" FROM TRAVELERS

KALGAN, Inner Mongolia, China, June 21.—(AP)—There's plenty of shooting along the frontier between Outer and Inner Mongolia these days, and every shot hits some one—in the money bag.

Travelers returning here from Outer Mongolia say persons desiring to enter that semi-independent area are halted near the border by mounted Mongol soldiers.

A shot is fired in warning, and afterward the troops approach the traveler or trespasser and collect from him 50 cents in silver or its equivalent to cover the cost of the bullet expended.

This formality over, the traveler is submitted to rigid examination. If he has properly signed papers he is permitted to enter the country. If not he is either arrested on suspicion or turned back.

"The Newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and lead public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."—Chicago Tribune.

EXTEND THE R. O. T. C.

The board of education has under consideration an extension of the Reserve Officers' Training corps in the public schools. The advantages of this training ought to be more widely available. It has been subjected to the persistent attacks of pacifists and of radicals who wish to destroy American institutions and to that end oppose any influence which inspires loyalty and prepares the youth of the nation for its defense from external and internal enemies.

The training of the corps makes for health, for character, for loyal citizenship. The pacifist and radical charge that it fosters a desire for war and a blind obedience to the will of sinister interests alleged to encourage war. These charges have no evidence to support them. The demonstrated effects of the training disprove them. The parents whose children have had the training have had good reason to be grateful for it. The youth themselves will be increasingly grateful for its benefits as time goes on.

The morale of the American people is beset at this time by more influences subversive of the strength and welfare of the nation than have ever attacked it before. If its heritage of liberty and enlightened progress is to be preserved our youth must grow up in manly loyalty to their country. There must be some virile offset to the influences which are trying to undermine loyalty, to teach our youth how to shirk the responsibilities of citizenship, to sneer at the flag, to betray the inheritance which past generations have created and passed on to them at the price of great sacrifice in war and in peace.

The Reserve Officers' Training corps is a school of healthy manhood and of that devoted citizenship upon which the security of our country and its progress in liberty have been founded. The attacks upon it are the best evidence that it is needed and should be extended as widely as practicable. The board of education is made up of loyal Americans and we do not fear it will succumb to the pressure of a handful of subverters and their foolish allies who think to prevent war by making weaklings of American youth. The board can depend upon the good sense and patriotism of the community to approve the maintenance and extension of the training for life and citizenship provided by the R. O. T. C.

PROFIT AND LIBERTY.

In a very able address before the Advertising Federation of America, Mr. John McKinlay, president of Field & Co., said: "A business of the sort I am familiar with consists in making or buying something and selling it at a profit. A profession is rather an opportunity for a career, which, while it should furnish a living, should not have as its standard the accumulation of wealth."

We have heard so much scorn poured upon the profit motive by the doctrinaires of the New Deal that it is refreshing to have it frankly asserted as the object of business enterprise, as it is in fact of most of the activities of mankind. Theorists enjoying the thrill of distributing other men's earnings do not have to take account of it so long as these earnings are available. But the profit motive, which actuates the merchant, the manufacturer, and the farmer, is the essential of all productive enterprise in any free society. The attempt to discredit it and to outlaw it is a part of the conspiracy to substitute a slave state for a society of free men. There is no alternative to the profit motive as the power which keeps the productive energies of a civilized society in motion save force, whether that of an acknowledged dictator or that of a bureaucratic system under one plausible disguise or another.

The profit motive, although condemned as blind and inimical to the common welfare, has produced not only the material essentials of living but the civilized comforts and facilities which mark the progress of civilized mankind. The elimination of profit means the destruction of free enterprise and with it political freedom. It has no substitute but the force of a ruler. Under the profit motive the welfare of the individual has been advanced beyond the attainment of any people subject to the will of a superior, call it divine right or brain trust planning. When political authority absorbs profit under pretense of equalizing the variations of fortune which the variety of conduct and character among men inevitably create, it builds up temporarily its own power to oppress, but it strikes a fatal blow at the productive energies upon which every one, whatever his condition, must depend for livelihood and for hope of betterment.

Any economic enterprise must have profit to survive, to obtain the capital necessary for its equipment, and to procure the means to pay its workers. The buildings in which it operates, the furniture, machinery, and other equipment it must purchase, all mean employment outside its own organization. All its improvements and additions mean employment for other enterprises and other workers. It cannot maintain its own activities, it cannot expand unless it can make profits, and these profits go not only to its own investors and employés but to other investors and employers in enterprises which make and sell the materials it requires.

Out of profits come the employment of the free worker and the continuance of the activity by which he lives. When they are taken by government in the form of taxes they are taken from the worker and the investor whose capital has been embarked in the enterprise from which he draws his livelihood. If the taking is excessive the interest of both is struck down. A free people will put restraints upon the inclination of political government to take their wealth into its hands, for they will understand that it means the end of their freedom.

HALF WAY TO MOSCOW.

It might be worth while to return to the case which settled the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage law, not to reconsider the decision and its relation to constitutional guaranties but to look at the facts and acts involved, to get their relation to certain governmental tendencies. After all, the Frazier-Lemke act was the deliberate work of congress and it received the approval of the President.

A Kentucky farmer had a farm of an appraised value of $18,000. He borrowed $9,000 from a bank, mortgaging the farm and agreeing to pay all taxes and to keep up the fire insurance. Later he defaulted on various payments and was unable or unwilling to keep up the insurance. The bank, in meeting the problem of a bad debt, suggested that the farmer refinance under the emergency farm mortgage act, which could be done at 4½ per cent with no payment on the principal for five years. The farmer didn't want to do this for unstated reasons.

The bank then instituted foreclosure proceedings in a Kentucky court. The court allowed the farmer time to seek relief under the bankruptcy act. Later the bank offered to accept a deed in full satisfaction of the indebtedness and to assume all unpaid taxes. The farmer, first consenting, refused to execute the deed, and upon his refusal, a year ago, the court entered a judgment of foreclosure.

Then the Frazier-Lemke act was brought in. The District court held the act valid, adjudged the farmer bankrupt and referred the case to a referee. The referee's appraisers found the farmer's land worth at that moment $4,445. One alternative under the act was that the creditor consent to the sale of the property to the farmer at this value upon six years' credit. This the bank refused to do. It was thereupon ordered that all proceedings be stayed for five years, that the bank be enjoined from proceeding in any court for that period, and that the farmer should pay a rental of $220 a year and $105 on taxes and insurance.

It is impossible to see how any organization of society could exist upon a theory of personal possessions so conceived and executed in a law which would permit this insecurity. Yet such a law was passed by congressmen now continuing to operate upon the welfare of the United States. Although the Supreme court has ended the life of this particular act, it remains in political records as an index of the purposes of the men running the American government, and their course is not ended.

The idea of private possession revealed in a law permitting one man to take another man's property by legal process, without remuneration or with so little as to be virtually none, would make communism the only refuge for a distracted people. Of course in the farm mortgage instances the matter would have taken care of itself. After the first injustices had run their course there wouldn't have been any farm mortgages. No one would have been able to borrow a dime upon such terms. If it should be the intent of the American government to make no possession secure if any one desires to take it from the owner, communism has been established as the only remaining recourse.

Editorial of the Day

[Baltimore Sun.]

In a letter to Senator McCarran of Nevada, replying to a request for information regarding the treasury's action under the silver purchase act of 1934, Secretary Morgenthau asserted that the rise of the market price of silver to 81 cents in the latter part of April was not the result of "the normal operation of legitimate market forces." He attributed it instead to "manipulation of speculative interests." The subsequent decline in speculation, he added, "has been a wholesome development."

The secretary is right, of course, but his answer will not please the silver bloc in the senate. Mr. Morgenthau could, perhaps, have made a better case for himself and at the same time have put the silver senators on the defensive had he been brutally frank and not cautious and apologetic in his letter. He could have shown that the speculation has been detrimental to American as well as Mexican, Chinese, and East Indian interests. And he could have placed the responsibility for this directly on the doorstep of the silver bloc and the authors of the silver purchase act. In carrying out the policy and purposes of the silver purchase act the President and his secretary of the treasury have been obeying a congressional mandate. Congress must, therefore, share with the administration the responsibility for the consequences of that policy.

To be sure, certain discretion was left to the President and the secretary of the treasury. It was left to them to decide just how much and how often the treasury's price for newly mined domestic silver should be increased to bring it finally to $1.29 an ounce. In the exercise of this discretion, however, the administration was to discover that the manipulation of the price of silver was encouraging speculation and leading to other injurious results. For this reason, apparently, it has hesitated to move farther in that direction for the time being. And because of its inactivity—the treasury price has not been changed for more than six weeks—speculation in the market has also died down and the open market price has tended to sag, which obviously has been to the disadvantage of the mine owners and other influential constituents of the silver senators.

This is the explanation for the sharp demand from the silver bloc that the treasury supply congress with information regarding its action under the silver purchase act. In short, the silver bloc wants to know why the gambling has stopped; that is to say, why the treasury did not increase its price from its present level of 77.57 cents when the gamblers had boosted the market price to 81 cents. To say that the speculation has been "unwholesome" is hardly an adequate answer. Secretary Morgenthau should have shown that the policy the silver bloc insists upon is the cause of this unwholesomeness.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

IT WAS A GREAT SURPRISE to me in a drive through the country down in Indiana the other day to see large lakes spread over the cornfields. The lakes looked big enough not only for rowboats but for small motor boats and maybe two-masted schooners. They're fine lakes, but very poor looking cornfields. What surprised me was that I saw no efforts being made by the AAA to drain the water off those fields and try to rescue the corn that hasn't been drowned. If any. For if the AAA can order corn and wheat and cotton and the little hoggies plowed under in the bountiful years, why don't they do something to rescue the crops in the lean years? If we're going to interfere with nature at one time, then why not at another? I shall speak very angrily to the AAA if the next time I go riding down in Indiana (and I just can't stay out of that state) I don't see fire engines and hydraulic rams and donkey engines and everything else distributed along the road busy pumping those lakes off the cornfields. It ought to be as easy to bail out a cornfield as it is to plow the corn under. Or maybe the CCC could be put to work bailing out the cornfields with buckets. And if the idea is to put plenty of men to work they could use cups. And still more men could be given productive labor by having them use tablespoons. And still more if they used teaspoons. It's a great idea and I expect the AAA to hop to it.

"PROOF DISCOVERED Huge Mastodons Once Roamed in Chicago."—Headline. Once roamed? What do you mean, once roamed? They do yet, probably at night when no one sees them. Of course they do. What else could have stepped on our plans for a subway under Chicago as good as those under New York, Paris, London, Berlin, and even Moscow but something fully as big as a mastodon to crush them clear out of sight? And it certainly must have been a mastodon that stepped on the outer drive and its bridge over the river. Or if it wasn't a mastodon then it was two other mastodons. They don't need to dig up any old bones to prove that mastodons once roamed around this town. They've stepped on too many things for anybody not to know that they're roaming around right now. Else what became of the ideas we once had of fixed bridges over the river instead of drawbridges across the moat, such as the old medieval castles used to have? It must have been a mastodon stepped on those ideas, for nothing else could have crushed 'em so flat. We ought to have mastodon catchers in this town and a mastodon pound so that those big heavy beasts couldn't keep prowling around at night and stepping on the very best plans we make.

"GIMME A DIME, BUDDY," said the tattered man on Oak street yesterday. "I hain't had nuttin' to eat since last Monday and I wanta buy a hot dog and a cuppa mochie an' javvie." I gave him a dime. For all I knew he was a millionaire smitten to the earth by the new "Share the Wealth" order from Washington. And I might have been a guest on his steam yacht some time and drunk a lot of his champagne and eaten of his rare roast beef and truffles and pâté de foie gras. I couldn't take the chance of being ungrateful. This "Share the Wealth" thing has made many changes.

SONNET LXII.

I am the river. Watch my steady pace along a pathway winding now and then through farms and meadows; watch the Queen Anne's lace nodding a lazy greeting; watch the hen come to gaze with each amazing eye upon an image equally appalled;
watch the reeds where I am three feet high bending to my rhythm, and the bald stones more deeply sleeping than you know, friend, lingering on my grassy shore
gazing, like the hen, to where below the unknown lies in peace for evermore.
Come quietly into my being, be released from consciousness, be part of me.

ARCHÆOLOGISTS have found the skeleton of a man in Mammoth Cave who apparently was crushed to death there by the slipping of the rock long before Columbus (or Leif Ericson, either) discovered America. Ah, the Forgotten Man is found at last. But it's too late to do anything for him. R. H. L.

How to Keep Well By Dr. Irving S. Cutter

TONSIL REMOVAL—YES AND NO.

THE summer vacation period is the "open season" for tonsils, and many a child will return to school in the autumn minus these structures. In most cases the child will be better off, but there should be a positive indication for tonsil removal before the procedure is undertaken.

For many years careful investigators have considered the tonsils [a mass of lymphoid tissue] as one of the defense barriers provided by nature against infection. We do know that white blood cells within the tonsils serve as bacteria eaters and this process probably forestalls many infections.

We cannot ignore the fact, however, that the tonsils under certain conditions can and do harbor vicious and life destroying bacteria. It may well be that up to a certain point the tonsils are of value to the growing child. But whenever they are infected they constitute a menace to health, even to life.

There are two obvious indications for tonsil removal: First, mechanical obstruction, and, second, infection. Sometimes the enlargement of these glands interferes with breathing, particularly when the child is lying down. Again, if infected the tonsils may drain poison into the circulation and thus serve as sources of disease in other organs and structures of the body, for example, the kidneys, the heart, and the joints.

The child with infected tonsils will usually give a history of repeated attacks of tonsilitis, of abscesses in the glands, followed by a marked lowering of body resistance. There may not be sufficient poison absorbed to actually interfere with normal growth, but the child's appetite is likely to be finicky, and both sleep and digestion are upset. It is important, therefore, that a careful examination be made before tonsilectomy [surgical removal of tonsils] is advised or undertaken.

A study of 2,200 children by A. D. Kaiser shows that the occurrence of sore throats was reduced from 36 per cent to 10 per cent by tonsil removal. Repeated head colds dropped from 44 per cent to 22, and middle ear infections from 15 to 5 per cent. This latter improvement was apparently due to the fact that enlarged tonsil and adenoid tissue was responsible for blocking the Eustachian tube leading to the middle ear, thus preventing free drainage through this important duct. There was no change in frequency of headaches and attacks of hoarseness [inflammation of the larynx]. In another group of normal children the removal of the tonsils did not influence the number of attacks of sore throat.

Rheumatic fever, which is followed by so much heart damage and which is, therefore, of the greatest importance to health in later life, is less common in children whose tonsils have been removed. A recent survey of 1,200 rheumatic children showed that serious heart disease occurred twice as often in those who still retained their tonsils.

Arthritis shows a striking relationship to the presence of tonsils. In a group of 500 cases of arthritis in adults 90 per cent had their tonsils at the onset of the disease.

It is probably unnecessary to offer a word of caution relative to the care that must be taken in any operation for the removal of tonsils. The patient must be properly prepared and the surgeon must be experienced and careful. The patient should remain in bed at the hospital or in the home for at least three days after the operation.

Yes, diseased and infected tonsils should come out. Caution, however, is needed, lest in our enthusiasm to protect the child we relieve him of a bulwark against bacteria. Slightly enlarged tonsils need not be regarded as a menace unless at the same time some infection is found. We must not leave the decision as to tonsil removal to school nurses or friends, no matter how devoted and sincere they may be.

USE OF RADIUM.

L. L. writes: I have had a continual bleeding from the womb. Though I have had four curettements the bleeding always comes back after two or three months. I have been taking pituitary extract, but my physician says if it does not relieve the bleeding treatment with radium will be necessary. I am afraid of radium. Is it safe to take?

REPLY.

There are several causes of excessive bleeding that must be thought of. 1, some glandular deficiency; 2, polyps in the uterus; 3, overgrowth of the lining membrane of the uterus; 4, tumors such as fibroids; 5, cancer. Either X-ray or radium may be used if the diagnosis shows that it is applicable to your condition, and if you are in the hands of a skilful gynecologist. Occasionally radium is said to be followed by stricture of the cervical canal that may later cause trouble. If a tumor is present radium is not as valuable as expert surgery.

WHOOPING COUGH.

S. A. L. writes: A child with whooping cough stood over a pan of food and barked into it. The mother was about to serve that food to her other children and I urged her not to do so, but she insisted that since the other children had had whooping cough they would not get it again.

REPLY.

As a rule, one attack of whooping cough [pertussis] confers immunity. There are exceptions. If the food was boiling hot the organisms causing pertussis would probably be destroyed. If the food was merely warm or cold it would no doubt carry the infection for a few hours.

NO ACCURATE DATA.

A. L. writes: According to statistics can you inform me what is the average span of life for a person in the early forties who is a sufferer of dementia precox?

REPLY.

So far as is known there is nothing about this type of disease that either lengthens or shortens life. Sometimes these persons are careless as to personal hygiene and hence are likely to acquire infections. On the whole, they do not live the normal span of life. There are no accurate data that I am familiar with on this subject.

LEGALITY OF MARRIAGE.

Cincinnati, O., June 12.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Please advise the states in the central west where marriage of first cousins is permissible. How about Canada? A. R. R.

The general rule (as stated in 38 C. J., 1276) is that "The validity of a marriage is determined by the law of the place where it is contracted. . . . An exception to the general rule, however, is ordinarily made in the case of marriage repugnant to the public policy of the domicile of the parties, in respect of . . . incest."

Under section 1 of the Illinois marriage act, "Marriages . . . between cousins of the first degree (and closer relatives) are declared to be incestuous and void." The marriage evasions law invalidates foreign marriages of Illinois residents who intend to continue to reside here and who are under disability here. While the issue of such marriages are probably to be regarded as legitimate under section 18 of the marriage act, we advise that the parties make such provision by will, etc., as they would make if the marriage were invalid.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CONSERVATORSHIP.

Chicago, June 12.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—In 1923 my sister became insane and was sent to a state hospital. She left an estate of about $800 in a savings account. Another sister was appointed by the Probate court as conservator. Four years later the second sister became insane and was sent to the state hospital. Up until that time she paid the annual premium of $10 to the bonding company, along with purchasing the other sister's clothing. I did not have myself appointed conservator over my second sister's estate because I wanted to see whether she would recover and remain as conservator. For the last four years I have purchased clothing for both of them. Three years ago the bonding company sent their annual bill for $10 and said if it was not paid the liability of the company would cease. Just recently they requested $40 for the four years. As my second sister has not shown any marked improvement I will have to be conservator and sign a new bond. Can the bonding company sue the estate for the $40? There was no money drawn from the bank in the four years since my second sister became insane. J. A.

Since the only asset is held by a presumably responsible bank, we see no necessity for a conservator with the incidental bonding expense. If an attorney was employed in the original proceedings, we suggest that you try to get him to arrange for the bank to hold the money without bond, or if no such attorney is available, who knows the facts, then try taking the matter up with the judge in chambers.

CHILD'S CITIZENSHIP STATUS.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 11.—[Friend of the People.]—An illegitimate child emigrated to this country with its mother in 1880. In 1890 the mother married an American citizen in Chicago. When the mother married the child was 12 years old. Did the child automatically become a citizen or did it not? T. H.

Inquiry is made as to whether an illegitimate child who emigrated to this country with his mother in 1880 and whose mother married an American citizen in 1890, at which time the child was 12 years old, automatically became a citizen. Under the facts stated, the minor child referred to became a citizen through the naturalization of his mother by her marriage to a citizen prior to Sept. 22, 1922, under the laws then in effect. FRED J. SCHLOTFELDT,
District Director of Immigration and Naturalization, Chicago District.

The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Furbay, Ph. D.

Many a poor, "skinny" man has followed the advice of friends who told him to eat more if he wanted to get fat; but his bones continued to protrude in spite of all the increased eating. Physiologists have found that the amount of fat accumulated by individuals is dependent chiefly upon glandular secretions in the body, and not upon the amount that one eats. This is why some people who eat little are fat, and others who eat heavily are thin. As the old saying is, "we were born that way."

FOR HEALTHFUL BEACHES.

Chicago, June 17.—In a recent issue of your paper Dr. Herman Bundesen had a short article warning bathers that they should be careful about getting water in their mouths, especially the water near the shore, for they might become infected with meningitis. He states 225 cases were reported in 1934, against 132 the year before.

Why not place, about ten feet out from shore, an eight inch pipe with half inch holes bored in it, the entire length of the beach, and have this connected with the sewer and a small pump? Then all the scum and filth at the water's edge would be drawn in and the little children would not have to go into deep water to get clear water and they would not subject themselves to any disease near the shore. DR. J. M. NICHOLSON.

THE CHICAGO TAMMANY.

Chicago, June 17.—The slugging of the operators of a small Oak Park florist shop can only be attributed again to the party drunk with power, our Chicago Tammany. Evidently under the pretense of protecting the international locals favored and being organized by State's Attorney Courtney the police of Chicago ran into a bit of difficulty when they invaded one of the cleanest communities of Cook county.

How does our state's attorney explain his stand of purging unions affiliated with the Chicago teamster locals of hoodlums and at the same time protecting sluggings and violence perpetrated by the international teamster locals? Is it possible that he has a personal motive in protecting these unions? M. B.

GRASS ROOTS.

Chicago, June 18.—There has been considerable discussion recently about the origination of the phrase "grass roots." Several newspaper reporters have traced the origin of the expression to certain political orators who were talking up the Springfield convention.

Albert J. Beveridge, in his "Life of John Marshall," published in 1929, used the expression. In chapter one Mr. Beveridge remarked that John Marshall and Thomas Jefferson came from a very remarkable parentage; that Jefferson's mother and Marshall's grandmother were first cousins; that Thomas Jefferson's mother was Jane Randolph of the Isham Randolphs of Turkey Island. "So, when Jane Randolph became the wife of Peter Jefferson, a man from the grass roots, the result was Thomas Jefferson."

THE WAY OF DICTATORS.

Chicago, June 16.—Let us have more of the cartoons like the one entitled "The Neighborhood Nuisance Is Loose Again." Also, let us have more of the powerful editorials like the one entitled "Il Duce Grows Panicky." I hope you will never let up until your Rome correspondent and the insult to this American citizen have been fully and completely avenged.

HENRY J. BARTON, LL. B.

REFLECTION.

Chicago, June 15.—My sympathy in the case of the Dionne family goes out to the older children. Can it be possible that the bright light of the quints puts them in the shade entirely? How much does a mother think of a year old baby and four other tiny children when she puts in an order for the sixth? And poor besides. [In this case it turned out to be quintuplets and that accident proved a good investment.] I cannot imagine the feelings of people who dare to bring a baby into the world when they are not making a success of life and have already quite a tribe.

This letter is the culmination of months of thinking and lots of discussion with friends who think as I do.

THE PULLING CONTEST.

Bloomington, Ill., June 17.—To me the horse pulling contest held on the Tribune farms was an event I shall always remember. All my life I have attended horse shows and horse races, but I never derived the satisfaction from them I did from Saturday's performance.

Breeding and horse sense combined with the courage and power displayed by the magnificent tons of horse flesh left one with something worth while to remember.

Not pampered, petted animals but powerful, intelligent, courageous animals created to serve the human race.

My impression was that every man, woman, and child present received a thrill which they, too, will long remember. H. H. MILLER.

EARLY VEGETABLES.

Elmhurst, Ill., June 18.—I have been reading your "Day by Day Story of the Experimental Farms" regularly and find them at times very interesting. May I inform you that I have been picking head lettuce, water cress and radishes for the last four weeks, and at this time have ready to eat the following vegetables: Beets, green peas, head and leaf lettuce, red and white radishes, spinach, Swiss chard, green onions, and that my golden bantam corn is 14 or 15 inches tall? Come and see.

PROGRESSIVE LIGHTS.

Chicago, June 18.—Washington boulevard and Warren boulevard are one way streets from Garfield park to Union park, so why cannot the lights be arranged so that motorists driving at some moderate rate can proceed the entire distance without making stops?

I drive this trip twice daily and have selected speeds from twenty to thirty-five miles per hour and find none of them work out.

Under present conditions drivers spurt away from the lights and run at high speed to try to beat the next light and unfortunately a great many of the times they do so. D. E. R.

MOTHER JAILED FOR REFUSING TO SURRENDER CHILD

Charges Threats; Defies Court Mandate.

Rather than reveal the whereabouts of her 4 year old daughter, and thereby allow her husband to gain custody of the child, Mrs. Birdie Reeves Roberts, 29 years old, allowed herself to be taken to the county jail last evening under a six months' sentence for contempt of court.

Mrs. Roberts, who lives at 5421 Lake Park avenue, was committed to jail by Judge Francis Allegretti of the Superior court, with the stipulation that the sentence be vacated as soon as she would tell where the little girl, Hope, is being kept.

The woman, a small, slender, brunette; maintained that her estranged husband, Herman, an advertising agent, had threatened both herself and the little girl.

Acts "to Protect Child."

"I know I am wrong where the law is involved," she said, "but I feel it is my duty to take such action to protect the child."

The Robertses separated Oct. 28, 1931. Subsequently Mrs. Roberts instituted divorce proceedings, charging cruelty and desertion. She was allowed $5 a week temporary alimony and custody of the child provided that Roberts could see the little girl when he wished.

A hearing on the divorce bill was held last week at which, Mrs. Roberts said, the judge indicated the divorce would be granted, but did not sign the decree.

Yesterday Roberts, with his attorney, Irving Eisenman, came before Judge Allegretti alleging that he had not been allowed to see the little girl for the last year and a half, despite the court order, and despite the fact that the alimony payments had been kept up. He asked an order giving him custody of his daughter.

Grants Change of Custody.

Mrs. Roberts denied that her husband had paid more than $30 for the support of the little girl, but Judge Allegretti declared the change of custody would be granted. Then he asked the mother:

"Where is the child?"

Despite threats of jail, Mrs. Roberts restricted her answers to "I don't know," and "With friends."

Judge Allegretti pointed out that, if it developed the allmony had not been paid, Roberts could be punished by law, but Mrs. Roberts had no right to take the law into her hands in concealing the child. She remained obdurate, however, and the jail sentence followed.

SISTERS MAY GO TO PRISON FOR DODGING COURT

New York, June 21.—(AP)—Two sisters tonight faced the possibility of $5,000 fines or five years' imprisonment or both because they allegedly went from New York into New Jersey rather than testify against their brother who is charged with the murder of the husband of one of the sisters.

The women, Mrs. Julia Dennis, 22, and Cora Graham, 24, were arraigned in federal court on charges of violating the federal statute, an outgrowth of the Lindbergh case, which makes it a felony to cross a state border to avoid testifying in a felony case.

The sisters' brother James is charged with stabbing to death Mrs. Dennis' husband in an argument over 50 cents last August as Mrs. Dennis, her baby in her arms, watched and screamed.

The two sisters were placed under $1,000 bonds for a hearing July 5.

CHILDREN SHARE THEIR BOOKS FOR ISOLATED AREAS

Public school pupils in Cook, Lake, and Du Page counties are contributing to a "share a book shelf" campaign conducted by the Junior Red Cross to provide reading material for young people in isolated regions. Several thousand books contributed already are being shipped to superintendents of schools in remote Montana and New Mexico counties, according to Miss Jean McKeever, 4513 North Paulina street, chairman of the committee in charge.

ROBBERS SEIZE $1,107 IN RAID ON FACTORY OFFICE

Two armed men yesterday entered the office of the Daval Manufacturing company at 200 South Peoria street, threatened eleven employés and escaped in an automobile with $1,107, the company pay roll. William Shafran, 1236 Columbia avenue, treasurer of the company, told the Desplaines street police that he had just returned with the money from a bank when the robbers appeared.

Judge Denis E. Sullivan Named to Appellate Bench

Denis E. Sullivan, chief justice of the Criminal court, was notified yesterday that he had been appointed to the Appellate court. He is to take office on Aug. 1 to replace Judge Francis Wilson, who will enter the State Supreme court to fill the De Young vacancy after the July 1 judicial election. Judge Wilson is the only candidate. Judge Sullivan entered an order yesterday appointing Judge Cornelius J. Harrington to act as chief justice of the Criminal court until Labor day, when a new chief justice will take office.

Legion Opens Ticket Drive for July 4th Celebration

The Cook County council of the American Legion yesterday launched a drive to sell 75,000 general admission tickets to the July Fourth celebration to be staged in Soldiers' field under auspices of the council. Athletic drills, mass military and aeronautical maneuvers, and a fireworks display will be included in the celebration program to be held in the evening.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

By Bob Becker

Some New 'Adventures'

June 21, 1935.

THE test plot on the Wheaton farm, where many different kinds of things are being grown as an experiment, is beginning to look like something these days. Behind this planted area is found one of the principal objectives of the experimental farm—to find new crops that can be grown here in the middle west by farmers—crops that are practical and profitable to the farmer. Just as last season scores of different varieties of corns, legumes, and other things were grown, checked, and either found practical or impractical, so this season the farm has a number of "adventures" in agriculture represented in the test plots.

Looking at this tract of ground the other day I noticed that the flax is 'way up. This plant, which produces a valuable commercial product, is about 8 inches above the ground. The whippoorwill cowpeas [sometimes called "singing" cowpeas by the boys on the farm last season] have grown faster than the Ramshorn variety. Corn hybrid No. 13 is higher than hybrid 368. There is a test plot planted to peanuts which now is showing green. But it is too early, of course, to know what is what. Autumn will tell the story of these plantings.

I never get tired of looking at the Muscovy ducks that are on the pond at the Wheaton farm. The ducklings are having more fun this year than those which hatched out last season, because the 1935 crop of young ones can cruise around on a small body of water, whereas last season the little paddlers were kept in close quarters.

There are fifty-seven Muscovies on Moon pond this week. The oldest bunch is almost as large as the parent birds. Then there are many newly hatched ducklings.

I noticed that the oldest ducks maintain a sort of aloof attitude toward the young ones. They don't care to associate with the small ducklings. So there is a clannish spirit among these Muscovies as they muck around in the shallow water, hold their aquatic maneuvers, and generally lead a life that ought to be ideal for any duck.

Soon another family of Muscovies will be put on this pond. This group numbers twelve. Right now this family is something of a problem in the poultry yard because the old bird persists in taking her family to the chicken yard to feed with the Barred Rocks, instead of getting meals where all well behaved Muscovy ducks are supposed to take their food.

Mrs. Thurow was "pointing with pride" yesterday to her lovely roses, which are in blossom. They are taking the place of the big peonies that have faded after lending their color and fragrance to the garden. Her hollyhocks are growing very fast this season. I was noticing the healthy condition of the locust trees which were planted on the Yorkville farm last season. They are fairly shooting up this year. Last spring when they were planted the boys had to water them by hand to keep them alive during those scorching hot, rainless days of the drouth.

Clarence was saying yesterday that there will be a regular three ring "farm circus" going on the Yorkville farm before long. The three activities that will keep everybody busy and be under way possibly at the same time will be cutting alfalfa, planting soy beans, and cultivating corn.

TWO OF FAMILY DIE IN CRASH ON VACATION TOUR

Three Others Hurt in Collision.

Rudolph Mans, 67 years old, and his daughter, Ida, 44 years old, both of McKeesport, Pa., were killed yesterday and three other members of the family were seriously hurt when their car collided with a taxicab at the Northwest highway and Parkway drive in Arlington Heights.

The Mans family were on their way to Wisconsin for a vacation and the accident occurred when Mans swung the car left from the highway into Parkway drive.

Cab Driver Unhurt.

The cab, owned and driven by Alfred Haemaker, 30 years old, 403 Hawthorne avenue, Arlington, was overturned, but Haemaker himself escaped injury.

He was taken into custody by police, but released on bonds until the inquest today. Other members of the Mans family who were injured and taken to the Palatine hospital are: Walter Mans, son of the dead man; his wife, Helen, 33 years old, and their son, Walter Jr., 9 years old.

Liquor Truck Kills Boy.

Peter Stellos, 5 years old, 742 South St. Louis avenue, was crossing the street in front of 3457 Harrison street with his mother, when he was struck and killed by the truck of Robert Klauer, 5916 Patterson avenue. Klauer was held by Fillmore police for the inquest today.

Harry A. Huber, 40 years old, of Freeport, was killed yesterday and his two companions seriously injured when their car crashed into an electric light pole at 46th street and South Park way.

The Cook county motor toll for 1935 stood yesterday at 424. Up to 4 p. m. 341 persons had been killed within the city limits since the first of the year, and 7,246 had been injured.

RETIRED PASTOR MISSING 3 DAYS FROM HIS HOME

Police and friends joined yesterday in the search for the Rev. George Schwartz, 71 years old, retired pastor of the Englewood Evangelical church, who has been missing from his home at 6640 South Sangamon street since Tuesday. The Rev. Mr. Schwartz, a clergyman for 47 years, was formerly secretary of the Illinois conference of Evangelical churches.

When he left home on Tuesday he told his daughter, Mrs. Grace Weinmann, that he was going to visit some of his former parishioners.

Only one person has reported seeing the elderly minister since that time. Marcella Grael, 10 years old, 6741 South Peoria street, who knew the Rev. Mr. Schwartz, said she saw him Tuesday noon at Marquette road and Peoria street and later in the afternoon again saw him on Peoria street. The girl said that he recognized her and spoke to her and then walked in the direction of his home.

CITY HANDS OUT $703,000 BACK PAY FOR COURT

Checks Issued to Judges and Employes.

The city began paying out $703,882 yesterday to 52 judges and former judges of the Municipal court and to 1,048 other employés and former employés of the court to restore salary reductions imposed under the city's economy program from Jan. 1, 1932, to June 2, 1935.

Checks were issued for all of the 52 judges and former judges, although in May, 1933, twenty-six of the thirty-six judges then sitting in the court stated publicly that they would accept the pay reductions for the good of the city, together with all other city employés.

Judge Lyle's Pay Tied Up.

As the checks were being given out Circuit Judge Benjamin P. Epstein issued an injunction tying up the share of the money destined for Municipal Judge John H. Lyle. Judge Lyle led a court fight which brought a writ of mandamus forcing the city council to appropriate for the pay restoration, despite the fact that the action unbalanced the city budget for this year.

The restraining order affecting Judge Lyle was gained by William L. O'Connell, receiver for the Commonwealth Trust and Savings bank, on the strength of a creditor's bill for $2,297 which Judge Lyle allegedly owes on a bank loan.

Of the total amount ordered paid out yesterday $176,710 will go to the judges, $284,015 to the employés in the office of the court clerk, and $243,157 to employés in the bailiff's office.

Fee for Attorney Withheld.

Approximately $70,000 was withheld from the payment by City Controler Robert B. Upham, to assure satisfaction of an attorney's lien held by James W. Breen, who represented the judges and the court employés in the successful mandamus proceedings.

Twenty of the judges signed an agreement that 10 per cent of their pay be withheld until Breen's fee is paid. Twenty judges refused to sign such an agreement, and the corporation counsel advised Upham to withhold 25 per cent of their back pay until court action instituted by Breen to recover his fee is settled. The remaining court employés agreed that 7½ per cent of their back pay should be held pending settlement of the fee.

The city was able to meet the extra load of Municipal court back pay yesterday because the Commonwealth Edison company paid to the city treasury $2,334,000 compensation under its franchise ten days in advance, Mr. Upham said. The annual compensation, representing a percentage of the company's gross earnings for the fiscal year, was not due until July 1.

Deficit to Be Made Up.

Money to make up the deficit in the compensation payment caused by paying the court employés will be restored when additional taxes are collected under the city's 1935 pegged levy, approved by the legislature, but awaiting the governor's signature. Part of the need for boosting the city's tax bill under the pegged levy was occasioned by the Municipal court pay demands, aldermen declared in debating the measure in the council.

DEMANDS INQUIRY ON CHARGES FOR CRADLE PHONES

The city council yesterday referred to the committee on utilities a resolution introduced by Ald. Berthold A. Cronson [4th], chairman of the committee, calling for an investigation to determine whether cradle telephones cannot be supplied to all telephone users who desire them without additional charge.

At present the Illinois Bell Telephone company makes a charge for the use of cradle sets. The company should afford its subscribers the best possible instruments and service without additional cost, the resolution said. Ald. Cronson asked that his committee be empowered to make an investigation and conduct hearings if necessary.

The council approved an ordinance designating Sept. 9 as tag day for miscellaneous charities, and Oct. 7 as tag day for the Children's Benefit league. It referred to the committee on tag days the resolution of Ald. Arthur G. Lindell [9th] to abolish all tag days and substitute a general charity drive.

Ald. J. M. Arvey [24th] announced that the council would hold meetings throughout July to take action under various enabling legislation approved at Springfield. Ordinarily the council vacation begins in July.

HAYES SETTLES ALIMONY FIGHT WITH PROPERTY

The alimony dispute between Howard W. Hayes, former Municipal judge, and Mrs. Grace Houston, 180 East Delaware place, who divorced him on April 30, 1918, was apparently ended yesterday.

Circuit Judge Philip J. Finnegan approved an arrangement whereby Mrs. Houston will waive further payments and will receive a quit claim deed to a 12 apartment building at 5401 Harper avenue, $3,000 in cash, and $175 in alimony arrears. Hayes has agreed to pay $350 at once and the rest at the rate of $50 a month.

Hayes, a lawyer, now lives with his fourth wife and their two children at 4840 Kimbark avenue. When Mrs. Houston divorced him he was ordered to pay her $225 a month. In March, 1933, the payments were reduced to $100 a month.

Brings Suit to Divorce Attorney William Murphy

Mrs. Dorothy B. Murphy of Oakland, Cal., filed suit in the Circuit court yesterday to divorce William H. Murphy, an attorney with offices at 120 South La Salle street. She alleges in her bill, drawn by Attorney Benjamin Davis, that Murphy deserted her in 1933, less than four years after their marriage in Reno, Nev. She asks custody of their two small daughters.

POLICE TO START ENFORCING LOOP NO PARKING LAW

Campaign Will Begin July 1.

Police Commissioner Allman announced last night that the police department will launch a campaign to enforce the city's parking ordinances in the loop area beginning Monday, July 1.

"I am making an announcement of the drive now, so that the public will have plenty of warning and sufficient time to become convinced that we mean business before we begin handing out tickets," the commissioner said. "Since the public is being warned in advance, there will be no excuse for infraction of the ordinances on July 1, and no one will be given a second chance.

Many Complaints of Violations.

"For some time complaints have been coming to my office that the no parking signs in the loop were being ignored and that there were violations of the parking ordinances in all directions.

"We have realized the truth of these complaints, but were handicapped because our policemen were required to handle trafic at detours, where streets were under construction and repair, and other emergencies limited our man power.

"Now, however, we are ready to act. On July 1 we will have our normal strength of police in the loop to handle the trafic, and if this force is not sufficient we'll send special details into the loop to see that the law is obeyed.

Signs Mean What They Say.

"Parking on streets which bear 'no parking' signs, parking too near intersections, on bridges, and under viaducts will not be tolerated. There are sufficient signs on the streets to give the public ample warning concerning the no parking zones. These signs will mean what they say.

"When we have cleaned up the bad trafic situation in the loop, and convinced the public that it will stay cleaned up, we'll concentrate our men in congested neighborhood areas where parking rules are being ignored."

GOOD WILL PARTY FROM MEXICO ON TOUR OF CHICAGO

Gen. José Mijares Palencia, governor of the state of Puebla, Mexico, good will ambassador of the Mexican republic, arrived in Chicago yesterday with his official party en route from New York to the San Diego fair.

He was greeted by Cosme Hinojosa Jr., Mexican vice consul in Chicago, and by city officials. Escorted by Police Captain Ira McDowell, Gen. Palencia visited the stockyards as the guest of Sheldon Clark. The general's party will remain at the Blackstone hotel until tomorrow, when the trip to San Diego will be resumed. A Shriner, Gen. Palencia attended the convention of that order at Washington.

Other members of the party are Alejandra Peniche Sierra, private secretary to the governor; Cosme Zafra Nava, president of the Puebla Supreme court; Maj. Raul de Alba, chief of police of Puebla; Francisco Ruiz Palencia, director of the state penitentiary, and Representatives Ernesto Espinosa Iglesias and Carlos Rios.

COUGHLIN SUIT HEARING IS SET FOR NEXT WEEK

Superior Judge James J. Kelly yesterday set Thursday for the hearing of a demurrer to the suit of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, for a writ of mandamus to compel the Chicago park board to rent Soldiers' field to him for a massmeeting of the National Union for Social Justice.

Agreement to the delay was reached after Attorney Samuel A. Ettelson for Father Coughlin had accused attorneys for the park board of "stalling," in order to prevent the holding of the proposed meeting.

The park board attorneys agreed, in the event Judge Kelly overrules the demurrer, to file an answer to Father Coughlin's suit on Friday, and to be prepared for a trial of the case on its merits on July 2.

Father Coughlin has twice been refused the use of Soldiers' field for the massmeeting on the ground that it is against the principles of the Chicago park board to permit use of the Stadium for meetings of a political or controversial nature. The board's demurrer is based principally on the plea that Father Coughlin is not a citizen of Illinois and is thus ineligible to press the mandamus action.

Dean Wigmore of N. U. Returns from Japan

Prof. John H. Wigmore, dean emeritus of the Northwestern university school of law, returned yesterday from a trip to Japan, where he has been organizing a plan to complete the translation and editing of Japanese records of justice for the period 1600 to 1860. Prof. Wigmore started this work in 1889, when he was professor of law at Keio university, but left it unfinished when he returned to the United States a few years ago. Japanese officials have requested him to complete the task.

'Only the Fear' Has Quality, but Is Not Genius

Alice Rosman's "Sleeping Child" Pleases.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Only the Fear," by Lenore G. Marshall. [Macmillan.] Published on Tuesday.

"The Sleeping Child," by Alice Grant Rosman. [Minton-Balch.] Published yesterday.

"Life and Sport in Aiken," by Harry Worcester Smith. [Derrydale Press.]

TWO novels, one a first, and two source books for possible future novels come to us this week. Readers have—and rightly—an alert interest in first novels. When they discover a really good novelist they bask in their own perspicacity. They will not find in Lenore G. Marshall, author of "Only the Fear," another John O'Hara or another Josephine Johnson, but they will find in her some one to watch with something of the interest which both of those spectacular young authors of last year excited in their admirers.

Her method is halfway between those two opposed fictionists. It has something of the incisive modern interest in facts that made "Appointment in Samarra" something to remember (except that her facts are those of mental, not physical, reactions). And it also has, at times, something of the interest in the beautiful use of beautiful words that made "Now in November" something never to forget.

"Only the Fear" is a strange book, concerned with the presence of the fear of madness in a supersensitive woman. At the beginning of the book she learns that her husband has been unfaithful to her. At the end of the book she has been unfaithful to him. In between she has gone through concentric rings of torture: on account of the other woman; on account of the strong appeal which her doctor makes; on account of her resistance to that appeal; . . . on and on, each torture creating its subsequent torture, and all of it egocentric. She lives in an "artistic" community in Connecticut, not hard to recognize by those in the know, and many of the characters are very thinly disguised actual persons, like the incomparably sharp tongued lady who was always slitting her wrists for love, but conveniently always stopping this side of suicide.

There are parties which are photographically recorded, but which (perhaps for that very reason) make very dull reading. "Only the Fear" has some quality, but not enough to make the critics shout over Miss Marshall's genius.

NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Oddly enough, a little book which throws light on Miss Marshall's involved tale was published on Thursday. It is called "Nervous Breakdown" [Doubleday-Doran]. It is a reprint in book form of the long article written "by the editors of Fortune" (as all of the articles in that de luxe magazine are labeled) which collates everything which intelligent and well trained newsgetters could gather about one of the most prevalent of American curses.

The authors (or author) did not pretend to expound any theories. They merely gathered from authentic sources whatever material they could find about the nervous breakdown. They then submitted their lay synthesis to experts in the field of psychiatry for correction, and they have printed as footnotes these corrections. It is an extremely interesting little book, and it assures the nervous, among other things, that "a nervous breakdown rarely crosses the boundary into insanity."

A PLEASANT STORY

But to return to our novels. Alice Grant Rosman, the author of "The Sleeping Child," makes not one single pretense to writing imperishable prose or masterpieces of fiction. She writes to entertain, and that she does and has done conscientiously ever since her first novel, "The Window," in 1928. Her tales are always pleasant ones which do not offend those sensitive to morals, to style, nor to sentiment. Her people are always "nice," but never sickeningly nice. She writes with a special ease. Her characters talk neither brilliantly nor dully, but with a definite zest. In a word, Alice Grant Rosman writes that all-around pleasant kind of tale that used to be labeled "hammoc novel" in the days when more people kept a couple of trees to swing under.

Her latest, "The Sleeping Child," will not disappoint any of her admirers, and, as all of its predecessors have done, will win her more. It is a story of young love (like the others), this time complicated by a tragedy which happened when the girl was a child. Her father shot and killed her mother and himself, and the aunt and uncle who dopted the child and made her as much their own as their own three daughters never knew whether the child had slept through the tragedy or had been deeply marked by it beneath her pleasant cheerfulness. How that tragedy nearly wrecked her love (but, of course, didn't) makes a thoroughly pleasant afternoon's or evening's entertainment or diversion, or both.

"The Sleeping Child" ran serially in THE CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE from April 22 to June 10, 1935.

Now American Critics are Lauding It!

Mystery of the Week
BY MORTIMER QUICK

John Rhode can always be relied upon for a good solid detective story and in "Shot at Dawn" [Dodd, Mead] he continues to deliver the goods. That sterling character, Inspector Hanslet of Scotland Yard, is on the job, bewildered but undaunted, and pursues his usual course of telling Dr. Priestly all about it at approximately page 111. Whereupon the doctor, also as usual, tells Hanslet in essence, to go chase himself and after a series of abstruse experiments whistles him back and rubs his nose in the guilty party.

This doesn't make the story sound so good, but it really is excellent.

A yachtsman is killed by what seems an incredibly long and accurate rifle shot and without apparent rime or reason, and the plot is unfolded with logic and skill. Say what you like about the newer departures in mystery story writing, the old timers have a masterly way of handling murder, its cause and effect. They may have reduced the art to a business, but their setup, their detail, their sequence is always admirable. Of this school Rhode is a notable example and Dr. Priestly, his secretary, Harold Merefield, and the faintly pompous and comic Hanslet are well on their road to fame.

Of a different stamp is the highly melodramatic "Murder in Haste" [Stokes] by Garnett Weston. It fairly reeks with murder in its more blatant forms and turns a peaceful California valley into a fear ridden death trap. It's pretty coincidental and exploits one of those beautiful girls who the author claims is bright but who, in the reader's sight, pulls one boner after the other. On the whole it's not such a very good book, but it packs more incident and excitement than anything I've read in a month of Sundays. I read it in haste and so, I think, will you without repenting at leisure the hours spent in mad, romantic pursuit of an unsuspected and ingenious murderer.

Once or twice the author doesn't play fair, the heroine is hardy for one so young, and Highway, the man from Nowhere, who delivers the solution, is pretty incredible, but, shucks, where are you going to find romance these days if not in a good hearty story of multiple murder and love at first sight?

AIKEN—A HORSE CENTER

There is no entertainment, no diversion, so exciting to the person who loves horses as being with them, on them, or watching them.

There is at least one place in America where horses are not only kings of the turf but kings of their owners' days and nights, where the very map is made over by man for the enjoyment of riding, where children are taught to ride as soon as they can sit up straight, where balls and luncheons and breakfasts are hunt balls and hunt luncheons and hunt breakfasts.

That place is Aiken, in South Carolina, where Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, until her death, fostered the ideals of horsemanship and sportsmanship to a degree which would put even the sporting English on their mettle.

Harry Worcester Smith, an old friend of Mrs. Hitchcock's, a beloved figure in Aiken, has written about her and the place he obviously loves best on earth in "Life and Sport in Aiken."

To any one who knows Aiken it is nostalgic. To those who love horses it records the truly happy hunting grounds. To readers who are not horse minded it is a book filled with amazing information about how some of the other half lives. And, since most readers belong to the latter class, "Life and Sport in Aiken" will be of interest chiefly as a source book filled with an infinitude of details of a seldom recorded life. It is valuable as such a record, as the source of material for literature rather than as literature itself.

Gigantic Novel by Mackenzie Nearly Finished

"Four Winds of Love" Has 400,000 Words.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—News reaches London from the outer Hebrides that Compton Mackenzie is within hailing distance of the end of his gigantic novel, "The Four Winds of Love," which will eventually be published by Cassell. I am credibly informed that this book will contain four hundred thousand words, which means that it will be as long as four ordinary books put together, and twice as long as most recent best sellers.

Naturally, it is a very ambitious work, and the author has been working upon it very devotedly for a long time. He will be disappointed if it is not regarded as his best book. And so shall I.

Meanwhile Mr. Mackenzie is building a new house for himself on the Isle of Barra, which he hopes to have ready for occupation by next year.

Miss Berta Ruck, who is Mrs. Oliver Onions, has been writing her reminiscences, which will shortly be published. They should be interesting, for Miss Ruck has had a varied experience and a wide acquaintance with all sorts of interesting people. She comes of a military family, but she early showed an artistic bent, and prevailed upon her father to let her study art.

I believe that it was while she was at the Slade school that she met her future husband, who at that time was also an art student. Later she discovered a talent for writing simple, lively, unaffected novelettes; and it was this talent which caused her name to become familiar to thousands of readers to whom more abstruse forms of fiction are bewildering. She brought to this work altogether exceptional lightness of touch, and if readers of today are less unsophisticated, so that they demand stronger meat, that does not affect the original success of such tales as "His Official Fiancée" and "The Bride Who Ran Away," etc.

For a young author Laurence Meynell must hold a record for pseudonyms and versatility. He began by winning a prize for a book called "Mockbeggar" when he could hardly have been out of his teens. Then, a few years later, he launched into the "thriller" class with a book called "Bluefeather." It was a success and has been followed by other books of a similar character.

But Mr. Meynell desires higher things, so last year he was reborn under the name Robert Eton when he wrote a serious novel named "The Pattern." As Robert Eton he attracted the praise of James Hilton, and as Robert Eton he now publishes a new serious novel entitled "The Dividing Air," a study of the effect upon a happy English village of publicity through the radio.

Under another pen name Mr. Meynell published last year a humorous novel, "Inside Out!" which was said to be by Geoffrey Ludlow. Such industry is rare, and Messrs. Harrap, the publishers, must wonder what kind of book they will next receive from so baffling a scribe.

Mary Borden Writes Stirring Story of Jesus

BY EDITH WEIGLE.

"King of the Jews," by Mary Borden. [Little, Brown & Co.]

"Jesus," by Edmond Fleg. [Dutton.]

BOOKS about the Christ are, of necessity, in a class by themselves. The two books recently published cannot be called either novels or biography, although they have something of both in their treatment. They are alike in their intensity of expression, their deep, powerful, moving sweep of thought; also, in their strong dramatic quality.

In the story by Mary Borden the character of Mary Magdalene is more vivid, more quick with life, than that of Jesus himself. The author has projected her mind against the background of the times in which the great drama took place, repeating the age worn incidents so that they appear in proper scale, as it were.

In picturing Pilate she shows why he acted as he did; what customs and circumstances governed him. She portrays Peter in his fright and makes his weakness and his betrayal of Jesus understandable, in character. Even Judas is made human. But above them all looms the Magdalene with her blind, overwhelming devotion to the only man who gave her any help in life. Her watch by the tomb and her meeting with the Christ in the garden there are described with exquisite beauty. Equally inspiring is the story of the walk to Emmaus, where Jesus appears to his disciples and talks to them.

The author does not stray from the Bible version of these events. In limiting her book to the period immediately following the crucifixion, rather than encompassing the entire life of Jesus, she has gained unity and force. She states that although she has consulted many histories and writings [a complete bibliography is given at the end of the book] the English Bible has supplied her only authoritative documents bearing on her central theme. The story Mary Borden tells is as radiantly beautiful as it is fascinating.

Edmond Fleg, in his account, uses a method that will appeal to some readers, while to others it will detract from the veracity of this record of the life of the Man of Nazareth. He indulges in an imaginary conversation with none other than the Wandering Jew, the man Christ cursed with an endless life because he refused to help him carry his cross.

Mr. Fleg pictures himself as a visitor to modern Jerusalem. Here he meets a strange shadow who starts describing to him the biblical events as they really transpired, as they were witnessed by one who was present at the time. Strangely awed, he inquires of his escort how he knows these things with such certainty and is told he is speaking to the Wandering Jew, now almost 2,000 years old.

The book, then, is the record of the works of Jesus as narrated by this weird individual. He makes Jesus himself a figure of mystery, yet one of tremendous power; not the meek, lowly Christ, but the Messiah. It was impossible to look long at his face, he says, because of the unearthly, piercing quality of the eyes. Your own fell before that gaze.

Mr. Fleg's book moves swiftly, is extremely dramatic. Both this tale and the one by Mary Borden lift the reader completely out of this present day world, which is saying a good deal for any narrative.

IMPORTANT BOOKS OUT THIS WEEK

FICTION.

The Dark Glass, by March Cost [Knopf], is a fantasy of the transformation for All Souls' eve of a guest houseful of English men and women.

Strangers in the House, by Jane Abbott [Lippincott], tells the story of a woman whose life seemed to be centered round the lives of her daughters until a former lover returns.

Bedroom Eyes, by Maurice Dekobra [Macaulay], is another witty story making laughter out of scandal by the author of "The Madonna of the Sleeping Car."

NON-FICTION.

A Panorama of German Literature, by Felix Bertaux [McGraw-Hill], is a critical and historical estimate of the main tendencies and developments in German literature since 1871.

Modern Criminal Investigation, by Dr. Harry Soderman and John J. O'Connell [Funk & Wagnalls], covers many phases of police science.

Democratic Governments in Europe, by Raymond Leslie Buell, Eugene D. Chase, and Robert Valeur [Nelson], tells of the governments of England, France, and Switzerland.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

Man of Aran, by Pat Mullen [Dutton], is an epic saga of the struggle of the islanders to get a living from the barren, soilless land of the Island of Aran. It is the story behind the famous film.

Kit Carson Days, by Edwin L. Sabin [Press of the Pioneers], tells the adventures of the exciting days from 1809 to 1868 and is a new and revised edition of the author's work which was previously published in 1914.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

M. V. K.: You're tired of hearing biggest about everything American and you want to know if we don't ever do something in miniature? Well, the other day I heard about the smallest printed book in the world. It was printed by the Commonwealth Press of Worcester, Mass., and it is so small that a dozen or more copies can be HIDDEN in an ordinary sewing thimble. The title is the "Rose Garden of Omar Khayyam." If you want a copy you'd better hurry, because only 150 were for sale. You get a magnifying glass free, but you won't need it to see the price, $55.

THE latest backwoods story reported concerns the Kentuckian who asked an acquaintance what had become of his brother.

"He has gone to Galesburg to go to school at Knox," replied the brother.

"Why didn't he go to Dallas City to school?" inquired the Kentuckian.

"He did," the brother answered.

"Then why didn't he go to the Dallas City High school?" persisted the backwoodsman.

The brother assured him that he had done so.

"Do you mean to tell me that he went to the Dallas regular school and then to the Dallas High school, and now he's going to school some more?" the Kentuckian asked.

"That's right," affirmed the brother.

"Well, for land's sake, what reader is he in?" inquired the astonished backwoodsman.

Other Chicagoans to Take Wedding Vows.

BY JUDITH CASS.

TODAY brings several weddings, including that of Miss Jean Cudahy Wilhelm and C. Daggett Harvey, who will be married at 5 o'clock by the Rev. Father Edward J. Mullaly of St. Mary church, in the garden—weather permitting—of the Lake Forest estate Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Wilhelm and their family are occupying this summer.

That it will be a beautiful wedding, if only the sun shines, is not doubted by any one who remembers the marriage ten years ago of Miss Roberta Thorne and G. Corson Ellis, for that took place in the same gardens, colorful then with autumn flowers, and it still is remembered as one of the loveliest Chicagoans ever have witnessed. It is the Robert J. Thorne place in Lake Forest that the Wilhelms have this season.

It will be a beautiful wedding today even if the weather doesn't permit it to be a garden one, for the Thorne house is spacious and handsome and the great hall will be the scene of the ceremony in case of rain. The bride's cousin, Helen Niblack, is about the most disappointed little girl in the world today, for she was to have preceded her cousin to the altar as a flower girl, but a bad case of measles has upset that plan. Her brother, Albert, will tell her all about the ceremony, however, for he is to be the only page and carry the long bridal train.

Miss Wilhelm did not choose any of her friends as a matron or maid of honor, but six of her best friends will attend her as bridesmaids: Mrs. John Peale Bent [Mary Reed], just back from her own wedding trip; Miss Jean Schweppe, Mrs. Byron S. Harvey Jr., Mrs. Edward B. Smith [Louise Dewey], Mrs. Charles S. Dewey Jr. [Marjorie Goodman], and Miss Mary Senior of New York, formerly of Chicago.

Byron S. Harvey Jr. to Be Best Man.

Byron S. Harvey Jr. will carry the ring for his brother and perform the other duties of a best man and ushering will be another man, J. Stewart Harvey, Edward Wilhelm, who has come from Denver, where he is working in the packing industry, for his sister's wedding, Durand Smith, Lloyd A. Laflin, Charles S. Dewey Jr., Earl Goodwine Jr., Henry Hitchcock of St. Louis, Charles Murphy, and Harold Wetmore Snow of Detroit, and George Storm of New York.

Mr. Harvey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Stewart Harvey, and his bride will leave immediately after the wedding reception for a five weeks' trip to Honolulu. Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Sr. are spending the week-end with the George A. McKinlocks in Lake Bluff so as to be on hand not only for the ceremony but for the bridal dinner Mr. and Mrs. Wilhelm gave last night at the Shoreacres club and for a luncheon Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Cudahy Jr. will give today at their Lake Forest home for the out of town guests and bridal party. Miss Wilhelm is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cudahy Sr.

Among the bride's relatives who are here from other cities for the wedding are Mr. and Mrs. John Cudahy of Milwaukee, Mrs. William P. Nelson and Miss Elizabeth Cudahy of California, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Wilhelm of Omaha, her paternal grandparents, and her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel L. Cooper of the same city.

The former Alice Cudahy McCormick, now Mrs. John Noble Stearns Jr. of New York, was not able to come west for her niece's wedding.

Richards-Scott Nuptials in Town.

In a pleasantly simple and conservative ceremony at 4:30 this afternoon in the ballroom of the Fortnightly club Miss Jere Richards, daughter of Mrs. Harold Wyles Richards, will become the bride of Russell Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Scott. The service will be read before an improvised altar of ferns and flowers by Dr. Edric Amory Weld, a cousin of the bride and headmaster of the Holderness school in New Hampshire. A reception will follow the ceremony.

Miss Richards is to be unattended, but Mr. Scott will have his brother-in-law, John D. De Feo, for his best man. For a wedding trip Mr. Scott and his bride are motoring to Montreal, where they will board a liner for the West Indies. Upon their return to Montreal they will drive to Quebec before coming back to Chicago. They will make their home, at least temporarily, in Mrs. Richards' apartment at 73 East Elm street, since she is going out to the Deerpath Inn in Lake Forest to spend the summer.

Out of town guests here for the wedding include Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Mackey of Boston, Miss Richards' aunt and uncle; Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Hoyt of Kansas City, Mo., another aunt and uncle; Mrs. Stuart A. Campbell of Kansas City, and Mr. and Mrs. Burdette E. Ford of Windsor, Ont., cousins.

English-Stuckslager Ceremony at Winnetka.

Many young people of Winnetka and many from town will be at the Winnetka Woman's club late this afternoon for the wedding of Miss Helen English, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Robert English, and Walter Nason Stuckslager, son of Mrs. Bertha Nason Stuckslager of Grand Rapids, Minn.

It is to be an all white ceremony at 4:30 o'clock with a reception following, also at the club. Then Mr. Stuckslager and his bride will leave on a motor trip, the destination of which is unannounced. Upon their return they will make their home at 320 Prospect avenue in Highland Park.

Miss Louise Ashley of Sioux City, Ia., is to attend Miss English as maid of honor and the bridesmaids will be Mrs. Boyd Anderson, Mrs. Douglas MacMillan, Miss Harriet Tilden and Miss Marion Chinn of Duluth. Little Kathleen Ball, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Ball Jr., is broken hearted that she has the whooping cough and so cannot attend the bride as flower girl as had been planned.

The bride's brother, Robert English, will be Mr. Stuckslager's best man. Ushering will be Mr. Anderson, Robert Tufts, Jack Clauer, and Morris Muller who lives in California.

Only the immediate families will witness the ceremony this afternoon in which Miss Frances Crandell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Burton Crandell of Oak Park, will become the bride of Hyde Perce Jr., also of Oak Park. The service will be read at 3:30 by Dr. Albert Bruckner Coe, pastor of the First Congregational church in the western suburb, in the living room of the Crandell home, and then there will be a reception for the many friends of the young couple at 4:30 at the Oak Park Country club.

Mr. Perce is taking his bride west by motor for their honeymoon. Upon their return they will make their home at 539 Hinman avenue, Evanston.

Atwater-Folds Wedding in East.

A number of Chicagoans and many Evanstonians are interested today in the marriage of Miss Katharine Atwater, daughter of Mrs. J. Charles Atwater and the late Mr. Atwater of Montclair, N. J., to Thomas McKey Folds, son of Mr. and Mrs. George R. R. Folds of Evanston. The service is to be read at 4:30 o'clock at the altar of the Dwight Memorial chapel at Yale university with a reception following at the Faculty club.

Miss Josephine Setze of Augusta, Ga., is to be maid of honor and the bridesmaids will be Mr. Folds' sister, Camilla, and Miss Grace Fearey of Albany, N. Y. Charles Weston Folds will serve his brother as best man and ushering will be Wayland Wells Wil-

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

The engagement of Miss Lorraine Adele Donkle to George W. Weatherby III., son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Weatherby of 6933 Oglesby avenue, was announced yesterday at a tea given by her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Lucius Boardman Donkle of 6939 Crandon avenue.

Miss Donkle, following preparatory work at Ward-Belmont, entered the University of Chicago and at the last convocation services received her degree of bachelor of philosophy, having majored in art. She is a member of the Quadrangle club and is an active member of the Kenwood Social Service club Juniors.

This picture was taken recently at a fashion showing given by the Kenwood club Juniors. Mr. Weatherby is a graduate of Yale, for which he prepared at Roxbury. The weding is planned for the early fall.

Good Morning!

The San Quentin jail break—
The wipeout of the Purple Gang—
The Dillinger face-lifting and theater capture incidents—

These are the true life occurrences that are spot-lighted in "Public Hero Number 1," moviedom's latest screen tribute to federal operatives.

Smashing, sure-fire entertainment, this movie, with its shrewd blend of melodrama and romance cunningly interlarded with comedy!

With an A-1 cast performing under expert direction, the piece goes right to bat, and from opening to closing scenes captures and holds the attention.

The action starts in a penitentiary, where Jeff Crane—operative—is discovered as a prisoner, and, for reasons the picture shall show you, instigates mutiny and a jailbreak that frees one "Sonny" Black, Public Enemy Number 1.

From then on there's plenty stirring. All of Jeff's dealings with "Sonny" and the gang are highly exciting—particularly those sequences in which he endeavors to get the gang's drunken doctor to the mysterious hideout of the desperadoes and those connected with the trapping of the bad men and the capture of "Sonny." There's fun and sparkle to his encounters with Theresa, "Sonny's" sister—and when Crane's identity becomes known to the gang—WOW!

Chester Morris' portrayal of Jeff is, I believe, the best thing he's ever done. He's as natural as little green onions. A smart thinking, swift acting, true loving boze as which I hopes we have many in the government service.

And certainly Lionel Barrymore was never more decidedly aces than in his depiction of the inebriated physician, whose only business is to succor the sinister men who have picked on him as their personal physician. Paul Kelly is a hard bitten peach—as chief operative. I guess that's his title—anyhow you know what I mean.

As for Joseph Calleia as "Sonny"—WHERE did they get that man! I declare he had me covering, safe and sound though I sat in my theater seat!

I have never seen anybody who could look more evil—who, without a word or movement could create such an impression of utter and cruel relentlessness.

In real life Mr. Calleia is probably a genial soul who trots babies on his knee and feeds the canary conscientiously when his wife's gone to the country. But in the movies—my GOSH!

Jean Arthur, as always rings the bell, and minor rôles are ably handled.

You'll do no napping at the Chicago theater this week! THAT, I promise you.

Summer Styles on Parade

Cotton Formals Feature Styles at Tennis Club

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

Cotton formal evening dresses, cotton suits, and cotton sports clothes featured a fashion show at the River Forest Tennis club, 615 Lathrop avenue, yesterday in connection with the national clay court championship matches. Daughters and wives of club members modeled the summer clothes in an open air parade on the lawn.

An evening dress of pale pink piqué with a collar and separate jacket of fine plaid gingham, made doubly gay by a bunch of field flowers at the waist, was worn by Mrs. Donald Funk, Oak Park, with a wide brimmed mushroom hat of leghorn straw.

A daytime frock of plaid seersucker with matching jacket and a smart little white felt hat were modeled by Miss Helen Tomlinson. A piquant costume of cotton worn by Miss Margaret Way included a pleated skirt of black, a short blouse of large plaid, a black Ascot tie and white piqué hat, off the face and peaked.

The 17 year old Nichols twins, Bettie and Lucie, drew applause in frocks of red and white and green and white waffle weave, with white revers.

Chiffon and other silks also were worn. Mrs. H. R. Hamilton Jr. wore a pink silk serge dress with ruching around the neck and tie. Miss Betty Seymour's blonde coloring appeared immaculate in a high necked dress of white chalk crêpe with a wide black sash and huge black buttons on four pockets, with which she wore white sandals. Miss Suzanne Barlow modeled a smart tailored suit of quilted white silk with a green Ascot scarf.

Miss Virginia Rogers' dark hair and eyes made more exotic the figured chiffon formal dress with detachable cape, and Miss Sally Symons wore figured chiffon with a graceful accordion plaited skirt and flowing sleeves.

Mrs. Kenneth Williams wore an unusual dress of lemon yellow shirred chiffon with a large yellow straw hat and sandals.

J. W. Behnken New President of Lutherans

Missouri Synod Elects on Third Ballot.

Cleveland, O., June 21.—(AP)—The Missouri synod of the Evangelical Lutheran church chose a 51 year old Texan today, Dr. J. W. Behnken, to be the sixth president it has had since the synod was founded in 1847.

Dr. Behnken, pastor of Trinity Lutheran church at Houston, Tex., since 1908, was elected from a field originally of five candidates, only one of whom, however, was a close rival.

On the final ballot the synod's 36th triennial convention gave 263 votes to the Houston pastor and 229 to Dr. Frederick Pfotenhauer of Chicago, who had been president since 1911.

Three ballots, besides the primary vote, were required before Dr. Behnken received the necessary majority. It was the first time since Dr. Pfotenhauer's initial election that balloting extended beyond the nominating primary.

The new president previously served the synod as its second vice president from 1929 to 1932, and was first vice president from 1932 to 1935.

Dr. Behnken was born in Cypress, Tex., the son of a Lutheran minister, the Rev. G. W. Behnken. He received his high school and junior college education at St. John's Luthern college, Winfield, Kas., and studied theology at Concordia seminary, St. Louis, completing his course in 1906.

Dr. and Mrs. Behnken are the parents of eighte hildren.

BAPTISTS HIT REDS

Colorado Springs, Colo., June 21.—(AP)—Ringing warnings against communistic activity stirred 2,000 delegates to the Northern Baptist convention late today and one delegate went so far as to challenge a proposal to be presented tomorrow as a communistic doctrine.

The Rev. Rex A. Mitchell of the First Baptist church, Paso Robles, Cal., bitterly denounced in handbills the forthcoming report of the Christian social action commission as a "diabolical report we believe to be a catspaw in the hands of the dictator of Moscow, Russia."

The report proposes that the convention attack un-Christian elements by expanding its influence to social economic, and political problems.

A proposal to merge four mission societies into two bodies met defeat today.

Throughout a day devoted to discussion of mission work, individual speakers stressed the danger of communism.

The New Hats Are Giddy, but You Like Them

Berets Are Floppy, Pull Way Down on Face.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Gayer, giddier, and even goofier than ever, the new hat arrivals manage to get a good gasp out of the most hardened shopper. For instance, a brimmed leghorn with a flat crown completely encircled with a wreath of some very realistic nuts. Despite the sound it's a darn attractive hat.

Every kind of nut from the lowly and noisy peanut in the shell, small hickory nuts, very good copies of almonds, filberts, and walnuts as well as nice dark Brazil nuts rattle around this amusing and effective hat. Anyway you wear it, the chuckling spectators will know you have the newest straw hat in town.

Berets seemingly go on forever. Last year they were big and floppy. This year, given appreciative encouragement, the hat makers used lots more material and the results are amazing things to contemplate. The late arrivals are floppy and you pull them way down over the face for proper dash and to serve as a sunshade. Yes, the first black velvet berets have come to town and show the way the fashion wind will blow over your eyeline when you decide to discard your straws.

Something else to keep you intrigued are the new felts with the daring new silhouette, cut and molded and fashioned like the huge halos out of stained glass windows depicting saints. These hats are called aureole hats, and they are breath taking and stunning. Most of them are of dull black, very soft felts with velvet head band effects in lovely stained glass window colors. Others are of soft velvet twisted around the head with the top open and tied at the back with either silver or gold cord.

These are the newest dance hats to wear with filmy chiffons and nets, just a band of the velvet cleverly twisted to achieve the aureole effect. Watch these new velvets and felts. They show the way the fall hats will tilt or flatter your headlines.

Seven Chicago Boys Win Scholarships at Yale University

New Haven, Conn., June 21.—[Special.]—Seven boys from Chicago and its environs were honored at Yale university tonight when the award of eleven regional scholarships and 31 Sterling Memorial tuition grants to students planning to enter Yale next fall was announced by President Angell.

Regional scholarships have been granted to Arthur J. Cade of Oak Park and Herbert J. Curtis of River Forest, both of whom ranked in the top 5 per cent of a class of 700 at the Oak Park and River Forest Township High school.

Sterling Memorial tuition scholarships have been awarded to James B. Christerson of Wilmette, Ted P. Gianakopulos of Chicago, Kevin A. Lynch of Chicago, Ernest A. McClintock of Oak Park, and Richard W. McLaren of Winnetka. Christerson and McLaren attended New Trier, Gianakopulos the Nicholas Senn High school, while Lynch prepared at Francis Parker school and McClintock at the Oak Park and River Forest Township High school.

Performance of 'Theodora' Is Postponed by Weather

The performance of Handel's "Theodora," which was to have been held on the south steps of the Field museum last evening, was postponed by the Chicago park district on account of bad weather. The cast, however, assembled and had a dress rehersal. Tickets for last night's performance will be honored at a special performance on Monday. There will also be performances tonight and tomorrow night.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

Off for the week-end?

If you're a good little guest you won't forget your hostess and we know just exactly what you should take her. She'll bless you for it and you'll be invited back ten times in a row. Tote her three bottles of three beautiful "daytime fragrances," all neatly tucked into a high round box with a gay cover that depicts a breezy seascape.

It's all airy and summery and the fragrances are utterly beautiful. No hostess could wrest them away from us, as a matter of fact, but then we're more selfish than most where lovely scents are concerned.

These aren't perfumes but "in between" lotions, similar to cologne. They're particularly grand for summer because you can use them freely and the perfume won't be too strong. You'll be refreshed by the lotion itself and the scent will be just delicate enough no matter if you slather it on.

The three assembled in the gay yellow and white box are a perfect assortment. If you're in the mood for it, there's a gorgeous floral blend, a blend achieved, we're told, from 112 distinct flowers. It's a delight with cool, fluttery frocks when you're being picturesque. Excellent for the very feminine.

The second is a richer bouquet, bordering on the exotic. Best use it in the afternoon or in the evening when you're doing something rather special.

The third may be worn by any type and on any occasion. The fragrance of the gardenia predominates, but there's no touch of heaviness. It's modern and fresh and decidedly youthful. This is the one we like to soothe the fevered brow with when the heat and life in general make us feel a little licked. It's peppy and so are you when you've treated yourself or your handkerchief to a bit of it.

Look at this trio. They're inexpensive—and a grand gift, but even a better possession.

ELEANOR NANGLE.

Three Artists Give Recital Sponsored by Music School

The Cosmopolitan School of Music presented Flora Waalkes, soprano; Margaret Weiland, pianist, and Paul Vernon, violinist, in a recital at Fullerton hall yesterday afternoon. Miss Waalkes in the "Ave Maria" from Bruch's "The Cross of Fire" and a group of songs displayed an unusually fine voice, one of power, quality, and dramatic expressiveness, and the audience insisted on her returning for an extra number.

Miss Weiland and Mr. Vernon played two sonatas for piano and violin, the first by Mozart, the second in the more modern, highly scholastic manner of Fauré. They are ensemble artists of a high order, which means that they are expert soloists who know how to work together in a common cause. Miss Weiland appearing to be somewhat more flexible in the art.

MAURICE L. ROTHSCHILD

The Ortega Feud

By Marie De Nervaud

SYNOPSIS.

Chris Jackson is sent by Bill Benton, new sheriff of Monterey county, to put an end to the Ortega-Alvado feud, which has resulted in numerous murders. Both families believe California to be still Spanish and want Americans kept out. Pietro Sanchez runs the general store of the Big Sur valley. While calling there Chris encounters Guido Ortega, Ramon, his dare-devil son, and Ysabel, his beautiful, sad eyed niece. He falls in love with Ysabel at first sight, and has a quarrel with Ramon and publicly spanks him. Chris outfits himself for a supposed lion hunting expedition. He receives a note sent by messenger from Ysabel Ortega, hinting of a mysterious danger, begging his aid, and asking him to meet her in a fortnight. Chris camps in a canyon on the northern boundary of the Alvado ranch. A shot from an unseen hand gives him warning to leave. He is saved by Rocky, an old Indian hunter, who advises him to leave the country. Next day Chris meets Francesca Alvado, flirtatious Spanish beauty, who warns him her father allows no strangers in that part of the country. Chris tells her of his encounter with Ramon Ortega. It gains him welcome to the Alvado ranch. Guido Alvado invites Chris to a rodeo to be held in a week. During the rodeo the warring families hold a traditional three day truce. Ysabel Ortega is facing a forced marriage with her cousin, Ramon. Her uncle refuses to tell her the secret of her birth, as he had promised to do on her 18th birthday.

INSTALMENT XII.

REVOLT.

Ysabel clutched the door frame for a moment struggling for composure. The long oaken table and the figures of her uncle and Ramon danced grotesquely before her eyes and a dizziness threatened to overcome her as she realized that the moment had come at last when her uncle had thrown down the gauge of battle in the open.

Biting her lower lip to keep it steady, Ysabel summoned all her forces, and moved proudly to her place at the table opposite her uncle.

She must show no fear or uncertainty or the battle was lost.

Ramon looked at her curiously as she seated herself.

"Madre di' Dios, but you are pale!" His eyes traveled slowly over her as his father's had done, but there was a very different quality to his appraisal. It held a strange mixture of unwilling admiration, and dislike, tempered with a sort of triumphant possessiveness.

"It is the heat," Señor Ortega answered for Ysabel. "She is used to the cooling breezes of Monterey."

"No, it is not the heat!" Ysabel surprised herself with her sudden revolt against further pretense and hypocrisy. She sprang to her feet and braced her hand again on the high backed chair of heavy carved oak. "It is scorn for a broken promise!" She fixed her eyes on her uncle.

A flush of rage dyed Señor Ortega's face and neck. He slowly rose and at a darkly threatening look on Ysabel as though he would bear down the fragile figure before him by the sheer weight of his dominant personality.

"You know that I will never marry you."

"Are these the manners of an Ortega?" his voice held a cutting scorn. "Sit down and eat your dinner!" He peremptorily waved away the Indian girl who appeared at the door with a tray.

"Not until you agree to keep your promise." Ysabel's dark gaze never left her uncle as she added with vibrant intensity: "I don't even know whether or not I am an Ortega."

Ramon cut in before his father had a chance. "At least you are soon to be one, my lovely and scornful Ysabel!" He reached out for her hand but Ysabel snatched it away. "Ha! so that is it!" Wounded vanity gave an ugly ring to his voice in spite of his effort to conceal it. "But wait, Chiquita! I will soon make you less scornful—and even more lovely!"

"You know that I will never marry you!" Ysabel declared, turning her attention for a moment from her uncle to Ramon. "Why keep up this hollow farce? You are not in love with me! You even hate me as I do you. We have always hated each other since we were children! It is sacrilegious to talk of marriage between us."

Like a wild creature at bay Ysabel tightened her grip on the chair that supported her and glanced from one to the other of the two men against whose combined power she must pit her strength.

The flush slowly faded from Señor Ortega's face and he sat down in his chair, motioning to Ramon to do likewise.

"Let us have an end to this melodrama!" He resorted to the cutting scorn that had always been his most potent weapon against Ysabel. "This talk of hate is childish! You may as well know now that the padre is coming to marry you and Ramon before the rodeo. You will go there as Ramon's bride."

Ignoring Ysabel's low cry of outraged protest, he angrily summoned Nita, the Indian servant, who entered with alacrity, her excited black eyes proclaiming that she had been listening at the door.

Turning abruptly away Ysabel ran from the room, her eyes smarting with sudden tears that were beyond her power to control. In the hall she hesitated a moment, then, instead of going to her room, she ran out the front door and made for the canyon that dropped away abruptly at a distance of a hundred yards or more from the house.

Through the deep window the two men could glimpse the white figure, her dainty dress in curious contrast to the harsh burnt ground over which her flying feet stumbled from time to time.

As she disappeared into the canyon Ramon rose to follow but his father peremptorily motioned him back.

"Let her run it out of her system," he commanded in a low tone. "She'll be back, there is nowhere she can go and nothing she can do. A night in the open may bring her to her senses as well as anything. Wait until the mountain lions begin to scream!"

"Caramba! she is right!" Ramon muttered as he yielded to his father's advice. "I do hate her! But I will have her, nevertheless, to break her damnable spirit, if nothing else!"

"That is far less important than controling her inheritance," his father commented dryly. "It is lucky I was never fool enough to tell her about it when less depended on it than now. Your insane gambling career in Monterey this last year makes it imperative now that you marry her. Also we must be fortified with plenty of reserves in case of conflict with the law. The Alvados are far from exterminated, remember." Ramon gave a shrug of defiance for the law, but asked, "Suppose Ysabel defies us when Padre Ignatio is here? He will not marry us without her consent."

"Leave that to me," Señor Ortega dropped his voice to a low tone. "There are more ways than one to bring a bride to the altar!" He raised his voice as Nita appeared at the door. "Your cousin is not used to the wide spaces of the ranch, yet, after the narrow confines of the convent—" His voice had a benign indulgence very different from his former tone—"we must give her freedom to accustom herself to it."

Ramon grunted an assent but his fingers clenched nervously on his fork as he cast a glance through the window toward the spot where Ysabel's white figure had last been seen before it dipped down into the canyon.

Running wildly at first without any clear objective but a desire to get away from the hateful presence of her uncle and Ramon, Ysabel sped for the canyon which had so often been her refuge in her unhappy childhood.

She scrambled down the steep slope bracing herself against the tree trunks to keep from stumbling on the sharp rocks. As she finally reached the creek bed she turned and followed the course of the trickling stream until she came to a large boulder that acted as a partial dam, stopping most of the flow of the water and deflecting it into a deep pool.

In the gathering twilight the water looked dark and sinister, but Ysabel climbed up on the boulder and crept along the overhanging limb of a great varparaiso oak that grew beside it.

With a quivering sigh of temporary security she slipped into a cradle-like seat where the tree and the rock met. This had always been one of her favorite retreats and as she settled down into its familiar curves her panic gradually subsided and she faced her situation with the desperate courage of despair.

What would be the outcome of this hopeless position?

Not marriage with Ramon! She would rather die than face that. But there must be some other way out!

She looked back over her last two years at the convent and marveled how its peacefulness had lured her into forgetting the actual conditions at the ranch and the implacable will of her uncle.

Realizing that if she refused to return with him she would have no place to turn and no money to keep herself until she could earn her living in some way, Ysabel had persuaded herself that if she came back docilely her uncle would keep his promise to clear up for her the real story of her birth, on the eve of her eighteenth birthday, and give her the jewels that had been her mother's.

Then she would be of age and independent enough to strike out for herself. But the thing she had not counted on was that Ramon would want to marry her.

What possible reason could he have for marrying her when they had always had such a violent antipathy to each other?

GASOLINE ALLEY—THEIR HEIR APPARENT

WHAT DO YOU MAKE AVERY'S PAIN ERADICATOR OUT OF, UNCLE AVERY?
THAT'S A CAREFULLY GUARDED SECRET, SKEEZIX.
IF YOU STAY IN THE BUSINESS AND HELP MAKE IT GROW AND PROSPER I MAY TELL YOU SOMETIME.
IF IT SUCCEEDS, AS I FULLY EXPECT IT TO I'LL GROW WEALTHY AND RETIRE. THEN THERE MUST BE SOMEONE TO CARRY ON. IF YOU ARE ENERGETIC AND INDUSTRIOUS YOU MAY BE THE ONE. I'LL TELL YOU THEN.

Durant Infant Must Remain in Incubator

Movie Couple Counting Her Gain by Ounces.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., June 21.—[Special.]—Because Susan Lena Durant is an incubator baby and can't come home from Cedars of Lebanon hospital until she weighs 5 pounds, there is gloom in the household of Jack Durant and Molly O'Day. The baby, born June 6, weighed four pounds. After birth she lost a few ounces. But now she is gaining again, scaling 4 pounds and 7 ounces, and Molly is so fully recovered herself that she has been allowed to leave the hospital and return home.

The baby was named after her mother, for Molly O'Day, whose name is Susan Dodson Noonan.

Grace Moore, instead of Jeanette MacDonald, will be the partner of Nelson Eddy in the next big singing picture at Metro studio. Eddy and Jeanette made a big hit in "Naughty Marietta" and will be teamed again after the studio's one picture arrangement with Miss Moore, late this summer. . . . Una Merkel called a reunion of members of the New York stage cast of "Pigs" who are in Hollywood, and with herself as hostess those attending her party were Virginia Sale, Nydia Westman, Wallace Ford and Emmerson Tracy.

On the door of Louise Fazenda's dressing room at Metro studio is this sign: "Loaned to Aline MacMahon by L. Fazenda." All other dressing rooms bear gold or black lettered names of their possessors.

Rosina Lawrence, new ingénue for Fox, has been using no face makeup. But as result of getting only the right side of her face sunburned at the beach this week she now is under orders to go back to the shore and sunburn the left side. It would be too complicated to try to match artificial makeup with her own complexion after the film "Ball of Fire" had started.

Although there are over 300 male characters in "Barbary Coast," now being filmed at United Artists studio, Miriam Hopkins has the only feminine rôle. And she is the star. Joel McCrea and E. G. Robinson play the male leads.

Jane Wyatt, one time in New York social circles, becomes Warner Baxter's lead in his next at Fox, "Hard to Get." . . . The million dollar pageant "Last Days of Pompeii," which is just being completed at Radio studio, is an original story based upon historical records, and not based on the novel. The hero of the movie story is a gladiator [Preston Foster].

Francis Lederer will be teamed with Margaret Sullavan in Universal's "Next Time We Live," after she completes "So Red the Rose" at Paramount and he completes "The Gay Deception" with Frances Dee at Fox. Lederer's contract still rides with Radio studio, but relations between the Czech star and the studio continue strained.

A FRIEND IN NEED

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Crippled Child Needs Buggy.

Mrs. B. has three small children, 3 and 2 years old, and a baby 10 months old. Her husband makes only a small salary, just barely enough to cover expenses. She is much in need of a baby carriage for the youngest child, who is crippled, as well as clothing for the other children. The address is on the near north side.

Jean Wilhelm Becomes Bride at Rites Today

liams and Richard A. Rathbone of New Haven.

After a wedding trip Mr. Folds and his bride will live in Exeter, N. H., where he is a member of the faculty of the Phillips Exeter Preparatory school.

Mrs. Clifford Williams Will Be 87 on Monday.

There will be a birthday party at the Skokie Country club tomorrow with a cake on which there should be eighty-seven candles. The young-old lady for whom the party will be given is Mrs. Clifford Williams [Elizabeth Hoyne], who will celebrate her 87th birthday Monday.

Her unmarried son, Clifford Hoyt Williams, will be host at the party, and among those who will have luncheon with him and his mother are her other son, Temple Williams, and his wife, who are coming from their home in Mishawaka, Ind., to spend the week-end at the Hyde Park hotel with Mrs. Williams. Also Mrs. Williams' brothers, Thomas Maclay Hoyne and Frank G. Hoyne, who will celebrate their birthdays together on the 17th of July, just as they have done for eighty years. Mr. Frank will be 81 on the 17th and Mr. Thomas will be 91.

Mrs. Williams and her bachelor son will move on July 1 to the house at 465 Adams avenue, Glencoe, which they have occupied for eleven summers.

Horse Show Tomorrow at Oakbrook Field.

From 10 a. m. until late afternoon tomorrow the Oakbrook Polo field at York road and 22d street will be the scene of a gay benefit for the Infant Welfare society, for the Junior Infant Welfare Center of Hinsdale is sponsoring a horse show and polo match there.

The Culver Cadets are coming in from their training camp at Custer for the event and their entries will be reviewed by Gen. Gignilliat, who with Mrs. Gignilliat is staying over after the Culver alumni party last night, for the horse show.

The South Shore Country club is sending an entry of twelve young equestrians. The entries approach the 200 mark and include Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick and their three sons in the family class.

The polo game, in which the Oakbrook and the Black Horse Troop teams will compete, will start at 3 o'clock, soon after the show ends, and after the game there will be many supper parties. The largest of these will be one that Paul Butler, the James A. Hannahs, the Russell Elwells, the Arthur Howells, the Robert Foley Smiths, and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Arch will give.

Horses—racing, however, instead of being shown or ridden in polo—will attract many to the Washington Park race track this afternoon, for one of the country's most valuable and historic turf events, the American Derby, will be run there.

Many luncheons will precede the racing in the new Jocky club. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt is coming from New York to occupy a box for which he wired yesterday.

No one who previously hasn't obtained a ticket from a garden club need try to tour the Winnetka Garden club's "24 Hours in a House and Garden" this afternoon, for there will be no tickets on sale at any one of the six houses that will be opened for the affair. The houses and gardens will be open from 2 to 6 o'clock, and even in case of inclement weather the tour will be interesting, for various sorts of tables are to be exhibited in the houses, which are among the handsomest on the north shore.

Last summer the Onwentsia club in Lake Forest took up baseball with enthusiasm. At 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon the players who call themselves the Onwentsia Redskins will meet the Winter Club Bears on the Onwentsia diamond and Mayor Manierre will pitch the first ball.

Give Many Parties for Brides-to-Be.

The week-end will be filled with parties for brides to be, for there are several weddings next week and all the brides are being entertained today or tomorrow.

Miss Laura Bartlett and Francis D. Moore, who will be married Monday, will be the especial guests at a dance Mr. and Mrs. Ayres Boal and their daughter, Miss Henrietta, will give tonight at their home in Winnetka. Before the dance Miss Bartlett will have her spinster dinner and Mr. Moore his bachelor one.

Tomorrow Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Richards and their daughter, Miss Fidella Richards, will give a luncheon for the bridal party at the Richards home in Winnetka, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Coburn will entertain the older out of town guests at luncheon at their home in Evanston.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Wyatt Moore will give a dinner tomorrow night at their Winnetka residence for their son and his bride to be, who is the daughter of the Edmund B. Bartletts of Winnetka.

At the Onwentsia club tomorrow Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus H. Adams and their son, Cyrus III., will give a luncheon for Miss Theodora Shaw, who will be married to John Lord King on Thursday.

"Catering to Bridge Appetites," a booklet of menus and recipes for bridge refreshments, is on sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, One South Dearborn street, and Tribune Tower, for 3 cents. By mail, 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address mail requests to Mary Meade, Chicago Tribune.

BY MARY MEADE.

Last year's canning troubles are coming to light! Perhaps they'll serve as a warning to all of us who are in the midst of our this season's preserving. Mrs. L. D. of Chicago voices her problems this way: "Last year I made strawberry jam and raspberry jam with commercial bottled pectin, following the manufacturer's recipe to the smallest detail. I sterilized the jars and paraffined the jam while still hot. The jam was delicious, but after three or four months the paraffin loosened around the edges of the jars and the jam spoiled.

"The jam was stored in my pantry and it was warm there during the summer. . . . Can you tell me what I can do to prevent spoilage the next time I make jam?"

Such an excellent question for this time of year, with the jam making furor going on, isn't it? It points to one or two of the four major reasons which lead to the spoilage of canned foods: Poor products, badly handled; imperfect seal; inadequate cooking or improper storage. These two are obvious—either an imperfect seal or improper storage, assuming that Mrs. D. used fine fresh fruits and followed her canning directions accurately.

In eliminating the problem in her this year's canning, we'd recommend this method of sealing jams:

Wash and scald the glasses. Cover the jelly with melted paraffin as soon as it is poured. When cold another layer of paraffin may be added if necessary. Cover the cooled glasses with tin covers or clean paper covers, tightly pasted on. Clean glasses, new paraffin, and clean covers are insurance against spoiling.

Then, since storing the glasses in too warm a place leads to spoilage, we'd advise her choosing a spot this year which is both cool and dry. Dampness increases the tendencies for the growth of molds.

Miss B. J., also of Chicago, writes in to ask how many cakes of compressed yeast are equivalent to a pound of bulk yeast. The usual weight of a cake of yeast being a half ounce, the pound should equal thirty-two of the small cakes.

The French pastries known as "Cream Balls" are requested by Miss L. J. T. According to our best sources of information these pastries are made like this: Fill tiny cream puffs with French chocolate frosting. Dust on the outside with confectioner's sugar and roll in chocolate shot. The frosting is made with:

4 squares sweet dipping chocolate
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
4 eggs

Melt the chocolate and sugar in a double boiler, stirring until smooth. Then add the egg yolks, one at a time, stirring rapidly, and finally the vanilla and stiffly beaten egg whites. Cook until thickened and cool before filling the cream puffs.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

PLAY.

Having devoted several days this week to perfect contracts that cannot be defeated by normal defense, I find myself tempted to give a hand that is impossible to make. The declarer merely acted the rôle of Patience on a monument, and, sure enough! the opponents finally slipped. Even then the contract was not easy.

♣A-10-x

After West's spade bid had been passed by East, North and South got up to four hearts, with South as the declarer. The opening lead was a small club, East's queen forcing South's ace. South drew trumps, playing the ten of hearts under the jack from the dummy in order that there might be plenty of reëntries back and forth. He then, in quiet desperation, played a small diamond. East went up with the king. He had a feeling that his partner might hold the ace, and he wanted to play through a small spade.

West's ten forced the queen from dummy. Another diamond was led, West, perforce, winning. Having no apparently good exit, West played a third round of diamonds, which was trumped in the South hand, a spade being discarded from North. South then ran two more trumps, leaving this situation:

South discarded a small spade on the last trump and West had to give up. If he threw away the jack of spades he would be end-played with the ace and forced to lead into the split club tenace. A club discard, on the other hand, would set up two tricks in the suit for the declarer. The most that South could lose was one more trick.

If East chooses to return clubs, when he is on lead with the diamonds, or if West simply cashes his ace of spades and gives South the king of the suit instead of the more valuable ruff and discard, the contract cannot possibly be made. And the tragic part of it is that statisticians have figured out that 15,281 games like this are made daily.

Correspondent Offers Cure for Bridge Maniac

Walking Out Usually Is Sufficient Scare.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

You remember the query on which we begged readers to help about the wife with the bridge playing mania? The husband of some twenty odd years of devotion found himself with a wife on his hands, whose every afternoon, and late hours every night, were given over to the game. The husband's job necessitated an early breakfast and an early-to-bed program. Night after night his sleep was broken by the wife's late return from her bridge game.

While an extreme case, we admit, bridge as it is sometimes pursued by wives becomes a problem akin to the card gambling male difficulty. Where money becomes the prize, women may become just as vicious eaters-up of funds needed for other things as is the case with the gambling male. Often, it is known, women resort to unscrupulous means of covering up their losses.

We heard of a recent theft that was despicable, but which was inspired by a formerly reputable woman confronted with a bad bridge-loss. Again, the case is unusual. But it is not unusual for women to be harried to death over money losses at the bridge table, which they cannot afford at all. It's no discredit to the game with which, as a pastime, there could be no possible quarrel. But when any pleasure pursuit becomes a disturber of domestic peace, it is no longer a game. It becomes a menace.

Well, in response to our cry for help on what to do with a wife afflicted with the bridge mania, comes this letter:

"I married one of those bridge maniacs. But two years of coming home to canned dinners settled me. Some other man now is listening to why the woman's checking account never could balance, while I'm enjoying home cooked dinners and the company of a woman who is as eager as I am to get our little suburban mortgage paid off as fast as we can."

"Irish," another contributor, tells how he handled his little woman when the bridge game began to be more than a bridge game in his household. One night the woman came home to find her man had fled to a hotel, where, she was notified, she would find him ready to return when she could take her bridge and leave it. Until such time she was notified that no further support for household or woman would be forthcoming. An immediate cure was reported.

Wedding Announcements

Announcement is made of the marriage of Edith M. Henry and Albert R. Brunker of Chicago at Louisville, Ky. The wedding took place on June 10 at the home of Dr. and Mrs. John W. Price Jr., Upper River road, Louisville, the officiating clergyman being Charles W. Welch of the Fourth Avenue Presbyterian church of Louisville.

Mr. and Mrs. Brunker will reside at 190 Ahwanee road, Lake Forest.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Morton Kimball of 770 Bluff street, Glencoe, are announcing the marriage of their daughter, Caroline, to Prof. James Donald Watson of the University of Notre Dame on June 15 in the gardens of the family home. Prof. Watson and his bride have left on a month's motor trip through New England. In the late summer they will settle in South Bend, Ind.

At the Thorndike Hilton chapel at the University of Chicago this afternoon Miss Katharine Butzow, sister of Frank E. and Ernest H. Butzow, will become the bride of Dr. S. L. Wolters of Princeton, N. J. Dr. Wolters is resident physician at the Princeton hospital. Both Miss Butzow and Dr. Wolters are graduates of the University of Chicago.

Miss Margaret Helen O'Rourke of Minneapolis, sister of Mrs. E. Warren O'Meara of 3200 Lake Shore drive, will become the bride of Charles Edward Fitzpatrick this morning at Our Lady of Mount Carmel church. The Rev. J. P. Murray will read the ceremony, which will be followed by a wedding breakfast and reception at the Edgewater Beach hotel.

Miss Mildred Ray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul G. Ray of 208 West Park avenue, Libertyville, will become the bride of Kenneth E. Burnett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Burnett of Libertyville, at 4:30 this afternoon at her parents' home. The Rev. Bruce Gillis of the First Presbyterian church of Libertyville will read the service. Miss Grace Hall and Miss Maxine Ray will attend the bride. Vange Burnett will serve his brother as best man.

At 12:30 tomorrow in a ceremony at the Belden-Stratford hotel Gertrude Mandel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sol S. Mandel of 3053 Palmer square, will be married to Richard M. Weinberger, son of Mrs. Lena Weinberger of 325 Belden avenue. Only the immediate families will attend the ceremony, but there will be a reception for the friends of the young couple between 3 and 5 o'clock at the Belden-Stratford.

In Berkeley, Cal., tomorrow Miss Grace Helen Liebling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Liebling of 646 Sheridan road, will be married to Franklin Judd Banker of Berkeley.

Miss Janet Van Metre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ricker Van Metre of 1225 Ridge avenue, Evanston, was married to Lynn Frederick Jervis, son of Mrs. Lynn Arthur Jervis of Evanston, last night at the residence of her parents, the Rev. Harold Bowen of St. Mark's church officiating. Only relatives and intimate friends attended the ceremony and reception that followed.

Miss Hetty Lytle of Highland Park attended the bride and Hess McLean of Evanston served as best man for Mr. Jervis.

Harry P. Parker, 7454 North Hoyne avenue, who was chairman of the junior prom at the University of Wisconsin in 1934, and Miss Catherine Baillie of Rutherford, N. J., who was his prom queen, will be married Tuesday at the Fourth Presbyterian church. The ceremony will be read by the bride's uncle, the Rev. Charles Baillie of South Bend. Parker will be graduated from the university on Monday. He is the son of Harry S. Parker.

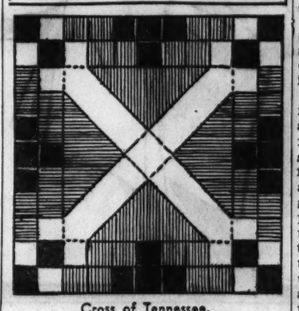
Cross Motifs Used Attractively in Tennessee Quilt



Cross of Tennessee.

BY NANCY CABOT.

Tennessee is famous for its old quilt patterns—the "Tennessee Circle," "Tennessee Rose," "Tennessee Star." And today to add further glory to the quilt fame of that state is the interesting "Cross of Tennessee." By joining pieced block to pieced block, a continuous design of crosses is formed, creating such a maze of patterns that the "Cross of Tennessee" frequently is referred to as "Tennessee Puzzle."

Patterns of this design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices: One South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

Matrons Must Select and Use Makeup Wisely

Wrong Shades and Heavy Application Barred.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

When one is young she may smear paint on cheek or lip and the worst that will happen will be the accusation that she is a fairly vulgar young person. But if one is an older person, a middle aged person, and goes in for paint smearing on cheek or lip, she is accused not only of vulgarity, but she accentuates the lines around mouth, eyes, and cheeks.

The younger women, on the whole, however, go at their makeup work with more skilled workmanship than does the older, who needs more the artist's touch. Time and again one sees the older woman, whose lips are decidedly wrinkled, and the lines at the mouth corners deeply etched, who applies lipstick with a sinful wickedness as to results. There often is a self-consciousness in the performance, a feeling that lipstick use is expected of one, but there isn't much heart in its application.

Now what the older lips and cheeks need is heart for the coloring applied, and how it is put on. A soft lip salve for most older women is the better suggestion. One has to put it on carefully to begin with, and work it in and around. Hard lipstick tempts one to go in for the "lick and a promise" performance. Be conservative about the shade used and when you apply the coloring let it set for a minute or two, then slip in a bit of tissue between the lips, press lips together, and let what comes off remain on the tissue. Don't try to put more on again.

Another thing on which the older woman often goes wrong is the shade of powder used. She sticks to shades she used perhaps fifteen or twenty years ago. Not necessarily the old dead white, now entirely passé, but the flesh shade or the pale natural or, perhaps, a real pink rouge. These tints aren't the most flattering for the older skin. Use warmer tones, tones with more body to them. You can find out easily, at any good cosmetic counter, where dozens of shades are on display. It isn't a bad idea to buy tiny packets of different shades of powder at the 5 and 10, and experiment with powder shades or get hold of sample packets if you can.

Women Executives Urged to Give Tryout Jobs to Young People

Dr. Mabelle B. Blake, president of the Chicago Teachers' college, yesterday called upon women business executives, doctors, and laywers, to give unemployed young people tryout experience in their offices. Dr. Blake was addressing the vocational guidance luncheon that featured the second day's program at the 16th biennial convention of the National Association of Altrusa Clubs at the Edgewater Beach hotel.

Such experience can be of invaluable help to boys and girls just out of college, groping to find places, Dr. Blake pointed out. "Contrary to a popular notion, we are not born for certain occupations or professions," she said. "We develop and progress. Tryout experience is a great help to young persons, but once employed they should be watched and given necessary counsel." Only in this way is an employer able to really evaluate their abilities, Dr. Blake concluded.

Making Fetish of Arithmetic May Harm Child

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Let me quote you a heartfelt letter:

"My Dear Mrs. Bevans: Thank you, thank you for your article in Thursday's paper anent arithmetic.

"Unworthy daughter—though an honor student—of a father whose brilliance in mathematics had won him medals and much acclaim, arithmetic was the bugbear of my grade school days. It is not too much to say that it spoiled that period of my life, and, looking back, I am convinced the tense hours in school and the harassed evenings regularly devoted to it between the ages of 10 and 13, which even a sympathetic father's patient help could not make other than an ordeal, definitly affected the health of a nervous, growing child.

"Now, in middle age, I still resent the time wasted on senseless problems which never once have had a practical application in after life. This least inspiring of the studies consumed many times the time given to other more stimulating themes, any one of which would have contributed infinitely more to appreciaion of and adjustment to later life.

"Too much cannot be said against this mathematical fetish, and your article so exactly stated the case that words cannot express the satisfaction it gave me."

This is not a description of either a rare or an extreme case where arithmetic and the child are concerned.

There is one thing I would like to add to the statements that I made in the article referred to by this writer—that of Thursday, April 18.

The average person needs a limited amount of arithmetic for practical use, but he does need that. Provided the school systems would reduce the amount, the acquisition of even the four fundamental processes might still be exquisitely painful to many children.

This need not be, however, if arithmetical processes were not taught the child until he was ready for them; if they were taught slowly and thoroughly, and if each process were mastered as he went along. In this subject, as in reading, what is a mental struggle for a child at too early an age is an easily acquired skill for him later on.

But whether this change is made [or until it is made] it is important for the well-being of the average child that his achievement in arithmetic should not be made the gauge of his whole scholastic standing and of his advancement to a succeeding grade.

Expect 25,000 to See Rich Stake.

BY FRENCH LANE.

There's a distinct military note to the 27th running of the American Derby at Washington Park this afternoon and it is all Roman Soldier's fault, for no sooner had the overnight field been announced than he was made the stoutest favorite in the history of the famous race.

The odds against him were 7 to 5. Col. Edward R. [One-Two] Bradley's great fillies—Black Helen and Bloodroot—were endeavoring to give the race a moro feminine tinge, but despite Bradley's army of backers in the early Derby crowds the fillies could do no better than be made 5 to 2.

Overnight a field of 13—four fillies and nine colts—were named for the race and it is believed that regardless of weather or track conditions, at least ten will go to the post shortly before 5 o'clock this afternoon. With but one or two exceptions, it is the most fashionable field yet to try for the prize since the race was revived in 1926 and won by Col. Bradley's Boot to Boot.

Expect 25,000 Crowd.

With the reserved box seat supply exhausted 48 hours before the race, plans went forward yesterday to handle a crowd of more than 25,000 which will include most of the prominent turf people of America.

For the first time in many years there is every indication that all the horse lovers and most of the race players in Chicago will line the rails to see Roman Soldier attempt to run his way back into a contending position for the 3 year old championship.

Col. Bradley arrived yesterday, received reports from his trainer, Bill Hurley, that Black Helen and Bloodroot were as good as they possibly can be for the race, then began flirting with the weather man.

Col. Bradley made it no secret that he is pulling for warm sunshine, a brisk wind, and at least a good track. He didn't say his colorbearers could win even under these conditions. "But they will give a mighty good account of themselves," he told hundreds of Chicagoans at Washington Park who wished him luck.

Track Is Heavy.

The track was heavy and difficult during yesterday's program. If there is no more rain, it probably will be good but not fast for the Derby. If there is more rain, it more than likely will be deep in holding mud, which no doubt will be welcomed by Roman Soldier's followers.

The latest report from the weather man is "fair and warmer" today, and if the weather man is telling the truth, for once, conditions should be ideal for the renewal of the old fixture.

A surprising amount of support developed soon after the overnight field was announced for Count Arthur, son of Reigh Count, which will carry the silks of Mrs. John Hertz. It was of such volume that Count Arthur, regarded by many as the most improved 3 year old in the country during the last month, became the third choice in the wagering. The price quoted against him was 6 to 1.

After Our Reigh's defeat earlier in the week in a Derby warmup, the Hertz forces decided not to drop his name into the overnight entry box. Mr. and Mrs. Hertz are coming on from New York to see Count Arthur run.

Revolta's 69 Leads Medinah Open Tourney

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

John Revolta, the marcel maned Milwaukee professional, who won the western open golf championship last Sunday, picked up right where he left off at South Bend to take the first round lead in the $3,500 open tournament at the Medinah Country club yesterday.

A bright and early 71 posted by Frank Walsh of Bryn Mawr looked right tidy for the lead at the first eighteen holes of the 72 hole show, but the bushy thatched Revolta rolled up his sleeves and went to work on his 69 to pass the Chicago Irishman by 2 strokes. Later in the day it appeared that Ray Mangrum, the bridegroom of Oakmont, would pass both of them. After starting out with an amazing 33, 3 under par, he found a little more opposition from the back nine of Medinah's No. 3 course and settled for a 71 to tie Walsh for second place.

Play Today, Tomorrow.

The tournament, proceeds of which will go to the Shriners' hospital for crippled children, will continue with another eighteen holes today and conclude with thirty-six holes tomorrow. The low sixty scorers and ties at the end of the first thirty-six holes today will be eligible for the final two rounds. Admission to the tournament is $1.10. The club may be reached by the Milwaukee railroad, the Greyhound bus lines, or by auto over Lake street or Irving Park boulevard.

Revolta's 69 must have been slightly contagious, for one of his playing partners, Leonard Dodson of Pembine,

CARNERA IS STILL SAME OLD PRIMO OF DEBUT TOUR

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Auburn, N. Y., June 21.—Primo Carnera, one time heavyweight champion of the world, boxed five rounds at Owasco lake this rainy afternoon in preparation for his fight at Yankee stadium Tuesday night with Joe Louis, a former Golden Gloves title holder. It was the same Primo Carnera Chicagoans remember from the days of his debut tour and more serious attempts later after the diving episodes had ended.

Carnera has not improved. He is the same willing, smiling, good natured Italian whom Paul Journet and Leon See, long since departed from the scene of managerial strife, discovered in a French circus seven years ago. And like that overgrown, ungainly lad, Carnera, now nearing 29 years of age, still hits weakly and inaccurately with his right hand, back hands when he misses, wrestles in clinches, and to be brief, appears to be an easy target for the sharp shooting Louis.

400 Sit in Rain.

Bill Duffy, partner in Carnera's current earnings with Louis Soresi, watched today's drills against Art Sykes and Jack Redmond from the apron of the ring. Duffy never seemed flustered when Carnera took a punch to the jaw from Sykes nor minded the flurry of applause from the 400 spectators whose desires to see Carnera was greater than the prospect of a drenching in the rain.

Perhaps Carnera will win from Louis next Tuesday night. With the Braddock victory in mind it is not wise to get too far out on the limb of prediction. But if he does, it will be because he can absorb Louis' punches and go on to win a decision because he is heavier, more durable, and gamer.

Carnera spent three rounds fiddling with Sykes, the Elmira, N. Y., heavyweight, who ducked and held for ten rounds last autumn to lose a decision to King Levinsky at Wrigley field. Sykes had the better of the punching, such as it was. And Sykes, no Goliath killer, never had to contend with more than a flipping left hand and the power of Primo's giant shoulders which occasionally lifted him from his feet and turned him around.

Long Right Scores.

In the first round Carnera shoved Sykes through the ropes, forgot to release his hold, and fell sprawling on the sagging middle strand. Action thereafter was missing except for Sykes' looping rights to Carnera's head, the same blow Max Baer used to start Carnera's procession of eleven trips to the floor a year ago when Baer wrested the title from Carnera in Long Island Bowl.

Carnera outboxed Jack Redmond, a

CARLETON WORKS JINX ON BRAVES; CUBS WIN, 11 TO 3

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., June 21.—Tex Carleton, the Comanche beanpole, today defeated the Braves, his most naive adversaries, the Cubs winning 11 to 3 to give themselves a 2 to 1 advantage in the current five game series. It was Tex's eighth victory over the Braves in nine starts this year and last.

Carleton, just to add to the impression that he loves his New England cousins dearly, personally made half as many hits as he yielded up till two were out in the ninth. He singled his last three times at bat. The seven hits made by the Braves included home runs by Frankie Hogan and Wally Berger, which accounted for the three Boston runs. Berger's was his 12th of the year.

Everybody Hits.

The Cubs made all but one of their runs after two were out. In addition to scoring 11 runs they left 12 runners on bases. They made 18 hits including five in a row by Lindstrom before he finally was retired in the ninth. Each Cub made at least one hit. Galan and Hartnett each made a double and a triple and each was robbed of a potential triple by sensational catches against the wall.

The Cubs gained on the second place Pirates and the third place Cardinals and tomorrow will have a mathematical chance to go into second place in their double header with the Braves. They now have won eight out of 12 against eastern clubs and eight out of 15 since leaving Wrigley Field.

Good Start, Boys.

The Cubs made three runs and left the bases full in the first inning. Herman singled to left with one out and Hack supplied the second out with a foul to Hogan. Hartnett doubled to left, Herman stopping at third. Jordan fell in going after Lindstrom's foul and Freddy responded to the break by singling to center, scoring Herman and Hartnett. Klein walked and Cavarretta singled to right, scoring Lindstrom and putting Klein on third. Jurges walked, filling the bases. Then Carleton fanned.

Galan led off the second inning with a double to left center and moved up on Herman's sacrifice. Augie had to stay on third while Coscarart threw out Hack and Hartnett fanned.

Lindstrom started the Cub's third with his second hit, a single to center. Klein forced him and then Cavarretta fouled to Jordan. As in the first and second innings, the session ended with a strike out. This time it was Jurges.

It was three up and three down for the Braves in the first two innings, but different in the third. Coscarart was safe on Herman's fumble, after which Hogan drove a homer into the left field bleachers. Frankhouse was

Owens Wins 4 Tests in U. S. College Meet

Berkeley, Cal., June 21.—(AP)—Jesse Owens of Ohio State gave 10,000 fans a preview today of what may happen tomorrow in the finals of the National Collegiate A. A. track and field meet. He completely stole the show to place in four events in the qualifying trials. The colored athletic marvel from the midwest headed his rivals in two sprint races, took his low hurdles trial, and leaped 26 feet 1⅝ inches to win the broad jump.

Owens won the hundred in 9.7 and the 220 in 21.3. In between these events he took one leap to lead the remaining broad jump contenders from nearly a foot to considerably more than a yard. Climaxing his work, Owens raced over the low hurdles in 23.6 seconds to become the most important one man team in the finals tomorrow.

Owens Scrapes His Knee.

Owens scraped his knee over a couple of the barriers. He was limping slightly as he left the field, but the injury was not expected to handicap him in the final tests. His broad jump mark broke the old N. C. A. A. record of 25 feet 10⅞ inches, established in 1925 by Dehart Hubbard of Michigan.

Willis Ward of Michigan hit three hurdles in the 120 yard test and failed to qualify, although he had been conceded a fair chance of placing well up in this event. Ward reported here with a weak leg.

Besides the N. C. A. A. broad jump record broken by Owens, the former javelin throw was exceeded. Charles Gongloff of Pittsburgh wrote his name into the list of record holders with a

KENNEDY LEADS HOSE BACK TO SECOND PLACE

Drives In First Two Chicago Runs.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Connie Mack, the aged leader of the Athletics, saw with his own eyes yesterday that he might have made a mistake a year or so back by not exercising a little more patience with Vernon Kennedy, one of his rookies. Kennedy held the Philadelphians to seven hits, raised Ned with his bat, and conducted the White Sox back into second place with a 5 to 3 victory. It was Kennedy's third triumph in a row and his third of the season, against one defeat.

So far as his pitching was concerned the knuckle-balling Kennedy experienced only one tough inning. The A's bunched three hits on him in the third and inaugurated the day's scoring with a pair of runs. In due time Kennedy's hitting, along with some assistance from his mates, erased that disadvantage, and just to make certain that no complications would arise the Sox youngster gave up only three hits in the last six innings. One of these was Jim Foxx's 13th homer of the year, but it didn't come until the ninth when one run was of no importance.

Mahaffey Beaten in Fifth.

At the start the Sox were confronted by Roy Mahaffey, who was regarded as a problem because of his record of four victories without being beaten. He had them in leash until the third when they scored once, but, unlike Kennedy, he didn't recover from the jolt. A double play saved him some possible annoyance in the fourth, but in the fifth he was dented for two runs that put the Chicagoans in front. In the seventh he vanished in favor of a pinch hitter, and Bill Dietrich finished. It was during his term that the Sox picked up their last two runs, mainly because the rescuing pitcher was his own enemy as a fielder.

Kennedy's achievements as a batter are represented by two singles. One of these drove in the first run in the third after Manager Dykes and Shea had arranged the setting. His second single sent home the first of two runs in the fifth. This affair, also inaugurated by Dykes, was completed with a double by Hayes. Kennedy also was involved in the production in the seventh. He managed to get around to the plate for the second time after being given a life on one of Dietrich's errors.

Jolt Kennedy in Third.

During the first two innings Kennedy was good enough to hold the Mackmen to one hit, but some of his skill deserted him in the third. He surrendered three singles in a row and two runs scored. The first of these hits was Mahaffey's single to center with one out. He went to third on Moses' single to right. At this point Kennedy made a wild pitch, Mahaffey scoring and Moses taking third. Moses registered on Cramer's single to right. Then Kennedy fanned both Johnson and Foxx.

Mahaffey also restricted the Sox to one hit in two innings and also allowed three in the third. But the latter trio of smashes scored only one run. Dykes started this disturbance by leading off with a single over short. Shea singled to center. Kennedy came to his own assistance by singling to right, sending Dykes across the plate. Radcliff attempted to bunt, but failed. So he wound up with a pop to Higgins. Then the rally died abruptly on Hayes' roller which was converted into a double play.

Rain Spurs Sox.

Rain broke in on the proceedings in the fifth, so the Sox promptly scored a pair, thus making it safe for themselves in the event the show had to be canceled. Dykes also started this with a single to left. Shea's bunt put him on second, and he scored on Kennedy's single over short. A fly to Johnson finished Radcliff. Hayes drove a two bagger against the right field score-

LOUIS IMPRESSES FOLLOWERS WITH DEFENSIVE SHOW

Mother, Sisters Among 1,000 at Drill.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pompton Lakes, N. J., June 21.—With his mother, Mrs. Lilly Barrow Brooks, and his three sister occupying ringside seats, Joe Louis, 1934 Chicago Golden Gloves champion, who meets Primo Carnera at Yankee stadium Tuesday night, was lenient toward his harassed sparmates today. Nearly 1,000 spectators watched the workout.

Louis, who has been tigerish in his punishment of sparring partners, was moved neither by compassion for his three opponents during four rounds nor by desire to show off before his relatives. He explained afterwards he was perfecting tactics against Carnera's expected attack.

Joe Shows Class.

While Joe, under these circumstances, naturally looked less effective than when he was sending camp mates sprawling Sunday and Wednesday, he was giving an exhibition of blocking left jabs, Carnera's favorite blow, which astonished even those who have seen Louis in many of his professional and amateur bouts. His defense was almost perfect and he never was off balance. That was Louis' strategy against Lou Flowers, who made his first appearance since being knocked out Sunday, and Bob Frazer, for one round each.

Leonard Dixon, nicknamed the Fighting Philosopher, an elongated ebony spire rising 6 feet, 7¾ inches, was next. The philosopher adopted the expected Carnera attack of crowding in and holding on during the first round. Louis met this by twisting and throwing him off balance and by launching a body attack alternated with rapid fire left hooks to the chin, which seemingly came from nowhere.

Commissioner Is Surprised.

In the second round, however, they opened up and blows to the chin had Dixon groggy as well as winded while Louis was hardly taking a deep breath. The philosopher sagely knew when he had enough and dropped to the canvas without a blow with the audible remark, "I can't go no more."

Commissioner D. Walker Wear of the state boxing commission said afterward:

"Louis is more of a man than I anticipated. He has almost perfect defense. He always has at least one foot firmly planted. His physical condition is superb. His only danger, if any, is Carnera's left."

Schmeling Eyes Louis Bout.

A new angle to the heavyweight bout expected to be held in September developed with the presence here of Joe Jacobs, manager of Schmeling.

Jacobs said he received a cable this morning from Schmeling in Germany saying he was not averse to a bout this fall, and that Louis, if he defeats Carnera, would be a natural match. Louis is under contract to make his next appearance for the Twentieth Century club, promoting the present bout. Braddock is tied up with the Madison Square Garden.

Asked whether Schmeling would fight under other than Garden auspices when he had a title chance with Braddock, Jacobs said: "Why not? There's no time like the present when money is concerned. I don't think we can persuade Gould and Braddock that there's no money in exhibition tours.

6 to 5 on Louis.

"I tried tours when Max was champion. He made 51 appearances and when we were through we had nothing. You go into a town with a $1,500 guarantee. You ask the promoter for money in advance. He hasn't got it. If you call off the bout, they publish the champion couldn't draw a crowd and hurt your prestige. Perhaps you get $500 or $600 and you spend almost that much.

"There's another point. Against Braddock, we, as challengers would get about 15 per cent. Against Louis, neither of us champions, we'd get 25 or 30 per cent and Louis the same. That appeals to Joey."

Odds on Tuesday's bout in New York quote Louis as a 6 to 5 favorite. Tom Hammond, a colored plunger from Detroit, has a $10,000 certified check here which he is trying to place at 6 to 5. If no money shows at that price, he says he'll offer 7 to 5 on Louis.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

EARLIER CHICAGO.

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., June 21.—Dear Wake: I suppose you have noted the play hall on the Henry W. Austin estate on Lake street, Oak Park, soon will be razed, to make room for business houses and a new movie theater. This place, erected in 1870, was for years the only place of amusement in the district.

It was used by Mrs. M. L. Rayne, resident of Oak Park and writer for the old Chicago Times, to present Jean Ingelow's "Songs of Seven" as tableau in which the writer of this incident played the part of "Seven Times One." "Seven Times Three" represented the poem "Love," showing a bride at the altar with her attendants.

In those days Mr. Austin allowed special parties to walk through his beautiful estate. Mrs. Rayne was the grandmother of Theodore Whaples, born in Oak Park and living his entire life there. Mrs. W. S. Giles.

Back in the early days one could rent a furnished hall room for $1 per week. The landlady set a beer pitcher, glasses, salt and pepper shakers on your dresser, so you could eat in your room if you did not wish to go to a restaurant.

On Sundays and holidays you were invited, without extra charge, to eat dinner with the family, and how good a home cooked meal tasted! And the landlady said: "My daughter cooked this meal." How the little girl blushed when I praised her cooking. After I married the girl I found out how her mother had exaggerated.

Friend Bat.

By the Shore.

Each Wave is frilled with snow-white lace,
The shore is such a lovely place,
And sometimes horses with white manes
Come prancing wildly, though their reins
Are held by Neptune, king of seas;
Sometimes the waves lie quite at ease
As though their daily work were done
And they were resting in the sun.

Physician—Pat, don't you know better than to have your pig pen so close to the house?

Pat—Why, sor?

Physician—Because it's unhealthy.

Pat—Shure, sor, the pig never has been sick a day in his life.

Alabama Pitts.

The Wake often has disagreed with the edicts emanating from the office of Baseball Commissioner Landis. His decision in the much discussed Alabama Pitts case, in our opinion, is sound. First, barring of Pitts from playing baseball with Albany, N. Y., because he is an ex-convict who has completed his term, would be regarded as un-American. If Pitts can make good as a player he may play.

Then Landis adds the prohibition that Pitts may not play in exhibition games with Albany. That guards against exploitation of the ex-convict, who made football and baseball history at Sing Sing prison, for purely mercenary purposes.

The opinion of those who have seen Pitts play is that he will not make good as a professional baseball player. They feel differently about his football. Several pro elevens are seeking his services.

Carnera Same Old Primo of Debut Tour

Negro who doesn't weigh as much as Louis, in the remaining two rounds of his workout. In 15 minutes Carnera never landed a solid punch. It is also true that neither of his opponents reached him effectively. Primo's giant arms and his tendency to back away from danger were defensive tactics. Which leads to the problem confronting Louis. It is not how he can defend himself but how can he penetrate Carnera's defense.

Carnera's camp, three miles from Auburn on the shores of Owasco lake, one of New York's famed finger lakes, was a gloomy place this afternoon. Fog and mist obscured the approach to the roller skating rink on the island in Enna Jettick park. This location is an island only because of a narrow ditch which Jesse Owens might broad jump without a warmup. Primo lives in a cottage about a mile distant. Others connected with his entourage, but not responsible for his behavior, inhabit the local Auburn hostelry.

Brown Is Too Tough.

Owasco lakep robably is a beautiful spot with some assistance from the sun, now obscured for the past five days. But the ruffled waters of the lake, hidden by long hanging mists, was depressing today. Even so Carnera has decided to remain here until he finishes his boxing chores Sunday afternoon. Then, according to Duffy, he will motor to Syracuse for the night, and on Monday proceed leisurely by automobile to New York.

MRS. ATWOOD WINS DISTRICT OPEN DAY PLAY

Mrs. June Beebe Atwood led the field in the first Open Day of the season held yesterday by the Chicago Women's District Golf association at Olympia Fields. Mrs. Atwood took low gross for the first flight with a 46—42—88. Net winners were Mrs. H. P. Duttine of Bunker Hill, 96—10—86, and Mrs. Ray Croslin of Oak Park, 98—12—86.

Low gross and low net winners in the other flights were:

SECOND FLIGHT—Mrs. E. C. Sawyer, Medinah, 50—47—97; Mrs. E. J. Barnes, Medinah, 97—15—82; Mrs. L. E. Carey, Olympia Fields, 99—13—86.

THIRD FLIGHT—Mrs. W. K. Wright, Calumet, 50—59—109; Mary Buford, Lagrange, 113—20—91; Mrs. W. F. London, Olympia Fields, 114—19—95.

FOURTH FLIGHT—Mrs. W. E. Borough, Lincolnshire, 61—55—116; Mrs. E. S. Cody, Edgewood, Valley, 116—22—94; Mrs. Leonard Hicks, Beverly, 118—22—96.

FIFTH FLIGHT—Mrs. W. W. Ferguson, Olympia Fields, 45—53—98; Mrs. J. W. Austin, Tam O'Shanter, 109—24—85; Mrs. H. H. Neightengale, Edgewood Valley, 115—26—89.

Michigan Team Wins College Gliding Meet

Lafayette, Ind., June 21.—(AP)—University of Michigan took top honors with 18 points in the first national intercollegiate gliding meet at the Purdue university airport here today. Purdue was second with 9 points and the University of Minnesota, third with 4. More than a score of planes will compete in the national intercollegiate flying meet tomorrow. Among this afternoon's arrivals were representatives from Amherst, Brown, Michigan, and Minnesota universities.

Fred Alton Outpoints Jack Brower in 3 Rounds

Fred Alton, Elgin, Ill., lightweight defeated Jack Brower in the three round windup bout of the amateur boxing show at the Medinah club of Chicago gymnasium last night. Phillip Saeli stopped Jimmy O'Brien in the second round in the semi-windup. Other results:

Ed Helstrom beat Jack McGrath, [3].
Ed Whiting beat Johnny Helstrom, [3].
Frankie Noto beat Joe Ojeda, [3].
William Powers beat Bill Bogacz, [3].
Frankie Talaber threw Johnny Bove, 9 minutes, 8 seconds. [Wrestling].

Roman Soldier, blk. c., Cohort—Miamba; Sachsenmaier & Reuter, owners.

Slow to find himself as a 2 year old, Roman Soldier won five races, was second four times, and third once in winning $4,690 last season. Early this year at Miami Phil Reuter and William Sachsenmaier purchased him from Max Hirsch for $7,500. Sachsenmaier died shortly afterward and his interest was taken over by his son, Elwood. After bad racing luck had forced him to finish third behind Black Helen in the Florida Derby, Roman Soldier showed sudden improvement. Since that time he has won the Texas Derby and the Detroit Derby, and finished second in the Kentucky Derby and Illinois Derby. He has won more than $40,000 already this saeson. At his best over a muddy track.

Firethorn, br. c., Sunbriar—Baton Rouge; Walter M. Jeffords, owner.

Until last fall Firethorn had shown little to indicate that he is a stake horse, the first real intimation of his class coming when he won the Walden handicap at Pimlico in November. He finished the season with two victories, two seconds, and two thirds in ten starts, and won $10,720. In three starts this season he has won an overnight race, and been second to Omaha in the Preakness and the Belmont stakes. One of the dangerous contenders.

Cold Shoulder, ch c., Display-Glacial; A. G. Vanlerbilt, owner.

Raced twice without being close as a 2 year old. This year he has won twice, been second once, and third three times in twelve starts. His chief claim to fame is that he worked a mile and a half in 2:29 3-5 in preparing for the Belmont Stakes a few weeks ago. This is only one second off the world's record for that distance. A dark horse.

Blackbirder b g., 3 Bostonian-Kenya; Mrs. Charles Hainesworth, owner.

One of the busiest two year olds of 1934 was Blackbirder. He started 35 times, winning three, finishing second in five, and third in eight races to win $8,730. He has won only one unimportant race this year, has three seconds and three thirds, and has won $2,050. A consistent horse that runs his race under any and all conditions, he ranks as one of the better outsiders. His last race was a third in the Detroit Derby, in which he finished ahead of Firethorn and Cold Shoulder.

Black Helen, b f., Black-Toney-La Troienne; Col. E. R. Bradley, owner.

A week ago they were calling Black Helen the greatest American filly in years, now they are not so sure. As a 2 year old, although not entered for many stakes, she was a sensation, winning her first seven starts and $4,475. In her last two starts as a juvenile she turned sour and finished unplaced. She won her first four starts this year, including the Florida Derby and the Coaching Club American Oaks, but was beaten by two heads in the Prospect Purse at Washington Park last Saturday. Although not believed partial to soft going, she will be one of the American Derby choices.

Bloodroot, b f., Blue Larkspur-Knockney Bridge; Co. E. R. Bradley, owner.

Until a short time ago Bloodroot was simply considered a runing mate for Black Helen. But sharp observers noticed that when Black Helen won, Bloodroot was always close and being held back by her rider. Last Saturday at Washington Park Black Helen could not stand off the late challenge of Count Arthur so Bloodroot had to show her speed. She won and came within a fifth of a second of the track record, and could have broken it. May be the best filly in training, but is untested in mud.

Nellie Flag, ch f., American-Flag-Nellie Morse; Calumet Farm, owner.

Nellie Flag was the champion 2 year old filly of last season, winning five of her ten starts, finishing second three times, and winning $57,240. She has won only one race this year in four starts, but now seems returning to her best form. Because she races well over a soft track is ranked as one of the contenders.

Count Arthur, ch. c., Reigh Count-Abbatissa; Mrs. J. D. Hertz, owner.

As a 2 year old Count Arthur was not much horse, remaining a maiden after five starts in which he finished second twice. But this season he won four straight races in good company, and has not yet been unplaced. He split Bloodroot and Black Helen in the head and head finish of the Prospect purse at Washington Park last Saturday.

Tearout, br. c., Terry-Rail On; D. B. Midkiff, owner.

Last year Tearout was just another horse, winning 4 races in 19 starts in cheap company. This year he moved up into the stake ranks, his most notable victory being in the recent Latonia Derby. Rates as an outsider with a chance.

Ann O'Ruley, ch. f., Man o' War-Priscilla Ruley; Mrs. A. A. Baroni, owner.

Ann O'Ruley won only two races and $1,615 in twenty-one starts as a 2 year old. This year she has won three in fifteen, with a third in the California Derby at Bay Meadows as her best effort. Likes mud, but hardly rates a chance in the Derby field.

Whopper, bc., Pharamond II.-Romance; Hal Price Headley, owner.

Just a fair 3 year old whose chief claim to fame is that he is reputedly the largest horse in training. Requires a fast track and ranks as an improbable starter otherwise.

Judy O'Grady, br. f., Man o' War-Bel Agnes; Walter M. Jeffords, owner.

A maiden filly that has been working well and likes mud. Fourth to Black Helen in Coaching Club American Oaks.

Joseph J. G., bg., Altawood-Blended; Yack and Peters, owners.

More words have been written about him than any other 3 year old in the country. Managed to beat a band of $1,750 selling platers in the mud at Washington Park on Thursday. It was his first victory of the year.

Otis Thomas Makes Pro Debut; Beats Adam Smith

Otis Thomas, heavyweight member of the 1935 Chicagoland Golden Gloves team, made his professional debut by defeating Adam Smith, Rockford, in a four round bout which headed a charity show at the Marigold Gardens last night. Lenny Cohen won a six round decision over Jimmy Eliopoulos. Other results:

Lou Vine beat Harry Booker, [6].
George Bittner knocked out Emil Pappas, [4].
Frank Keevil and Spud Kelly drew, [4].

Roman Soldier Is Choice in Derby Today

ports that Firethorn, which finished second to Omaha in the Belmont stakes, had pulled up a bit gimpy after a speed test yesterday. Some said the injury was not serious and that he would soon walk his way out of it. Firethorn and Judy O'Grady were quoted at 10 to 1.

Next in line as far as public support was concerned was Nellie Flag, the speedy filly from Warren Wright's Calumet farm stable. Her stable companion, Calumet Dick, scored a brilliant victory in the Burr Oak purse yesterday. Calumet Dick and Nellie Flag have been working together in the American Derby drills. Nellie Flag has been running away from Calumet Dick in these trials, so the Calumet farm forces are greatly encouraged. Calumet Dick toyed with his rivals in the Burr Oak and was pulled up almost to a walk when he won.

Young Alfred G. Vanderbilt is coming on from New York to see his colt, Cold Shoulder, run in the Derby. Cold Shoulder indicated his speed when he worked a mile and a half within a second of the world's record in preparing for the Belmont stakes.

Blackbirder Is Long Shot.

Persons looking for a long shot to upset the Derby picture spent last night digging into the records of Blackbirder, a gelded son of Bostonian which races for Mrs. Charles Hainsworth and which will be ridden by her husband. Never especially prominent in the news, Blackbirder has been running good races all season. He was close up in the Kentucky Derby in one of his best efforts and finished third behind Roman Soldier in the Detroit Derby.

The others in the field are doubtful starters. They are Whopper, Hal Price Headley's oversized colt which prefers a fast track; Ann O'Ruley, Mrs. A. A. Baroni's filly which was a third in the California Derby, and the notorious Joseph J. G. Trainer Peters indicated last night he would withdraw Joseph J. G. because he had drawn No. 13 post position.

The students of Derby dope expect Black Helen and Nellie Flag to stage a desperate battle for the right to make the pace and they would not be surprised if one or the other holds on long enough to get the decision. If this doesn't happen, they look for the real Derby battle to come in the stretch and most of the dopsters figured it will be Roman Soldier, Count Arthur, Bloodroot and possibly Tearout in the thick of the fight through the final furlong.

REVOLTA GETS 69 TO LEAD BY 2 IN MEDINAH OPEN

Walsh and Mangrum Tied for Second with 71.

Wis., came home with a 72 for third place. A stroke back of Dodson were Harry Cooper, Illinois open champion from Glen Oak, and Al Huske, bespectacled Elgin pro, who played with a set of borrowed clubs. Tied at 74 were Tom Armour of the home club, Sonny Rouse of Deerfield, and Harry Hampton, Beverly veteran. The 75 group included Jimmy Thomson of Long Beach, Cal.; Butch Krueger of Beloit, Wis.; Denny Shute of Westward Ho, Horton Smith of Oak Park, Eddie Williams of River Forest, Lew Waldron of Mohawk, Bill Heinlein of Indianapolis, and Bill Kaiser of Louisville.

Today's field will find the pins, which were centered yesterday, in different positions and the tee plates moved back somewhat. Winter rules will be the order also today.

Revolta's 69 yesterday not only earned him the first round leadership but also brought him $50, which will be paid to the low scorer in each of the remaining three rounds as well. The prize list ranges from $750 for first place down to a $40 award. Three amateur prizes also will be given. Two Edgewater entrants, Chick Evans and T. A. E. Vyse, each with a 76, are now leading the race for these latter prizes.

Plays Beautiful Golf.

Revolta did not deny that he played beautiful golf throughout the round, stating that he was guilty of only two poor shots, missing his second shot on the 11th and getting away a poor tee shot on the 18th. Aside from these, Johnny was short of the third green with his third shot, and then couldn't get down a three foot putt. He three putted the 13th to follow the mood of the whole field on that green on the right side.

The western champion collected five birdies. He sank a 15 footer for a deuce at second, dropped a 10 footer after a neat spoon shot to the fourth, and chipped within two inches of the fifth pin. A ten footer on the 15th and another from 15 feet on the 17th brought him his birdies on the back nine.

N. U. SCENE OF CENTRAL A. A. U. TRACK TODAY

Thirteen Central A. A. U. champions will attempt to retain their titles at the 34th annual Central A. A. U. outdoor track and field meet to be held at Dyche stadium, Northwestern university, Evanston, at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Al Harris, who won the 100 meter and 200 meter dashes last year, must beat Ralph Metcalfe in order to retain his titles. Gordon Starrett of Ogden Park seeks another victory in the 110 meter high hurdles. John Brooks, former University of Chicago star now competing for Ogden Park, will attempt to repeat in the running broad jump, the hop, step, and jump, and the 200 meter low hurdles.

Harold Longman, also of Ogden Park, will have to beat Karl Hein of Northern Illinois State Teachers college, and L. C. Buckmaster of Northwestern to win the 800 meter run.

In only four events entries have not been received from last year's champions and new title holders will be named.

Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic committee, will be referee of the meet. School children including those of high school age will be admitted free.

MARION MILEY AND PATTY BERG IN GOLF FINALS

Omaha, Neb., June 21.—(AP)—Miss Patty Berg, a 17 year old Minneapolis high school youngster, and Miss Marion Miley of Lexington, Ky., the 21 year old daughter of a golf professional, battled their way to the Women's trans-Mississippi golf tournament finals here today.

The bid of Mrs. Opal S. Hill of Kansas City, the defending champion, for a fifth trans-Mississippi crown ended in a bunker on the 18th hole where Miss Miley scored a 1 up victory. Miss Berg defeated Phyllis Buchanan of Denver, tournament medalist a year ago and champion in 1933, 2 up.

GIANTS HAMMER OUT 11-4 VICTORY OVER PITTSBURGH

Seven Run Attack Routs Lucas in Second.

New York, June 21.—(AP)—The Giants defeated the second place Pirates, 11 to 4, for the second straight time today and gained the biggest lead they have held in two seasons.

Smashing Red Lucas out of the game with seven runs in the second inning, the league leaders increased their advantage to 7½ games over Pittsburgh and to 8 over the third place St. Louis Cardinals.

Mel Ott's thirteenth home run of the year was the climax of the Giants' early rally. The trouble for Lucas started with two out and one on base in the second. Castleman singled and Joe Moore was credited with a double when the wind carried his high fly out of Lloyd Waner's control. Then Dick Bartell and Bill Terry cracked a pair of base hits before Ott topped things off with his homer.

REDS, 5; DODGERS, 0.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 21.—(AP)—Don Brennan's pitching and Ernie Lombardi's hitting led the Cincinnati Reds to a 5 to 0 victory over the Dodgers today.

Brennan yielded only seven hits, all singles. Lombardi hit the upper tier of left field stands for a homer with two on base in the fourth.

Star Yachts to Race Today at Jackson Park

More than two dozen Star class racing yachts are entered in the Jackson Park Yacht club's annual open regatta today and tomorrow on the club course.

Sloops representing the Star boat fleets of the Sheridan Shore, St. Joseph River, Chicago, and Columbia Yacht clubs will join the Jackson Park Y. C. craft for the two day affair. Three races are to be held under the club's auspices. The fleet faces the starter's gun at 3 p. m. today; 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. tomorrow. Commodore A. A. Bennett's 54 foot cruiser Shadoc II. will be the race committee boat. William J. Moore, chairman of the J. P. Y. C. race committee, will be in charge of the regatta series, which is also to be sailed under the International Star Class Yacht Racing association.

Three types of racing sloops, the R, S [Eagle], and Pup classes, will be seen in competition at the Chicago Yacht club's A series race final race this afternoon off Belmont harbor at 2:15 o'clock. The first of three races during the season for the C. Y. C. Commodore's cup is to be sailed tomorrow by the racing classes at 2 p. m.

The newly quartered Columbia Canoe club acts as sponsor for the annual Lipton cup series regatta for sailing canoes tomorrow. Three races will be held at 10 a. m., 1 p. m., and 3 p. m. The club is now located at the south end of the Northwestern university campus, from where a course has been laid out on the lake. Don Bergman of Columbia will defend the Lipton championship against Lincoln Park Boat club and South Shore Canoe club team during the races.

safe on Jurges' fumble, but Maranville hit into a double play and Carleton threw out Jordan.

The second hit off Carleton was Berger's single with one out in the fourth. Moore lined to Carleton, who beat Berger in his return to first for an unassisted double play.

Lindstrom made his third single with two out in the fifth. Klein's easy bouncer went through Maranville. Lindstrom reaching third and Klein second. Cavarretta was given an intentional pass, filling the bases. Jurges singled to right, scoring Lindstrom and Klein and putting Cavarretta on third. Carleton singled to center, scoring Cavarretta and putting Jurges on third. Galan was hit by a pitched ball, filling the bases. Herman then forced Carleton at third, Mallon unassisted.

Collegian Breaks In.

Hartnett walked with one out in the sixth and stopped at third on Lindstrom's fourth hit, a double to right center. Klein singled to right, Hartnett scoring and Lindstrom stopping at third. Benton replaced Frankhouse. Cavarretta walked again, filling the bases. This time Jurges hit into a double play.

Ed Moriarty, captain of the Holy Cross team, who signed with the Braves this morning, made his major league debut with one out in the sixth. He singled to right center on the second pitch for the Braves' third hit off Carleton. Jordan and Lee then flied to Galan.

Berger Busts One.

Berger opened the home seventh with a 420 foot homer into the center field bleachers and Moore followed with a single to left center, the fifth hit off Carleton. Mallon fanned and Coscarart popped to Herman. Hogan lined to Jurges, who was playing him in short left.

Just to show Benton they could score off him, the Cubs put across four runs after two were out in the ninth. They did it on a single by Carleton, a triple by Galan, a single by Hack, and a triple by Hartnett. The Braves got Lindstrom out for the first time to end the inning.

Boston, Mass., June 21.—[Special.]—Larry French and Charley Root will pitch for the Cubs in tomorrow's getaway double-header with the Braves. Danny MacFayden and Dutch Brandt will perform for the Bostons.

SCHOOLBOY ROWE AND TIGERS BEAT YANKEES, 7 TO 0

Detroit, Mich., June 21.—(AP)—Lynwood [Schoolboy] Rowe, continuing his return to the great form he showed last season, turned in his third straight winning performance today when he shut out the Yankees, 7 to 0, to end the league leaders' six game winning streak.

Following up three hit and six hit performances in his last two starts, Rowe limited the Yanks to four hits, walked only three, and struck out seven while the Tiger batsmen were pounding the offerings of Charley Ruffing, Walter Brown, and Jimmy Deshong for eleven hits.

Rowe reached his peak in the fourth inning when he fanned Ben Chapman, Lou Gehrig, and Tony Lazzeri in succession.

Ruffing was fairly effective until the sixth inning although he was nicked for a run in each of the first two innings. Then he blew up after Charley Gehringer socked a home run to start the inning. Five Tigers crossed the plate before Brown finally retired the side.

Golf School Ends; Pros Pick Star Pupils for Tournament

School's out!

The last batch of graduates from THE TRIBUNE'S third annual free golf school last night tucked their diplomas under their arms and set out looking for new golfing worlds to conquer. The school, which has been conducted in coöperation with the thirteen member courses of the Daily Fee association, ended its third and final week when the men and boys took their sixth lesson.

The lesson last night was on chip shots and putting. Along with this, most courses included the fifth lesson—mashie play and approaching—for the benefit of the pupils who were washed out of their last lesson by heavy rainstorms.

The school, which has been giving the pupils two lessons weekly, has taken them through the entire assortment of golf shots. Starting with the grip, stance, and pivot, the pupils were taught the fundamentals of the golf stroke. Then they were instructed in the use of woods, irons, and putter.

All that remains to be done is to pick the winner in each class. All courses have now chosen the best pupil in each division to represent them.

Tomorrow, the fifty finalists [Cog Hill has only chosen two] will meet at Cog Hill at 1:30 p. m. in medal play competition. This will determine the best four pupils from the standpoint of scores.

Next Friday evening the same group will meet again, this time at Mid City, in the final form contests. A group of golfdom's greatest professionals will sit in judgment as each one of the lucky 50 will execute their best swings. The judges will then name the four winners. The public is invited to the final contests at both Cog Hill and Mid City.

The star pupils chosen last night follow:

Sox Win, 5-3; Climb Back to Second Place

board to score Kennedy with the run that put the Sox in front by 3 to 2. Then Haas walked, but Bonura grounded into a force play.

After the third Kennedy wasn't touched for a hit until the seventh, when McNair singled with one out. Warstler followed with a fly to Haas. Berry lined a single into center, shoving McNair to third. This prompted Connie Mack to summon, in the rôle of a pinch hitter, Johnny Marcum, whose single saved the first of Thursday's double-header for the A's. Marcum swung for Mahaffey but on this occasion didn't get away with anything. He sent a tall fly to Simmons.

Score Off Dietrich.

Dietrich was in trouble as soon as he went to work in the home half of the seventh. Shea welcomed him with a single past third. Kennedy bunted and Dietrich tried to throw out Shea at second. It was a good idea, but the throw went wild. Radcliff also bunted and Shea was nipped at third. After Hayes had flied to right, Haas singled to center to score Kennedy. Bonura ended the inning with a liner to Moses.

The Sox encountered a real bargain in the eighth. Simmons opened the inning with a line drive which Foxx speared. Appling walked. Dykes tapped in front of the plate and Dietrich, after pawing the ground a few times, finally picked up the ball and threw it where Foxx couldn't reach it. Foxx chased the ball into right field foul territory, but couldn't get it back to the infield before Appling was around to the plate. Dykes then died stealing, Shea walked and Kennedy fanned.

Foxx led off in the ninth with homer No. 13, the ball bouncing off the front of the upper deck in right, but just to prove he wasn't wilting, Kennedy fanned two of the next three men who faced him.

ROUGH WATER PUTS OFF YALE, HARVARD RACE

New London, Conn., June 21.—(AP)—For the first time in 37 years the throng assembled at the annual regatta of Harvard and Yale was turned away in disappointment tonight as rough water on the Thames caused postponement of the four mile varsity climax. The race will be rowed tomorrow morning at 9:30 a. m., Chicago daylight time.

The course will be laid upstream from the railroad bridge, past the submarine base to Bartlett's cove, far up the river. This is half of the course over which Yale's freshman and junior varsity eights rowed to two narrow victories in the preliminary races this morning. Tonight's race was to have been rowed down stream.

Gay Crowd Disappointed.

The huge observation train, 35 carloads of gaily bedecked, cheering persons in bleachers atop flat cars, had wound its excited way up the river to the cove for the scheduled start at 6 p. m. Out on the river President Roosevelt, in his same battered old lucky fishing hat that failed to bring good luck this morning to his son, Franklin Jr., in the Harvard junior varsity boat, rode on the bow of the referee's boat as it darted back and forth between Red Top and Gales Ferry, where the rival crews are housed.

Then in a space of a few minutes, the calm surface of the Thames was ruffled by a steadily increasing upstream breeze from the southeast. It hit the ebb tide, just beginning to flow fast and free, the water kicked up, and inside of a few more minutes, rowing conditions were impossible.

Eli Meet with Mishap.

The Yale freshmen, in a stirring finish, nipped a Harvard eight by a few feet at the finish line of the first race on the program of the 73d regatta, and in the junior varsity duel that followed, Yale lost all but a scant half dozen feet of its length margin in the last hundred yards, as the port side caught a crab and the entire crew lost three full strokes.

The finishes were so close that only two-fifths of a second separated the boats each time. Yale's time for the freshman race was 9:46; Harvard's, 9:46 2-5. In the jayvees it was Yale, 9:56; Harvard, 9:56 2-5.

Tietje to Pitch for White Sox Against Boston

Les Tietje, who has had nothing but grief poured on him in most of his starts for the White Sox, will be given another chance in the opener of the series with Boston's Red Sox today. Part of the reason for this choice is that Tietje, during the recent visit to Boston, whipped the Red Sox, 3 to 2, for his only nine inning victory of the year. Dusty Rhodes, who lost that game to Tietje, will be his opponent again today.

Williams-Flowers Bout Goes to Sox Park; Change Date

A new date and site were announced yesterday for the colored lightweight championship bout between Holman Williams of Detroit and Baby Tiger Flowers of California. The contest, set for 15 rounds, has been transferred from White City to White Sox ball park and will be held July 2 instead of next Thursday.

It is understood Frank Sagillo, the Cicero slugger, will appear in the ten round semi-final, his first Chicago bout under the management of Jack Hurley, former manager of Billy Petrolle. His opponent is likely to be Irish Jimmy Brady, eastern junior welterweight. Others who are booked to appear in supporting roles include Max Marek, Clinton Bridges, Lorenzo Pack, and Dave Clark.

Bus Breese went three rounds with Scotty McLean yesterday at Trafton's gymnasium in what was billed as a practice bout in preparation for his ten round scrap with Johnny Stanton at Marigold Gardens Monday. It proved to be one of the hardest battles Breese ever has encountered. His inability to solve McLean's one-two punches to the head has gained additional followers for Stanton. McLean will box Milt Aron in a six round supporting match.

CHARLEY WHITE JAILED ON WIFE'S ALIMONY WRIT

Charley White, former lightweight boxer who now operates a reducing school for women in Milwaukee, was sent to the county jail by Superior Judge Charles A. Williams yesterday for nonpayment of $1,100 in alimony and support money.

White was arrested in Milwaukee Thursday on a nonsupport warant obtained by his estranged wife, Stella, who lives with her two small daughters at 1065 North Shore avenue. Taken before Judge Leon Edelman in the Domestic Relations court yesterday, White was discharged.

He was immediately rearrested on a writ issued by Judge Williams last October, charging him with being $440 in arrears in payments to his wife. Mrs. White's father, Jacob Schwimmer, 2900 North Talman avenue, said the arrearage now totals $1,100. White tried in vain to raise part of the money.

PARKER, GRANT ADVANCE IN CLAY COURT TOURNEY

Cliff Sutter Is Upset by Billy Reese.

Frank Parker, Bryan Grant, and Billy Reese reached the semi-final round of the national clay court tournament yesterday before sudden showers curtailed the program at the River Forest Tennis club yesterday.

Reese, Georgia Tech star and tenth seeded entrant, scored the most surprising upset of the week's play when he pounded out a 6-4, 7-5 victory over Cliff Sutter, listed in No. 4 position.

The quarter-final match between Berkeley Bell, New York City, and the Chinese Davis cup captain, Sin Kia Kho, was called off in the second set with Bell leading at 3-7. Bell won the first set, 6-3. They will resume play this morning.

Time, :25, :50 2-5, 1:04 4-5, 1:12 2-5. Two dollar mutuels paid: Crinoline, $11.24 straight, $6.72 place, $3.54 show; Bonnie Dream, $10.96 place, $4.14 show; Ralph C., $2.48 show. Winner trained by F. Chiavetta. Went to post at 2:16. At post 1 minute. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving.

CRINOLINE, on outside early, worked her way to front under strong riding and came away gradually in final eighth. BONNIE DREAM, given a hustling ride and having speed from the start, could not hold the winner, yet held on fairly well. RALPH C. saved ground throughout, was under severe pressure the last three-eighths, but could not threaten leaders.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse $1,000. Net value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50.

Time, :25, :51, 1:19 1-5. Two dollar mutuels paid: Naval Cadet, $12.34 straight, $5.42 place, $3.60 show; Proposing, $6.64 place, $3.86 show; Good Politian, $3.20 show. Winner trained by J. J. Greeley. Went to post at 2:41. Left at once. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same.

NAVAL CADET, raced wide throughout, improved his position gradually and, after wearing down PROPOSING, came away slowly. Latter took command quickly, was raced a trifle wide for the better footing, and held on gamely but was not good enough. GOOD POLITIAN, well up from the start and under strong riding the last three-eighths, held on courageously.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse $1,000. Net value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50.

Time, :25, :50 3-5, 1:18. Two dollar mutuels paid: Lotta Airs, $4.32 straight, $2.54 place, $2.18 show; Kapena, $2.86 place, $2.24 show; Lovesick, $2.46 show. Winner trained by owner. Went to post at 3:06½. At post 1 minute. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving.

LOTTA AIRS, much the best and a factor from the start, raced into command gradually when ready and had something left. KAPENA, under strong urging from the start and near middle of track the final three-eighths, closed boldly in a good effort. LOVESICK took command easily and displayed good speed to stretch, but readily gave way to winner and weakened after five-eighths.

Time, :25 2-5, :51 4-5, 1:05 2-5. Two dollar mutuels paid: Trumps, $16.56 straight, $8.84 place, $6.26 show; Moll, $6.60 place, $4.84 show; Cinar, $4.08 show. Winner trained by F. Garrett. Went to post at 3:31. At post 1 minute. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving.

TRUMPS, forced back when in close quarters soon after reaching the turn, went to outside when clear, improved her position gradually after reaching stretch, and won without need of strong pressure. MOLL took command with a rush, was steadied around the turn, and held on with determination. CINAR, stumbled at the start, appeared to bear over when moving up fast in early stages, swerved to inside in stretch, and tired under hand riding in final eighth.

FIFTH RACE—One mile out of chute. Purse $1,000. Net value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50.

CALUMET DICK, raced under strong restraint for five-eighths, came away fast on stretch turn and, continuing as if much the best, retained safe command thereafter, winning well in hand. SYNOD, away slowly, began to move up on outside after reaching final half mile and swerved while standing a hard drive gamely. MARV, slow to respond, closed with determination in his good effort.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 50 yards. Purse $1,000. Net value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50.

EVERGOLD, forced very wide, dropped back slightly when racing wide on stretch turn, but came with determination when straightened and, wearing down SILENT SHOT, came away in last seventy yards. Latter, showing fine speed for the going, weakened in final eighth, but might have been a stronger factor had he not raced in the worst part of the track all the way. MAD FRUMP, raced wide throughout, held on well under a weak ride.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse $1,000. Net value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50.

Time, :25 4-5, :52, 1:19 3-5, 1:48, 2:02 2-5. Two dollar mutuels paid: Kwamudi, $6.64 straight, $4.04 place, $3.12 show; Calome, $3.46 place, $3.22 show; Fair Prospect, $5.56 show. Winner trained by S. B. Ott. Went to post at 5:10¾. At post ¾ minute. Start good. Won easily; place driving.

KWAMUDI made the race under restraint, easily withstood CALOME'S bid, and came away fast after a mile. CALOME swerved out soon after the start, improved his position gradually, and weakened after nearing the winner soon after reaching stretch. FAIR PROSPECT, badly outrun for three-quarters, gave improved speed thereafter and swerved over badly in last sixteenth.

Fishers Again Dispute Names of Esox Lucius

BY BOB BECKER.

Fishermen traveling north at this time of the year are going to face the same old arguments about certain species of fish because of the names they have in different parts of the country. One species that continues to cause confusion among anglers is old Esox lucius.

This fellow is just plain pickerel to fishermen in Chicagoland—the long bodied member of the pike family that can put on quite a scrap when it attains a weight of 8, 10 or 15 pounds.

Magazines Carry Out Deception.

Go north into some parts of Minnesota or northern Wisconsin and Esox lucius seems to vanish. At least his name disappears and there is the same species of fish known as the northern pike. No student of fishes has been able to find there is any real difference pickerel of Illinois and so called northern pike of some lakes of the north. But, northern pike it is up there and probably will be for some time to come. Even outdoor magazines help the good cause along and dignify old Esox lucius with the name of northern pike.

The question of what is a pickerel and what is a northern pike is discussed in THE TRIBUNE'S handbook on fresh water fishing, The Fisherman's Guide. This handy sized guide is distributed by the public service office of THE TRIBUNE, 1 South Dearborn street, Chicago. When sold over the counter the price of the 82 page illustrated handbook is 25 cents. By mail it is 30 cents.

Chapter two of the Guide takes up the muskie and the pickerel or northern pike, because the two fish belong to the same family. In this chapter anglers will find many facts about these two hard hitting species.

A Confusion of Names.

The chapter gives the true name of the pickerel or northern pike, what the fish is called in Ontario, and how the confusion of names mixes up the wall-eye, the northern pike, the pickerel and the muskie.

Among other things the Fisherman's Guide points out how the Wisconsin muskie is distributed through Minnesota lakes and on through Canadian fishing country west of Lake Michigan. But Michigan and the St. Lawrence valley have a different species which commonly is known as the St. Lawrence muskie. Fishermen who want one of these Tribune fishing handbooks should send their orders direct to the public service office.

DEATH DISPROVES GOSSIP DIRECTED AT SCHOOLGIRL

Herse Takes Body Home; Reproach to Talkers.

Wrapped in a silken shrowd and resting in a light gray coffin, Naomi Gilroy went back to Sidell, Ill., yesterday. And upon her soft, fair hair gleamed a figurative halo symbolizing vindicated virtue. Sidell will be able to recognize it.

Naomi, who was 14 years old, was brought to Chicago a week ago by her father, the Rev. Frank Gilroy, pastor of the Federated church of Sidell. His hopes for her recovery were vain, and she died Wednesday in the County hospital. That was tragedy, but it took death to furnish the proof that made his faith in the girl triumphant.

Three months ago Naomi, an eighth grade pupil in the Sidell school, became ill. It was a strange illness that defied the usual diagnoses. It became a subject of conversation with many of the 1,312 inhabitants of the little town, 160 miles south of Chicago, near Danville.

Cruel Rumors Started.

Simply because there was mystery, guesses were made as to what was wrong with the girl. No one knows who first started the cruelest rumor that can be circulated about a young woman. But it was started and it grew. Some of her schoolmates heard it, and, like their elders, whispered. Then they shunned the girl.

For weeks the Rev. Mr. Gilroy knew nothing of this. He devoted himself to his church duties and to the care of his family—a wife and seven children—just as he always had. As these things always happen, he was the last to hear the rumors. It was a member of his flock, probably intending to be kind, who took him aside and broached the subject.

"They say," said the church member, "that maybe Naomi has been indiscreet."

Defends Daughter's Name.

The minister did not understand. The informant elaborated.

"They say," he reiterated, "that you can look at Naomi and see what's wrong."

The Rev. Mr. Gilroy replied that the girl was ill, but that the suggestion was unthinkable. He reproached the talebearer. He spoke of those who bear false witness. Then he talked to the girl and from her answers was strengthened in his belief in her virtue. But the Rev. Mr. Gilroy is a fair man, and he summoned the elders of the church to discuss the matter.

His church, he said, was his life work. He thanked them for letting him labor in the fruitful vineyard of Sidell. Then he told them of the rumors that had come to him. They were not true, he was sure. But the church was to be thought of and the gossip might be an injury. He tendered his resignation. The elders were just men, and fair men. They declined to accept it.

Vows to Learn Truth.

"I promise to clear the name of my child," he said simply.

In Chicago the minister first went to a physician. He examined the girl and shook his head. He could not be sure, but it looked to him as if the gossip had foundation. Worried, but still strong in his faith, the pastor took Naomi to the County hospital. That was on June 15. It had not been definitly determined what the disease was when the girl died.

On Thursday a post-mortem examination of the body was made by Dr. Jerry Kearns, coroner's physician. He found that Naomi had died of a malignant abdominal tumor, aggravated when she was struck by a baseball several months ago. Most important, Dr. Kearns added that there was no evidence, none at all, to support the gossipers of Sidell.

The Rev. Mr. Gilroy rode on the seat of the herse that carried the body of his daughter back home. Funeral services will be held in the Federated church tomorrow.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Babe in the Woods

A. W. M'LEAN DEAD; FORMER GOVERNOR OF NORTH CAROLINA

Washington, D. C., June 21.—(AP)—Angus W. McLean, 65, former governor of North Carolina, died today at Emergency hospital.

Death was attributed to a blood clot in his right lung. He had been ill for several weeks.

He was brought here on May 17 from Atlantic City in a coast guard ambulance plane. He was stricken April 19 while en route from Washington, where he maintained a law office, to Atlantic City.

Mrs. McLean came here from North Carolina to be with her husband.

JOHN E. NORTHUP QUITS PROBE INTO STRAUB SLAYING

Attorney John E. Northup, formerly first assistant state's attorney, notified State's Attorney Courtney yesterday that he had withdrawn from the investigation of the murder last February of Louis K. Straub, manager of the Saddle and Cycle club. He had been asked to act in an advisory capacity with Attorney Henry L. Kane, who represents an insurance company which is resisting a claim of $4,000 by Straub's widow, who contends that his death was connected with his employment by the club.

Attorney Kane said he had evidence he believed would result in an indictment being voted by the grand jury. He asked that Attorney Northup be permitted to cooperate with an assistant state's attorney who would present his evidence to the grand jury. Yesterday Mr. Northup said the request was withdrawn because of the impression created that he was seeking to be made a special assistant state's attorney in the case. He said he declined to act further in the matter.

The prosecutor's invitation to Attorney Kane to produce his evidence this morning still stands, it was said at the prosecutor's office last night.

WOMAN'S DEATH AT PARTY LAID TO HEART DISEASE

A coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict stating that the death of Mrs. Margarette Ford McGivney, 28 years old, 25 East Delaware place, who became ill in the Lincoln Park Arms hotel last Friday, was due to heart disease.

At the inquest, conducted in the county morgue, were Lissell Leix, 31 years old, a shoe salesman, and Mrs. Lucille Fleigelman, admitted drug addict, who were with Mrs. McGivney when her condition became alarming after they had all been on a drinking party. Mrs. Fleigelman had told the police she believed Mrs. McGivney had taken some heroin, but the post-mortem examination failed to show any trace of the drug.

A charge of manslaughter had been placed against Leix and Mrs. Fleigelman, but it is expected they will be dismissed in view of the coroner's jury's finding. Mrs. Fleigelman is being held for violation of the federal narcotic act.

GIRL DROWNED IN POOL AFTER DRINKING PARTY

Miss Josephine Stein, 19 years old, a café entertainer who lived at Sibley boulevard and Vinson street, Calumet City, was drowned yesterday while swimming in a clay hole at 186th street and Wentworth avenue, Lansing, after a drinking party.

Her nude body was recovered from the clay hole by Lansing police. The police learned that she had deserted Tony Szafraski, her escort for the evening, and left her home at 2 o'clock in the morning with Gus Madziak, 23 years old, 28 154th place, Calumet City.

Madziak told police that he drove her around for a time while they drank from a bottle of whisky. Then Miss Stein asked to be taken to the clay hole. There she disrobed and slipped into the water. After wading out a few feet she stepped into a deep hole and sank. Madziak notified the police.

Court Adjudges Value of Vare Estate at $1,035,923

Philadelphia, Pa., June 21.—(AP)—Judge Charles Sinkler in Orphans' court today adjudged the value of the personal estate of the late William S. Vare at $1,035,923, the bulk of which was left to the widow, Mrs. Ida Vare, and to two daughters, Mrs. Beatrice Shaw, and Mrs. Mildred Kipp. Bequests of $7,000 each to the Methodist Episcopal hospital and the Episcopal hospital, voided because Vare died within 30 days of executing the will, will be paid, his survivors said.

Edwin S. Lewis, Author and Scholar, Dies at 76

New York, June 21.—(AP)—Edwin S. Lewis, 76, author and scholar, died today after a brief illness. His works, written while he was professor of romance languages at Princeton university, included "The Dialect of Guernsey" and the editing of "Michael Strogoff," "La Tulipe Noire," and "Dona Perfecta." In 1926 he became counselor to an insurance company.

CLAIMS CEMETERY BALKS REMOVAL OF WIFE'S BODY

So he might carry out his wish and that of his late wife that they be buried in adjoining graves, Joseph Pryga, 55 years old, 5001 Lincoln avenue, filed a suit in Superior court yesterday for an injunction to restrain officials of St. Adalbert's cemetery, Niles, from interfering with the removal of his wife's body from that cemetery for reinterment in the Rosehill cemetery. Pryga charges in his suit that the cemetery officials have failed to keep a promise, which he says was given when he purchased a single lot in St. Adalbert's, that he would be permitted to transfer his wife's body when he was able to purchase a larger lot in the Rosehill cemetery. Pryga is a watchman at Rosehill cemetery.

BILLY RANIERI'S MOTHER TAKES LIFE BY POISON

Illness Blamed; Deny Fear of Vengeance.

An inquest into the death of Mrs. Theresa Ranieri, 49 years old, whose son, Billy, was the victim in a sensational kidnaping in September, 1928, was delayed yesterday until July 2 to allow time for a post mortem examination by a coroner's physician. Mrs. Ranieri killed herself by taking poison in her home at 4901 Altgeld street early in the morning.

Witnesses at the inquest said that fear of revenge from friends of the two men convicted of kidnaping her son had nothing to do with the death. Both Billy, now 17 years old, and his father, Alex, said Mrs. Ranieri had been in poor health for several weeks.

Husband's Money Losses Blamed.

They also told the coroner's jury that she had been despondent over the losses incurred by her husband. Ranieri, who once was a wealthy contractor, said that he lost a million dollars while building levees in Louisiana.

Billy Ranieri was kidnaped on Sept. 5, 1928. The police, at first unable to gain any information from the family, finally got a clew and arrested Angelo Petitti on Sept. 14. As police questioned him, the Ranieri family received a threat that the boy would be beheaded if the ransom payment was not made.

Boy Released Unharmed.

The boy was released unharmed near Lockport on Sept. 18, and ten days later police found the house in which he had been held near Kankakee. The tenant, Andrew Cappellano, was arrested later in Herrin and was placed on trial with Petitti.

Shotgun assassins killed Ole Scully, a state witness, as the opening statements were under way in court. Five other men connected with the prosecution were beaten with baseball bats in a west side restaurant. The state was successful in the prosecution and the two defendants were sentenced to 25 years in prison.

FUNERAL TODAY FOR JOHN G. AGAR, PACKING OFFICIAL

Funeral services for John G. Agar secretary and treasurer of the Agar Packing company, 4057 South Union avenue, who died Thursday, will be held this afternoon in the home at 230 Mayflower road, Lake Forest. Burial will be in Lake Forest cemetery.

Mr. Agar, who was 41 years old, died of a heart attack at the Drake hotel. He was the son of James S. Agar, president of the packing company, and the grandson of the late John Agar, who founded the company in 1866.

John G. Agar was a former football player at the University of Chicago. He was a member of the Midway and University clubs. He is survived by his widow, the former Lillian Rogers, and three sons and a daughter.

TEXAS STORMS HALT AIR LINER FROM CHICAGO

BY WAYNE THOMIS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Corpus Christi, Tex., June 21.—[Special.]—Dense fog, driving rains, thunderstorms, and violent winds were hurdles last night and today in the course of Braniff Airways Electra airliner on the first official flight of a new service linking Chicago, southern oil cities, and Central American countries.

J. C. CASSLEMAN FUNERAL TODAY; 80 YEARS IN CITY

Funeral services for John Christian Cassleman, a resident of Chicago for the last 80 years, will be held at 10 o'clock today in St. Vincent's Roman Catholic church, Webster and Sheffield avenues, and burial will be in Calvary cemetery.

Mr. Cassleman, who was 82 years old, died Tuesday of heart disease in his home at 2127 Cleveland avenue. He had been an invalid for the last three years. Mr. Cassleman was born in Utica, N. Y., but his parents brought him to Chicago when he was a baby.

For some years he was in the tanning business with his father, Christian Cassleman, but later engaged in traction promotion, his first achievement being the negotiating of the franchise for the old Chicago Electric Transit company.

Surviving are his widow, Alice, and three sons, Frank, John R., and Robert.

Alice Davis, 82, Famed Seminole Chieftain, Dies

Wewoka, Okla., June 21.—(AP)—Alice Brown Davis, 82, famed woman chieftain of the Seminole Indian nation, died here today. Mrs. Davis was the only Indian woman from this district occupying a niche in the Oklahoma hall of fame. For years before her appointment as chief of the Seminoles by President Harding in 1922, Mrs. Davis was a leader of her tribe. She was the daughter of a Scotch physician and a Florida Seminole princess.

Last Survivor of Gladstone Cabinet, 89, Taken by Death

LONDON, June 22.—[Saturday.]—(AP)—Lord Edmond George Fitzmaurice, last surviving member of Gladstone's cabinet, died today. He was 89 years old June 19. Fitzmaurice was the second son of the fourth marquess of Lansdowne. He was undersecretary for foreign affairs from 1882 to 1885 and from 1905 to 1908.

News of the Radio Stations

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Through with adventure, Phillips Lord is coming back to the air as Seth Parker. After a two year cruise "around the world" that ended ingloriously when his schooner, the Seth Parker, foundered in the South seas, Lord plans to reopen the doors to Seth Parker's mythical home for weekly gatherings of his Jonesport, Me., neighbors at 9:30 Sunday evening, June 30, over an NBC network.

Lord again will write and produce the sketches as well as play the leading part and all of the original cast will return to their down east rôles. The hymn-sing around Ma Parker's old melodeon also will be restored.

It seems doubtful whether Seth Parker can ever have quite the same aura again. It is true that Phillips Lord is said to be a much chastened man after a two year fling that had him in hot water much of the time. His troubles started while at the World's Fair here. Then he was accused of faking while broadcasting from his schooner at various points along the eastern seaboard.

In Jamaica a native was killed while Lord was making a jungle film which caused him embarrassment. Then followed a tiff with NBC who sent down a vice president to collect the broadcasting equipment Lord was using. However, Lord mollified him and then went on his way, finally coming to further grief in the south seas. The fact that NBC has taken up with Lord again would seem to indicate that they have considerable faith in him.

Tito Guizar, Columbia tenor, who has been playing at the Chicago theater during the last week, yesterday was considering a plea to return to Hollywood. On the basis of his performance in "Argentina," a Fox picture not yet released, he is wanted for a part in "Here Is Romance" featuring Nino Martini, CBS tenor. This is another one of those "One Night of Love" pictures with Martini playing the Grace Moore part and Mme. Schumann-Heink that of Tulio Carminati. Tito has been asked to play the rôle of Martini's brother. Veloz and Yolanda, whose orchestra is now heard over W-G-N nightly, also appear in "Argentina."

Tito may be heard in the fall on that cigaret series headlining Andre Kostelanetz with various guest soloists. Guizar is a handsome young Mexican born lad. He has been on the American airlanes for about four years now. It was he who first introduced the Mexican soldier song which has become so popular of late, "La Cucuracha."

Jesse Block and Eve Sully, comedy team who have just concluded a series with Lud Gluskin and Gertrude Niesen on CBS are at the Chicago this week. . . . Graham McNamee conquered the Poughkeepsie regatta jinx on Tuesday. He called the right crew as winner. Other years he has not always been so fortunate. . . . Willis Cooper, who writes the ghostly "Lights Out" series is the author of a new serial titled "Flying Time" designated for its first presentation at 5 p. m. next Monday over NBC. It concerns aviation and has an airport setting.

"The Flag and Fidac," a patriotic program, is to be presented by the American Legion auxiliary as its annual report to members throughout the nation in a broadcast over WMAQ-NBC at 1:30 this afternoon. There will be tributes to Fidac from representatives of the United States and nine other countries. Bernardine Flynn, NBC actress, will speak for America.

GOVERNOR SEARCHES NEW MEXICO DESERT FOR 4 ILLINOISIANS

Socorro, N. M., June 21.—(AP)—Gov. Clyde Tingley led a small army over 100 miles of the central New Mexico cactus studded desert today in quest for four missing Illinois tourists.

With his aids, the governor searched for Mr. and Mrs. George Lorius and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Heberer of Du Quoin and East St. Louis, Ill., missing since May 22. Aiding him were almost a hundred men, some of them members of the New Mexico National Guard.

The searchers covered the entire route from East Vaughn, N. M., to Socorro, the road upon which it is believed the two couples may have been slain by robbers.

Not a trace of the four was discovered, but a new clew came to light, a report that the couples had mailed two additional postcards May 22 from Aubuquerque, on the day before they had mailed cards from Vaughn. A searching party was organized at Albuquerque to cover the country near the Rio Grande.

INDIANA SLAYER DOOMED TO DIE IN CHAIR TOMORROW

Michigan City, Ind., June 21.—(AP)—[Special.]—Barring a last minute reprieve such as saved his life four weeks ago, Richard Chapman, 22, of Hobart, Ind., will die in the electric chair in the Indiana state penitentiary here early Sunday for the murder of Henry Nolte on his farm near Hobart last Dec. 31.

Gov. Paul V. McNutt indicated today that he does not intend to interfere again with Chapman's execution. On May 25, less than two hours before Chapman was to have walked to the chair, Gov. McNutt granted a reprieve on the condemned man's plea that new evidence would prove his innocence.

Taken before Judge William J. Murray in Crown Point Tuesday, Chapman accused another man of killing Nolte. The other man produced a perfect allbi.

Attorney W. J. Sherman for Chapman said he would appeal to Gov. McNutt for another stay tomorrow, and if that fails will appeal to the Indiana Supreme court.

BROTHER ON WAY TO SEE BODY IN SINGER MYSTERY

Police and coroner's investigators yesterday were waiting the arrival of relatives of Mrs. Mary L. Bosler, 61 years old, 181 Lake Shore drive, singing teacher and modiste, who is believed to have been buried in potter's field. Photos of a body found in the lake on May 29 were the basis of a tentative identification. Ferdinand W. Meyer, a brother of Mrs. Bosler, of Burlington, Ia., informed Attorney Robert M. Woodward that he may ask that the body be taken to Dodgeville, Ia., for burial. An investigation has revealed that the singer had financial difficulties.

New York, June 21.—[Special.]—Strong investment demand entered the bond market today, making itself felt particularly among high grade rails and utilities. Gains ranged from 1 to 6 points. There was an especially noticeable demand for utility issues yielding 4¼ to 5 per cent, responsive to gathering reports from Washington that the holding company bill is likely to fail of passage in its present form.

Trading volume dropped to almost half of that of Thursday but it was accounted for in large part by the lessened activity in United States governments. Transfers aggregated $12,424,000, par value, compared with $20,104,000 the day before, and of this amount governments accounted for $1,450,000, against $9,730,000.

Rails, Utilities Firm.

Particular firm spots were Atlantic Coast Line 4½s at 78¼, "Katy" 5s at 48¼, Nickel Plate 5½s at 69⅞, Columbia Gas 5s at 89¼, Federal Light and Traction 5s at 95, Paramount Publix 5½s at 95½, Warner Brothers 6s at 66, and American and Foreign Power 5s at 69½.

Three issues of International Telephone bonds, which were by far the most active bonds on the stock exchange, bounded up 3 or more points, while Postal Telegraph 5s, the subsidiary that recently applied for reorganization, also met heavy demand at higher levels. Western Union bonds ended a point or so better.

Kelly-Springfield 6s Rise.

Among speculative bonds, Kelly-Springfield 6s of 1943 were an outstanding feature, jumping as much as 6 points on optimistic interpretation of the rejection of the Goodyear reorganization proposal.

Investment buying also gave support to government issues, otherwise suffering under the influence of the impending treasury auction offering Monday. Governments gained 1-32 to 5-32 point.

Foreign bonds were irregularly higher, showing only minor price changes in light volume.

Miller & Hart.

Investors' Guide: Please let me know what you think of Miller & Hart stock.—H. P. L.

Answer: Miller & Hart, Inc., Chicago, processes pork and prepares certain by-products. Principal products are smoked hams, bacon, and shoulders, lard and sausages. It purchased a half interest in Roberts & Oake of Iowa, Inc., in 1934.

Sales in 1934 increased 50 per cent over 1933, but were insufficient to take the company out of the red where it has been for the last four years. The four year record of earnings follows:

Yr. ended Oct. 31,	Net sales.	Net loss.	Loss per pfd. shr.
1934	$6,468,000	$170,000	$3.79
1933	4,186,000	206,000	4.60
1932	4,717,000	200,000	4.46
1931	7,906,000	85,000	1.88

On Oct. 31, 1934, current assets, including cash of $820,000, totaled $1,522,000 and current liabilities, including $50,000 notes payable, were $306,000. Funded debt was $1,035,500. This will mature in 1943.

There are outstanding 44,734 shares of $3.50 dividend cumulative no par preferred, on which nothing has been paid since Oct. 1, 1932, and 39,468 shares of no par common. Accumulated unpaid preferred dividends totaled $12.10 a share on April 1, 1935.

Both the preferred and common are quite speculative.

Central Public Utility.

Investors' Guide: Will you kindly furnish me with information on Central Public Utility corporation 5½s? My life's savings are in these and other bonds on which I am getting no interest and I am out of employment. I have been able to secure only very little temporary work during the last three years.—Mrs. P. H. C.

Answer: Central Public Utility corporation is a utility holding corporation owning a system of widely scattered properties subject to a heavy debt structure. The 5½s, due 1952, are specifically secured by all the common stock of Consolidated Electric and Gas company, the principal unit of the system.

Consolidated Electric and Gas company is a holding company, however, and its stock is subject to about $125,000,000 of funded debt. Earnings of that company are none too promising with not much visible prospect of improvement.

On Dec. 31, 1934, total assets of Central Public Utility amounted to $48,473,000, of which $48,424,000 was represented by investments and a mere $65 by cash.

The 5½s, due 1952, pay interest only if earned. Nothing has been paid on them to date. They are purely speculative.

STOCKS BOUND; EXPECT DELAY IN TAX PROGRAM

All Sections of List Join Upturn.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 21.—Overnight advices from Washington representing President Roosevelt's new "soak-the-rich" tax program as just another political gesture backed by no serious intent of enactment in the near future lifted Wall street's downcast spirits anew and sent the stock market bounding forward with fresh vigor today.

Gains ranging up to $4 a share were marked up in the standard industrials, and one or two of the more volatile description did even better. Numerous issues advanced 1 to 2 points. The turnover was the second largest of the month at 1,517,240 shares.

All Parts of List Strong.

All sections of the list participated in the renewed advance and all hands seemed out to down the bogey raised by the latest Roosevelt proposal. Incidentally the trading fraternity was keenly interested in a Washington dispatch indicating that advance news of the Roosevelt tax plan had "leaked" to Wall street in time to permit a market "cleanup" by big time traders before the close of trading Wednesday afternoon. Suspicions of such a "leak" have been generally entertained among the rank and file ever since the news became public through the Thursday morning newspapers, but brokers have been rather chary of expressing any views they may have entertained to that effect.

The sudden selling wave which broke in the last hour of trading Wednesday was a mystery to most observers, and guesses by financial writers of the late afternoon editions as to the cause of the break varied widely.

Have No Inkling of Influence.

One commentator thought it was due to the profit taking and a general feeling that the list was due for a technical correction after its protracted advance. Another reckoned that the 2 cent break in wheat might have been the cause, and still another guessed that rumors of an impending break in the price of copper metal was to blame. None had an inkling of the true reason and it was not until the next morning that the average trader learned what it was all about.

Today's Washington dispatches indicated that the tax message was ready for transmission to congress early Wednesday morning, but that it was delayed to enable the senate to dispose of the social security bill then under consideration. It was rumored, however, that a "warning" of it reached the street somehow in the early afternoon in time to enable "lucky" operators to steal a march on the less fortunate members of the fraternity.

News Items Are Favorable.

In addition to today's "reassurances" that "Democratic leaders will not push the program at this session of congress," it was said, the market had the benefit of two or three other helpful news items to enable it to get going again. Railroad stocks were given a push by an excellent freight carloadings report covering last week.

A dispatch from the nation's capital indicated that not enough strength could be mustered in the house to pass the "death sentence" utilities holding bill, and this stimulated renewed buying in the power and light shares. The fresh inflation talk was about to help the silver mining and other so-called inflation shares.

Trading in railroad stocks was more active. Great Northern and New York Central were especially prominent. Union Pacific and Atchison rose nearly 2 points each and advances of fractions to a point or more were the rule elsewhere in the department.

Utilities Enter New Ground.

The utilities moved into new high ground for the year, gains amounting to 2 points. All communications shares found a rising demand.

The good performance in the motor group was led by Chrysler which surged above 50 on the largest turnover in the list. Its net advance was about 2½ points. General Motors climbed over a point and Auburn added 2. Accessories came in for their share of attention, some of them selling at new high prices.

Steels rose 1 to 2 points, and the chemicals twice that much. Tobaccos again were strong, mainly on the rise in cigaret production reported for last month and the quieting of fears of price cutting.

Among miscellaneous stocks to rise 2 to 4 points were American Can, Westinghouse, Continental Can, Eastman, American Sugar, Commercial Investment Trust, Johns Manville, and Owens Glass.

Dual Forces Keep Stocks in Turmoil

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Two tremendous influences are pushing on the stock market from opposite directions and both of them emanate from Washington. One is the bearish influence of legislation restricting business and increasing the tax load. The other is inflation—the piling up of vast accumulations of idle funds in the banks by the New Deal's borrowing and spending program.

Yesterday's rise in stock quotations indicated that the inflation influence was temporarily predominant. On the small consolation that the public may have derived from the reports that the New Deal's tax boosts would probably be delayed until the next session of congress and the congressional resistance to the bill to destroy utility holding companies some heavy buying came into the market, pushing leading stocks up one to five dollars a share.

Brokers here reported that most of the buying was for cash. There appeared to be little speculative trading of the in and out variety. People with money to invest were buying shares outright in most cases.

The press of idle funds—the necessity for finding employment for money so that it will return a fair income—is rapidly driving private capital out of bonds and into common stocks. Manipulation of the money markets has forced the yield on bonds down to levels at which the return on capital is not sufficient. Investors, despite the discouragement afforded by new and proposed legislation, are turning to stocks in sheer desperation.

Social Security Act Demands Big Boost in National Debt.

Much has been said about the depressing effect upon industry of taxes called for in the social security bill, but there is another phase of this experiment which would profoundly affect national ecomony.

It has been estimated that funds so collected from employers and workers would aggregate 9 billions in seven years and that they would ultimately total 32 billions. All of this money is to be invested in government bonds.

There aren't that many government bonds now. The federal debt is now about 28 billions 700 millions. There is no doubt that the debt will be 32 billions in the near future, but it will have to total much more than 32 billions if the social security funds alone are to absorb 32 billions ultimately, because banks, insurance companies, and other institutions always hold large quantities of government bonds.

Thus, the social security act would demand a big increase in the federal debt, which would necessitate further tax increases to service that debt, which in turn would add to the taxes levied on industry over and above the taxes levied for contributions to the social security funds.

The whole thing becomes a Chinese puzzle of borrowing, spending, and taxing with the politicians using the funds squeezed out of employer and employé alike to finance the pork barrel.

With all the cash paid into the social security funds borrowed by the government in exchange for bonds the result would be the spending of the funds set up supposedly as shock absorbers for workers in future depressions for dams, postoffices, and pay rollers.

When need arose to tap the funds for the benefit of idle workers there would be no cash—only government bonds, which, as the banks have found, are not liquid when possessed in large quantities.

Bond Traders Are Puzzled by Tax Exemption Moves.

The administration's proposal for a constitutional amendment to make bonds of the federal government, cities, states and other public bodies taxable is puzzling bond experts.

The great popularity of government and municipal bonds ever since the war has been due largely to their tax exempt features. Individuals with large incomes have bought such bonds because of the tax exemption. They have been content with low yields because their tax bills were lower. Under present federal income tax rates an individual with an annual income of $100,000 finds it more profitable to hold a 2½ per cent municipal bond than to hold a 5½ per cent taxable corporation bond.

The New Dealers go on the theory that they can increase income tax collections by taxing income from bonds of public bodies now tax exempt. Such would no doubt be the case, but in increasing tax collections by removing the attractions for such bonds to investors the government would be forcing all public bodies, itself included, to pay higher rates of interest on their bonds.

PURE OIL ASKS APPROVAL OF REFUNDING PLAN

New Notes to Carry Stock Warants.

Stockholders of the Pure Oil company last night were asked to grant directors the authority to carry out a plan for refunding $27,500,000 in notes outstanding by the issuance of new notes carrying nondetachable warants which give the noteholders right to buy up to 30 shares of common stock for each $1,000 note.

"Conditions have developed which indicate the probability that the company may be able to refund at a lower rate its outstanding note issues which bear interest of 5½ per cent," said President Henry M. Dawes in the letter to stockholders. He also said that "a satisfactory increase" in earnings has been shown since Jan. 1, and that a net profit of $1,700,000 is estimated for the four months ended April 30 last, after all charges.

Issue May Be $32,000,000.

To obtain additional working capital, an issue of not to exceed $32,000,000 of 15 year sinking fund notes is contemplated by the directors. Outstanding notes to be retired are $12,500,000 of 10 year notes due Aug. 1, 1937 and $15,000,000 of 10 year notes due March 1, 1940. Both bear 5½ per cent interest. While the rate expected on the new bonds is not disclosed by the company, it is expected to be near 4 per cent, depending on conditions at the time of the offering.

It is necessary that holders of two-thirds of the stock sign releases of their preëmptive right to subscribe to any stock issued by the company. Dawes urged shareholders to sign the waivers at once so that the financing can be completed at an early date.

Terms Are Not Decided.

Although the new notes will carry optional warants permitting stock purchases, exact terms have not been determined, said Dawes, but plans contemplate placing a price of $15 a share on stock purchased under warants up to July 1, 1938. After that date the price would be increased $2.50 a share in each succeeding three year period, with a final price of $25 a share indicated for the final period ending July 1, 1950.

Preliminary discussions already have been held with a number of houses which have handled similar issues, it was said.

PUBLIC SERVICE MAY, FIVE MONTH PROFITS DECLINE

Net income of the Public Service company of Northern Illinois and subsidiaries for May and the first five months of 1935 showed a decrease from the corresponding periods of last year, the company announced yesterday. The drop in May net income, despite higher gross revenues, was attributed to rate reductions, increased cost of purchases, and higher taxes.

In May net income amounted to $219,955, compared with $266,775 a year ago, and gross was $2,948,329, against $2,891,999. For the first five months net income was $1,605,133, against $2,891,999. For the first five months net income was $1,605,133, against $1,702,293, and gross $15,372,919, against $15,141,119.

The company declared quarterly dividends of $1.50 and $1.75 on the 6 and 7 per cent preferred stocks, respectively, both payable Aug. 1 to stock of record July 15.

Kilowatt hours of electrical energy supplied to residential, commercial, and large power and light customers during the first five months of the year were 7.3 per cent above the corresponding period of last year, but gross revenues from this class of business dropped 2.2 per cent due to the electric rate reductions that went into effect on June 1, 1934.

Restrain Action Pending Suit on Processing Tax

Kansas City, Mo., June 21.—[Special.]—Federal Judge Albert L. Reeves today ordered Dan M. Lee, collector of internal revenue, to withhold any action to prosecute officials of the Larrabee Flour Mills company for violation of the AAA, pending his decision of the company's application for a temporary injunction to restrain collection of the AAA wheat processing tax. The milling concern charges that the tax of 30 cents a bushel on wheat is unconstitutional. Judge Reeves took the injunction request under advisement.

EDISON PAYS 21-3 MILLION FOR USE OF STREETS

Checks amounting to $2,334,268 were turned over to City Controler Robert B. Upham yesterday by the Commonwealth Edison company as payment to the city for use of streets and alleys during the year ended last May 31.

The payment represents 3 per cent of the company's gross business during the 12 months, and exceeds the amount anticipated by the city in making up its 1935 budget. City officials said that the money will be used to meet payrolls and other corporate expense.

Edison company officials said that this payment alone amounts to $2.54 for each customer on its books June 1, and is in addition to property, income, sales, and license taxes. The company is the largest taxpayer doing business entirely within Illinois.

MERCHANDISE BANK VOTES $4 DIVIDEND BASIS

Capital stock of the Merchandise Bank and Trust company was placed on a $4 annual dividend basis yesterday when directors observed the institution's fifth birthday by voting an initial distribution of $1, payable July 6 to stockholders of record June 29.

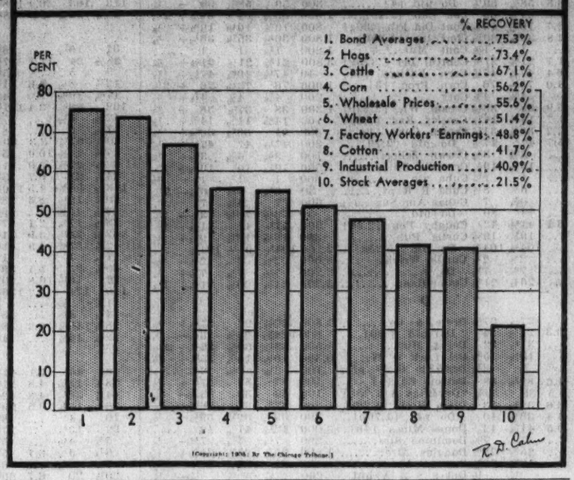
Net earnings for the first six months of 1935 are expected to be approximately $100,000, it was said by officials. Profit in 1934 was $94,742.

George B. Everitt, chairman, said that a growth in deposits from $3,000,000 to $8,000,000 in the last eighteen months has made possible the profit which makes a dividend "conservative and sound." Notwithstanding payment of 2½ per cent on savings, the highest rate in Chicago, Everett said the bank has been able to invest its assets profitably and safely. The management attributes the increase in deposits to consistent newspaper advertising together with a liberal lending policy and personalized methods of serving depositors.

Atlantic & Pacific Tea Net Dips to $7.13 a Share

New York, June 21.—(AP)—The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company and subsidiaries report for year ended Feb. 28 net profit of $16,708,674, equal to $7.13 a share on the common stock. This compares with $20,478,190, or $8.94 a share in 1934.

Extent of 1929-1935 Decline Which Has Been Recovered to Date



Freight Trafic Heaviest Since October, 1933

Washington, D. C., June 21.—[Special.]—Showing a contra-seasonal rise of 22,256 cars, or 3.6 per cent, freight trafic on the nation's railways last week reached the best level for any week since October, 1933. The total of 653,092 cars, announced by the Association of American Railroads, was 34,211 cars above a year ago, and 60,333 cars higher than 2 years ago.

The showing for the week was largely due to threats of a bituminous coal strike at that time, although the strike has since been called off. The gain last week brought the total for the year to date to 13,990,174 cars, compared with 14,167,298 cars in the corresponding period of last year and 12,092,943 cars in 1933.

Miscellaneous Trafic Gains.

Miscellaneous freight totaled 237,129 cars, an increase of 4,451 above the preceding week, a decrease of 10,465 below 1934, and an increase of 5,452 above 1933. Less than carlot merchandise took 156,970 cars, a decrease of 663 below the preceding week, 4,483 below 1934, and 11,862 below 1933.

Grain and grain products totaled 25,843 cars, an increase of 1,328 above the preceding week, but reductions of 7,963 below 1934, and 12,408 below 1933.

Live stock loading amounted to 10,346 cars, decreases of 565 below the preceding week, 2,466 below 1934, and 5,122 below 1933.

WESTERN ROADS TO CUT RATES ON RAIL SHIPMENTS

Western trunk line railroads will cut rates on less than carload shipments by approximately 10 per cent and instal free pickup and delivery service as an aggressive move against trucking competitors. How soon this may be put into effect is indefinite because the roads must make contracts with cartage companies at various terminals, but Sept. 1 is set as a tentative date. The shipper will be given the choice of free pickup or may do the job himself and is paid 5 cents a 100 pounds by the railroad, thus increasing the saving.

While each of the 31 roads represented by the Western Trunk line committee will make its own drayage arrangement, the working of the plan will be uniform. Pickup and delivery service now is in effect in a number of instances, but it does not apply to shipments of less than 6,000 pounds. The new plan would include everything, down to 100 pounds.

The program will apply only to shipments within the western trunk line territory of Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, upper peninsula of Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wyoming, Utah, and Colorado.

Cost of Living in Larger Cities Is Reported Higher

The cost of living in the larger cities of the United States increased 1.8 per cent in the four months from Nov. 15, 1934, to March 15, 1935, Secretary of Labor Perkins announced yesterday. The labor department's index for the cost of goods purchased by wage and lower salaried earners for March this year was 140.3, based on 1913 as 100. This compares with 137.8 in November of last year.

Bunker Hill Country Club Requests Reorganization

The Bunker Hill Country club yesterday filed a voluntary bankruptcy petition in federal court asking for reorganization under section 77B of the amended bankruptcy law. The petition, filed by Attorney John O. Wagner, scheduled the club's assets at approximately $500,000 and the liabilities at about $300,000. The assets consist principally of land and buildings at Niles, Ill.

ASSOCIATED GAS CO. ASSAILS PRESIDENT'S UTILITY STATEMENT

New York, June 21.—(AP)—The Associated Gas and Electric company today issued a statement challenging the accuracy of some of the remarks made by President Roosevelt concerning the company's corporate structure earlier this week.

While disavowing any intention of entering into "a controversy" with the President and expressing gratification that the President had "approved the sound capitalization of operating companies of the associated system," the statement said other remarks of the President "indicate that on certain points he has been given misinformation."

The company particularly regretted, the statement said, the President's reference to "milking" in discussing the flow of earnings from subsidiaries to top holding companies and said that instead of having "33 intervening companies" as the President was reported to have said, "there are only nine such companies in the entire associated system which have any securities in the hands of public holders, and the majority of those have outstanding relatively insignificant amounts."

DEMOCRAT DECLARES GOVERNMENT GREASES SKIDS TO SOCIALISM

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 21.—[Special.]—If the government "continues to enter more and more into private business" the country may become a Socialist state before it realizes what has happened, Representative Samuel B. Pettingill, Democrat, of Indiana, told the National Association of Credit Men here today.

At present, he said, the government is engaging in more than 200 activities in which it is in direct competition with its own taxpayers.

He denounced the proposal to establish a factory at Reedsville, W. Va., as "giving jobs in one place that will put men out of work in another."

Pettingill said the government was operating the Inland Waterways corporation barge lines on the Mississippi river on money furnished partly by the tax-paying railroads, taking business away from these railroads and then lending them funds from the RFC to "keep them going."

In the TVA experiment and other big governmental enterprises costs are written down, he asserted, so that it will appear that the projects are being operated without loss. He advocated accurate cost accounting methods which, he predicted, would show the taxpayers how they were losing money.

Discussing government loans to business, the representative declared that the railroads and other industries may eventually have to be taken over, just as a bank takes over industries which owe it large sums of money and cannot pay.

"Government should be an umpire, not a player, in the economic game," he declared.

DOLLAR LOSES GROUND AGAINST FOREIGN MONIES

New York, June 21.—[Special.]—Trading in foreign exchange was dull today with leading currencies slightly higher against the dollar. French francs improved ½ point to close at 6.62 cents, placing the value of the dollar at $1.0020, compared with $1.0027 yesterday. In terms of the franc's old parity the dollar was worth 59.18 cents, compared with 59.23 cents yesterday. The franc also eased moderately against the pound, closing in London at 74.63 francs to the pound, against 74.62 yesterday.

Other gold bloc currencies rose with the franc, Dutch guilders advancing 2 points to 68.07 cents, and Swiss francs 3 points to 32.75 cents. Italian lire were up ⅛ point to 8.26½ cents.

The British pound rose ⅛ cent to $4.94, pulling Scandinavian currencies along with it, the latter gaining 4 points. Chinese silver currencies dipped in sympathy with the decline in bar silver prices in London, where the metal was quoted 3-16 penny lower at 32⅛ pence a fine ounce, equivalent to 71.38 cents. In New York the price of foreign mined metal for commercial use was unchanged at 72 cents an ounce.

Bullion brokers in London raised the price of bar gold 1 penny to 141 shillings 2½ pence a fine ounce, equivalent to $34.85. No transactions in gold were reported today by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

STORE ON RAILS ATTRACTS LARGE CHICAGO CROWD

The latest innovation in wholesale merchandising, the Merchandise Express of Marshall Field & Co., yesterday attracted scores of Chicago retailers to the Grand Central station, where the train is now on display.

Formal dedication ceremonies will be held this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, when Mrs. Grant S. Meurs, wife of the assistant general manager of Marshall Field, will christen the train with a bottle of gulf water brought from New Orleans, the southern terminus of the expedition.

The air conditioned train, with cars specially designed to display its comprehensive line of merchandise, will leave Chicago at 1:59 o'clock tomorrow morning on its first trip, during which more than twenty cities in the Mississippi valley will be visited. The traveling wholesale store will make its first stop at Peoria tomorrow.

The train was open yesterday to merchants only. The public will not be admitted to the train either in Chicago or any of the other cities to be visited.

Beverly Hills Bank to Pay Another 5% to Depositors

Edward J. Barrett, state auditor, yesterday authorized payment of a 5 per cent, or $29,605, to the depositors of the State Bank of Beverly Hills, Chicago. This is the fourth payment since the bank closed, bringing the total to 30 per cent.

UTILITIES BILL IS REPORTED AS 40 VOTES SHORT

House's Break with Roosevelt Widens.

Washington, D. C., June 21.—[Special.]—Administration leaders were reported today to lack some 40 house votes in their efforts to pass the house bill for compulsory abolition of "unnecessary" public utility holding companies. House consideration of the measure early next week was virtually assured when the interstate commerce committee nearly completed its work on the measure. Chairman Rayburn predicted it would be completed tomorrow.

The interstate commerce committee made its break with President Roosevelt even more complete today by striking from the measure the thirteen point indictment of abuses resulting from the companies' past operations.

New Declaration of Policy.

In its place the committee wrote an entirely new declaration of policy stating in effect that if and when the abuses complained of occur they would adversely affect the national public interest as well as that of investors in holding company securities and consumers of electric energy and gas.

This crowning touch to the committee's known resentment of the President's virtual demand that it follow his instructions came on the eve of formal committee approval of the entire control measure. Chairman Rayburn said only one subcommittee, that dealing with gas utility regulation, remained to be heard from. He was informed that the latter group would report tomorrow and said he would begin preparation of his report to the house tomorrow night.

In addition to striking out the section on holding company abuses, the committee voted to modify the provision placing a 2 per cent tax on dividend receipts so that the levy would apply only to dividends received by one holding company from another. Without this change the tax would have hit holding company dividends from whatever source.

Could Waive Transfer Tax.

A new provision was added pursuant to suggestions from federal trade and interstate commerce commission officials, authorizing the Securities and Exchange commission to waive the stock transfer tax in the case of particular holding companies where the exemption would tend toward:

1. The elimination of a holding company or companies.

2. The simplification of the corporate structure of a holding company system or of any company in any such system.

3. The more equitable distribution of voting power among the holders of securities of any company in a holding company system.

Another amendment limits the jurisdiction of the federal power commission over the merger, consolidation or disposal of utility facilities to a transaction involving not less than $100,000. As this section was originally revised by the subcommittee the power commission would have jurisdiction over any transaction amounting to $25,000 or more.

Executives Make Charge.

The committee of public utility executives today charged the administration with adopting the same tactics in support of the bill for which the executives had been condemned by Roosevelt.

"The government itself is using a form letter to answer the thousands of letters written to President Roosevelt by investors and consumers protesting against the bill," the committee charged.

The statement included a copy of the letter sent out by the power commission comprising extracts from the report on the bill by the senate interstate commerce committee.

CIGARET OUTPUT 2D HIGHEST ON RECORD FOR MAY

Cigaret output in May was the largest since August, 1934, and was the second highest on record for May, the bureau of internal revenue announced yesterday. The total for the month was 11,708,756,460 small cigarets, compared with 10,696,782,123 in April and 11,174,076,000 for May, 1934.

Production of large cigars during the month totaled 407,731,360, the highest for any month since last November and the best for May since 1931. The total compared with 373,672,734 in April and 380,449,937 in May, 1934.

RETAIL TRADE ENTERS SUMMER WITH GAINS WELL ABOVE 1934

New York, June 21.—[Special.]—In spite of wide swings in temperature and the handicap of excessive rains in many parts of the country, retail trade swung with more surety into its summer stride this week by the buying of graduation and school closing apparel, wedding gifts, and the acquisition of hot weather necessities, Dun & Bradstreet's, Inc., reported today.

Estimated volume of sales, based on reports from leading cities, was 5 to 15 per cent above figures for the corresponding week last year. The most striking increases were reported from the northwest, where averages of 30 to 40 per cent were general, the credit agency said.

"Strengthened by the further widening of merchandise distribution, the surprising stability of manufacturing operations and the accomplishment of major readjustments, which have been a disturbing factor in recent weeks, trade now reveals more indications of going forward," the concern declared.

Wholesale buying, the review pointed out, followed closely the upward trend of retail sales.

Senate Group Talks of 'Freer Hand' for Rails

Washington, D. C., June 21.—(AP)—The senate interstate commerce committee reported today that unless competitors of railroads are subjected to federal regulation by a central unit congress may have to give the rail carriers "a freer hand to meet that competition."

Making its formal report to the senate on the Eastman bill to place regulation of water carriers in the interstate commerce commission the committee declared:

"The transportation system of the nation is a unit. Only part of that system is regulated and such regulation as exists is uncoördinated.

Terms Situation Chaotic.

"The present situation is chaotic. It cannot continue in status quo. The railroads are seeking to be released from the comprehensive regulation to which the congress has deemed it necessary to subject them, and, unless their competitors are subjected to some regulation the congress may have to permit them a freer hand to meet that competition.

"Given a free hand to compete with water carriers, the rails could again sweep the rivers and coasts clear of water competition as they did in the past before the Mann-Elkins act with its restriction on long-and-short haul discriminations.

"The committee feels that the very existence of the interstate common carriers by water depends on a more even degree of regulation."

Third of Six Proposals.

The water carrier measure is the third of six proposals in President Roosevelt's program for controling all forms of transportation by an enlarged interstate commerce commission. The senate already has passed and sent to the house a motor bus and truck regulation measure and this is pending in the house. A second bill, already enacted, extends the office of coördinator of transportation for one year.

Chairman Wheeler [Dem., Mont.] of the senate committee indicated today that insufficient time remained this session for hearings on his bill for government ownership of the railroads. Such a move was advocated yesterday in a resolution adopted by the Railway Labor Executives association.

INCOME OF U. S. BEST THIS SPRING IN LAST 3 YEARS

Washington, D. C., June 21.—(AP)—The federal reserve board said tonight "the national income has been larger this spring than in the spring of any of the three preceding years." The statement, made in the board's monthly review for May, said increased income in industrial communities had reflected chiefly increased activity and that growth in agricultural income had been the result of higher prices and benefit payments.

While statistics were lacking on the national income the board said that for the first four months of 1935 the volume of industrial output was 7 per cent larger than a year ago, substantially larger than in either 1932 or 1933, and about the same as in 1931.

"Profits of large industrial concerns during the first quarter of 1935 exceeded those of any other period since 1930," the board said. It noted, however, that railroads and public utilities showed a recession from 1934.

The board pointed particularly to the high level of automobile production during the spring. It said assemblies through May totaled about 1,350,000 units, compared with 700,000 in the same period of 1932 and 1933, and 2,700,000 in 1929.

The board said that in April the total number employed in this country was about the same as a year ago.

U. S. MAY RETIRE CONSOLS WITH BANK DEPOSITS

Washington, D. C., June 21.—[Special.]—The maturity of about $600,000,000 of 2 per cent consols, called for redemption July 1, in connection with the retirement of national bank notes, will be met partly by the withdrawal of deposits the treasury has with the banks, according to present indications of treasury plans.

If this policy is followed, instead of bringing into use at that time the so-called "gold profit" resulting from dollar devaluation, an immediate sharp increase in the excess reserves of member banks, which at present are at an all-time peak of about $2,500,000,000, would be averted.

When the program of calling the consols and gradually withdrawing from circulation the national banks' notes was announced March 11, it was said that in retiring the bonds the treasury proposed to use the free gold resulting from the reduction in the weight of the gold dollar, and issue to the federal reserve banks an amount of gold certificates about equal to the bonds being retired.

As of June 19 the working balance, exclusive of the gold profit and seigniorage on silver, was $1,012,548,983, so that the treasury is in a strong position to employ a considerable part of it to meet the bonds, without immediate resort to heavy borrowings to finance other outlays.

REACH ACCORD ON KELLY TIRE, GOODYEAR PLAN

Baltimore, Md., June 21.—[Special.]—Agreement was reached in federal court here today on a compromise plan for the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company to take over the Kelly-Springfield Tire company.

The plan provides for payment of 80 per cent of par to noteholders, $1 cash, and two shares of Goodyear common for each five of Kelly preferred, 62 cents a share and a share of Goodyear common to each 25 Kelly shares to common stockholders, and setting aside the sum of $251,427 for all other claims.

BANKING BILL COMPROMISE IS REPORTED NEAR

'Central Bank' Plan May Be Dropped.

Washington, D. C., June 21.—[Special.]—Prospects for passage of the omnibus banking bill at this session of congress were regarded as considerably enhanced today as reports went the rounds at the capitol of a compromise which would have at least the form of the administration's banking program.

Capitol authorities said that a definite break might be expected soon in the deadlock which has held the bill in the Glass subcommittee in the senate for several weeks. They intimated that an agreement had virtually been reached whereby the measure would be kept intact but reworded to rid it of much of its controversial matter, particularly provisions found in title II.

May Drop Central Bank Plan.

One of the reports, which subcommittee members would neither confirm nor deny, was that much of the so-called "central bank" matter in title II would be withdrawn entirely and possibly worked into another measure to be submitted early in the next session.

In an attempt to force the hand of the senate subcommittee and at least obtain a report on the bill without further delay, the attitude of the administration leaders, it is understood, has been that unless the deadlock were broken every effort would be made to prevent the house from joining in the adoption of a joint resolution to extend the temporary fund features of the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation after July 1.

Permanent Insurance Involved.

Unless the banking bill is enacted, or such a joint resolution adopted, the so-called permanent fund of the Insurance corporation, providing for insurance of deposits on an expanded scale and unlimited assessment on bank members of the corporation if necessary to meet losses incident to bank failures, will become effective on July 1.

With the deadline drawing near there have been reports that many state member banks may withdraw from membership in the federal reserve system which compels them to become members also of the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation if the rules of the permanent fund, to which a great majority of the banks are opposed, become effective.

The administration leaders in the senate and house favor continuing the temporary fund, which insures individual deposits only up to $5,000, and this was written into the banking bill of 1935 with approval of the White House and the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation.

Outcome Is Debatable.

To what extent, therefore, any threat will be carried out to prevent its continuation unless critics of Title II, of the bill agreed to adoption of the whole measure in the present session, appears debatable, particularly in view of the confusion that the uncertainty already has created.

It is probable, however, that the administration leaders in the house will stand firmly against any move to split up the bill so as to permit that part covering deposit insurance to be adopted as a separate act. But also the chances are that if an agreement can be reached to report out the bill on a basis which promises enactment during the current session, opposition to a joint resolution continuing the temporary deposit fund until the bill is adopted will be withdrawn.

Some backers of the bill insist that it would be feasible to obtain enactment by July 1, but as any measure reported by the senate committee is sure to vary in many respects from the house bill as to extending the central banking powers of the federal reserve board, this now appeared extremely improbable.

Chief Point of Controversy.

The chief point of controversy in the bill has had to do with the vast powers that the measure in its original form would vest in the federal reserve board in its control over open market operations. Various compromises have been offered as to the make-up of a cntral committee which would exercise this control, and administration leaders are now understood to be prepared to go far in compromising on this feature.

They are said to be ready to accept any of several suggested forms in which governors of the federal reserve banks would have a powerful influence in the so-called open market committee.

3 New York Stock Seats Sold; Last Up $1,000

New York, June 21.—[Special.]—The New York Stock exchange announced today that arrangements had been made for the sale of three memberships in the exchange, one at $99,000, another at $104,000, and the third at $105,000. The last price represents an increase of $1,000 over the price established May 16, when a seat sold at $104,000.

C. & E. I. PLANS UNACCEPTABLE, JONES ASSERTS

Milwaukee Line Strives for Compromise.

Washington, D. C., June 21.—(AP)—Representatives of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad were informed by Chairman Jones of the Reconstruction Finance corporation today that neither their plan for getting the road out of bankruptcy nor the plan of security holders was acceptable to the corporation.

The railroad representatives, headed by Kenneth D. Steere of Chicago, and Everett S. Ballard, an attorney for the trustee, sought to reduce fixed charges on the road to $550,000 a year chiefly by reducing interest rates on debts.

Owes Three Issues.

The road owes $2,700,000 of 6 per cent bonds which must be paid ahead of all others. These would be reduced to 4 per cent under the plan presented by the trustees. The road owes the RFC approximately $7,000,000 and it was proposed to give the corporation 4 per cent bonds. Under the proposal of the bondholders, made nearly a year ago, the corporation would be given income bonds instead of fixed interest bonds.

An issue of $30,000,000 also is due. This would be continued at a smaller interest rate.

Jones said the corporation would be called upon to put up about $8,000,000 additional for rehabilitation and other moves in connection with the reorganization.

Milwaukee Compromise Sought.

New York, June 21.—[Special.]—H. A. Scandrett, president of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad, conferred by telephone with insurance and savings bank officials today to effect a compromise on the chief point of dissension in a reorganization for the line by July 1.

Until today, the Milwaukee management and the Reconstruction Finance corporation had demanded that one-third the interest on the company's $106,395,000 of 5 per cent interest mortgage bonds be made contingent for ten years, while the institutional investors had asked the period be limited to five years. Hope was expressed in official circles that the number of years might be fixed at some total in between.

The Milwaukee officials may resume conferences with the investors early next week, although it was said that the plan might be ratified without another meeting.

Western Pacific Details.

Further light on the proposed reorganization of the Western Pacific Railway company was thrown on the plan today by Thomas M. Schumacher, chairman of the executive committee. He said he believed differences of conflicting interests soon would be smoothed out and that the plan would be submitted to security holders soon.

The first mortgage bonds, Schumacher said, would mature in about thirty years and the income bonds in not less than fifty years. The junior liens would extend for a longer maturity and would not be cumulative.

Series B income bonds would be convertible into thirty shares of new common for each $1,000 of bonds. There is no sinking fund on the fixed interest debt, although a ½ per cent cumulative sinking fund will be set up for series A income bonds. Also an interest fund would be set up into which would be paid 10 per cent of net earnings available for common stock until the fund equals one year's interest on fixed and contingent debt.

Stock Exchange Brokers Asked to Report on Trades

New York, June 21.—[Special.]—Members of the New York Stock exchange have been asked by the exchange, at the request of the securities and exchange commission, to report weekly, until further notice, their total volume of purchases and sales of listed stocks as principals, omitting transactions effected as brokers for others. They have been also asked to report weekly the total of full lot transactions in twenty representative stocks for the accounts of members, firms and partners.

SHORT SCARE SENDS WHEAT UP HALF CENT

Corn Declines as Spreads Are Unwound.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

A mild short scare developed in the wheat pit on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday that led to a moderate upturn in prices. Two commission houses were reported to have bought approximately a million bushels of wheat in the last hour of trading which reputedly represented short covering. This buying caused other traders to retreat from their short positions in the market, bringing about a net advance of about half a cent a bushel in prices.

The September wheat future, which now has the largest open interest, closed at 81½ cents a bushel, up ½ cent. The market has not yet felt the pressure of harvest hedging sales because of delay in harvesting operations.

Attribute Rise to Shorts.

The advance yesterday and Tuesday on the eve of this seasonal selling can be attributed almost entirely to professional short buying. The buoyancy of the stock market and reports of more rains in some sections of the southwest provided a backdrop for yesterday's advance.

At its best price of 82 cents a bushel September wheat sold 3 cents a bushel over the preceding day's low point. Closing quotations on the September deliveries, with comparative quotations, were:

	Yester-day.	Thurs-day.	Week ago.
Wheat	.81½	.81	.80¾
Corn	.75¾	.76½	.73¾
Oats	.33¼	.33¾	.32⅛
Rye	.47¾	.47¾	.46¾

While wheat advanced, the corn market declined. In the corn pit the July and September futures were quoted nearly a cent a bushel under Thursday's prices when the market closed.

Speculators Unwind Spreads.

Brokers reported that speculators continued to unwind their spread operations between the two markets. Earlier there was considerable selling of wheat against purchases of corn. As these commitments are retired wheat is given buying support with corresponding pressure on corn.

The trend of the market recently has made such speculative operations attractive and encouraged traders to take their profits.

The market outlook has not changed materially in the last few days. The weather has not been favorable in the southwest. This factor may delay the movement of new wheat and even affect the quality of grain harvested but will not materially change the size of the crop unless it persists indefinitly, which seems unlikely.

Wheat prices advanced moderately yesterday in Liverpool. Stocks of wheat in Europe are dwindling because of the comparatively small shipments from the southern hemisphere and Canada. This is but a temporary situation, however, as new crop European wheat will soon be available.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP)—COTTON GOODS—Ruled quiet today with some second hand offerings in print cloth markets bought in small lots at price concessions of ⅛ of a cent a yard. Government bids have been postponed for at least 10 days preparatory to arranging plans for compliance with NRA rules wherever textile contracts are awarded. Silk goods were quiet and firm. Trade in worsted dress goods for fall slowed up again on threats of a strike of garment workers. Rayon were firm with sales moderate. Burlaps were steady and quiet.

Moler Privately Trained Beauty Culture Students

DO NOT

Work on each other for practice, nor depend upon uncertain public.

They do not waste a minute or make a false move.

They are not herded in droves with hit or miss instructions.

They do not elbow in crowded lines or grope in uncertainty.

BUT DO

Have a Private teacher—individual booths, and live models, paid by us, to work upon.

They earn twice the cost of learning in time saved, living expense and in every way economize.

This profession by joining the Beauty Culture department of the Barbers, thus come under the new labor law that guarantees prices and wages.

Sidesten the old job complex by seeing MOLER at once. Open every day and evening.

"Have a Lovely Position" . . .

Says DeLEE Graduate.

"Am writing to tell you what a lovely position I have," says Helen Wagner.

"Thanks so much for the wonderful position. I enjoy the work and the shop is so nice," says Adele Humbert. "Am getting along wonderfully well in my position," writes Lucille Belan.

These are excerpts from a few of the many fine letters on file from DeLEE graduates, telling how happy they are in their work. Why don't YOU learn beauty culture at DeLEE and qualify yourself for one of these good paying, pleasant positions. At DeLEE you will receive individual instruction under the personal direction of Mme. Louise, internationally famous beauty expert. You will learn easily, quickly and thoroughly. Visit DeLEE today. You'll be delighted with the school, and pleasantly surprised to learn how reasonable the tuition fees are.

IMPORTANT!

The success of this great sale has been so phenomenal that over 300 cars were sold. But—due to the tremendous public demand—this sensational clearance is continued for a few days. Over 300 cars were "pulled in" from Studebaker Branches. Added to the many trade-ins" taken in during the past week, there are now over 450 cars to choose from. Hurry! And make the saving of a lifetime!

TRADE YOUR OLD CAR IN ON LATE MODELS.

'TIS NO SECRET —ANSWER—

We don't believe in sales—but we are LOADED WITH CARS and we think it is the only sensible thing to do—to cut prices and sell them out now. THIS IS NOT AN AUCTION SALE OR TRICK SALE, or one of those 99c sales or $10 down payment sales—but bona fide Sale of Automobiles where the prices have been drastically reduced—backed by Studebaker's 85 year reputation for fair dealing — and by Studebaker's famous nationally advertised pledge.

$25 SECURES YOUR CHOICE YOUR OLD CAR IN TRADE
